Army Patrols Flood-Emptied Ghost Towns

Times News Services

WINNIPEG — The Red River Valley south of here was turning into a ghost town alley today as residents fled and military personnel worked desperately to reinforce dikes already strained by the rampaging river.

A 400-man military battalion moved into the communities of Emerson, St. Jean, Morris and Ste. Adolphe to maintain dikes and protect homes from looters. No looting incidents were reported.

Military and RCMP personnel were patrolling these and other temporary ghost towns created by the evacuation to ensure everyone made it to safe ground.

The military is equipped with six 12-passenger twin Huey helicopters, five two-passenger Kiowa helicopters, one 48-passenger Chinook helicopter, 17 armored personnel carriers and a number of rubber assault boats.

There was also a scramble to rescue as much as possible of the grain crop stored on farms in the threatened area. Officials estimated crop losses could run into millions of dollars, quite apart from the possibly disastrous losses from delays in this year's seeding.

There was an item of good news for Manitobans who have not yet completed their individual income tax returns. Revenue Canada has extended the filing deadline by two weeks to May 15.

Diking and sandbagging operations are far from complete: all affected communities were raising their dikes another two feet in reponse to ever-rising peak flood predictions.

Hundreds of thousands of sand bags were arriving daily, including one shipment of 75,000 from North Carolina.

Meanwhile, skies were clear — marred only by an occasional snowsquall — as the waters continued their inexorable rise, cutting off the communities from highway travel and increasing concerns as to whether dikes would be high enough to withstand the crest when it arrives next week.

The exodus of valley residents, ordered Wednesday by the provincial government, was reluctant but orderly as evacuees moved to safety ahead of the swelling Red River.

Evacuation headquarters in Winnipeg — where a number of emergency shelters have been set up — reported about one-fifth of the estimated 10,000 persons to be evacuated had registered their pullout plans to local shelters by late Thursday, but that many persons had left their homes without notifying them.

In addition, more than 3,000 Winnipeg residents have offered home, cottages or other assistance, although many flood victims have been able to make their own arrangements with family or friends.

In some cases, uniformed officers had to explain the urgency of the situation to veterans of a half-dozen floods in the past 40 years who were determined to see it through.

"People just didn't understand," said Richard Lavergne, Emergency Measures Organization representative at Ste. Agathe.

The flood threat on the Souris River near Estevan, Sask., continued to ease today, but it was a different story in northern Ontario, where hundreds have been evacuated from their homes.

The hardest-hit area so far has been Field Township, some 40 kilometres northwest of North Bay, where 200 residents were evacuated Thursday.

United Way To Beat Taxman, Heirs

CALGARY (CP) — A 78-year-old Calgary widower has dodged hungry taxmen and heirs by donating almost $40,000 of his life savings to the United Way.

The man, who requested anonymity to protect the feelings of relatives who may be anticipating large inheritances, made the $37,840 gift on condition it be used to help the handicapped and needy of Calgary.

"I'd only have them (relatives) on my back if I didn't donate it," the retired city worker said Thursday.

"If I gave it to them they'd just throw it to the wind . . . I wanted to give it to people who need it most."

There were other advantages as well.

"I have to pay income taxes and this will cut them by half. It's one way of making sure of the government not getting it."

Record Auto Profits

Times News Services

General Motors Corp. profits rose 45 per cent to $1.26 billion, or $4.39 a share, and Ford's rose 28 per cent to $595 million, or $4.97 per share, the two companies said Thursday.

GM's sales rose 20 per cent to $17.9 billion and Ford's rose 26 per cent to $12.6 billion. Both figures are records.

In physical volume, GM's sales rose 5.8 per cent to 2.47 million vehicles and Ford's rose 11 per cent to 1.8 million.

Ford said its profit improvement comes from overseas, particularly from "higher unit sales and cost efficiencies" in Europe and Latin America.

Meanwhile, Mobil Corp., the second largest U.S. oil company, has reported an 81-per-cent increase in first quarter profits, continuing a series of earnings reports showing companies benefiting from increased demand and higher prices on world oil markets.

Mobil's earnings rose to $437 million in the first three months of this year, compared with $241 million in the first quarter last year.

Sun Co., Inc., the 11th largest U.S. oil company, reported on Thursday a 43-per-cent gain in first quarter earnings to $120.3 million, compared with $84.3 million in the same quarter last year.

In a related debelopment, President Jimmy Carter's advisers are offering little hope that U.S. consumers have seen the end to surging inflation.

"We can still expect months of bad news on the economy," especially on the inflation front, White House press secretary Jody Powell said Thursday after the labor department reported a one-per-cent increase in consumer prices during March.

Despite continuing sharp increases in prices, Powell insisted the administration will stick to its anti-inflation policies which include voluntary wage and price guidelines.

Homemaker Pensions?

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau promised today a re-elected Liberal government would seek to include 4.7 million homemakers — mostly women — in the Canada Pension Plan. (For other federal election stories see pages 18 to 21).

He told a Toronto business group that the Liberals are "committed to providing adequate retirement income to homemakers, an essential category of workers who are not presently considered part of the labor force."

Conservative Leader Joe Clark made a similar promise today in Pickering, near Toronto, in answer to a question from a student, but didn't elaborate.

Trudeau said he would convene a national conference on pensions in the fall and would ask provinces, labor, business and pensioner groups to take part.

He also proposed other pension reforms including portability of private pensions, protection from inflation, greater choice of retirement age, and better access to pension plans.

Trudeau aides said the changes would allow housewives to make voluntary contributions. Currently, the Canada Pension Plan does provide some benefits for widowed or separated spouses while most private pension programs do not.

Maggie T. Scuppered 'Patch-Up'

TORONTO (UPC) — Margaret Trudeau last year refused an offer by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau to quit politics so the two could be reconciled, CTV interviewer Henry Champ said Thursday.

Champ said the Trudeaus tried a four-day reconciliation attempt last November, but Mrs. Trudeau changed her mind only hours before Trudeau was to announce he was leaving politics.

"She realized she could not maintain fidelity and turn her back on her new life."

Champ said Mrs. Trudeau told him about the reconciliation attempt during interviews taped in February. The interviews were never aired because the publishers of Mrs. Trudeau's autobiography Beyond Reason obtained an injunction against it, claiming it would hurt their book sales.

The interviewer says in the coming issue of trade magazine Quill and Quire that Trudeau was prepared to quit politics, had already hired architects to design a "dream house" in the country and planned to practise law.

Charge Follows Chase

A 24-year-old man has been charged with criminal negligence after his car jumped a concrete meridian in the 700-block Finlayson, clipped a city police motorcyclist, and lead the officer on a short but erratic high speed chase.

Constable Dan Mercer, 28, emerged somewhat shaken but unscathed.

Mercer was travelling in the 700-block Finlayson at about 10:15 p.m. Thursday when a car approaching from the opposite direction struck the median and careened onto his side of the road, police said today.

Mercer swung his bike into the curb lane and the driver of the car, fighting to avoid a collision, drove onto the sidewalk, sideswiping the motorcycle's crash bars as he went past.

The car then sped off, entered a one-way exit lane at the Mayfair Shopping Centre, raced through the parking lot, came out onto Blanshard, and crossed over the concrete median twice more.

The car spluttered to a stop at Topaz, a block away, where its transmission and steering fell apart.

The spokesman said the suspect, who was expected to appear in provincial court later in the day, has also been charged with driving while his licence is under suspension.

NDP, Socred Slates Filled

Only the NDP and Social Credit have full slates of candidates in the May 10 provincial election and the number of hopefuls has dropped sharply, mainly due to the provincial Liberal party's dwindling fortunes.

At the close of nominations Thursday there were 177 persons registered as candidates, down from 221 in the last election in 1975.

Both Social Credit, led by Premier Bill Bennett, and the NDP, headed by former premier Dave Barrett, will run a full complement of candidates for the provincial legislature's 57 seats.

The Conservatives, trying to establish themselves as a force on the provincial scene, will field 37, despite allegations by leader Vic Stephens that the federal party is not giving him help.

The Conservatives, who captured only one seat in 1975 and who still held it at the dissolution of the legislature April 3, ran 29 candidates in 1975.

But the Liberals, who ran 49 candidates in the 1975 election with success in only one seat, are offering only five this time — all of them in Vancouver-area ridings which were once their power base.

In addition, there are 10 independents, seven Communists and four members of the fringe leftist North American Labor Party looking for votes.

Death Plotted by Radiation

Times News Services

CHERBOURG — Radioactive wastes have been found under the driver's seat of a French nuclear executive's car in what appears to be the first known attempt at assassination by radiation.

Police said Guy Busin, 39, was examined thoroughly after the discovery. No ill effects except pervasive fatigue were detected but Busin, already in hospital for treatment of a back ailment suffered in an accident last year, remains under observation.

On March 21 he decided to salvage the seats from his wrecked vehicle, and found three rings, used for moving radioactive rods, hidden in the seats between the padding and the springs.

The rings were still emitting radiation registering 10 rads an hour. The accepted upper limit of radioactive exposure for technicians is about five rads a year.

Murder by radioactivity has been the subject of scientific speculation and at least one mystery novel. But Busin appears to be the first victim of a genuine attempt.

He said the discs must have been placed there since the last time he looked under the seats, during his vacation last August.

Busin's wife said today "my husband is a bear for work, highly appreciated by his bosses and feared by his subordinates. But he has never harmed anybody."

The only apparent effect of the radiation was that her husband had been very tired in recent months, she added.

Busin, who oversees 75 employees, told police he does not believe he has any enemies.

Several months ago Busin's car was sabotaged in a more humdrum manner. Somebody put sugar in the gas tank and acid in the crank case.

Standings at dissolution of the legislature, then with 55 seats in 48 ridings, were: Social Credit, 34; NDP, 18; Conservatives, one and vacant, two. Social Credit and the Liberals lost one member each during the term.

This election, there are 57 seats up for grabs in 50 ridings. The Victoria and six Vancouver-area ridings have two seats each.

Under redistribution, two ridings — Revelstoke-Slocan and Vancouver-Burrard — disappeared, with a second seat added in Surrey and a new constituency created as Prince George North.

Forty-seven of the candidates sat in the last legislature.

In 15 of the ridings, including two-member Vancouver-Little Mountain, Social Credit and the NDP are the only competitors.

Bennett is running again in Okanagan South, the riding he won in 1975 by nearly 7,000 votes over NDP rival Hugh Dendy. Dendy is trying again in the riding which has been a Social Credit fortress since it was held by W. A. C. Bennett, B.C.'s premier from 1952 to 1972, and father of the current premier.

Bennett also is facing competition from Arthur Ernest Gardner, a Conservative.

Barrett, with his running mate and former attorney-general Alex Macdonald, will be seeking re-election in NDP stronghold Vancouver East. He faces competition in the double riding from two Social Crediters, two Conservatives and a member of the North American Labor Party.

One of the Social Credit candidates is Helen Boyce, a Vancouver alderman.

George Kerster, the Social Crediter who vanquished Barrett in 1975 in what was then Coquitlam riding, faces competition from former NDP human resources minister Norm Levi, who moved into the new Maillardville-Coquitlam riding from his redistributed constituency of Vancouver-Burrard.

After his defeat in Coquitlam, Barrett moved into Vancouver East to win handily by nearly 13,000 votes in a byelection.

Stephens will be running in Oak Bay-Gordon Head, a Victoria-area riding he won in a byelection last year.

New Liberal leader Jev Tothill will be seeking election in North Vancouver-Seymour, but faces stiff competition there from three rivals.

His chief opponent will be Jack Davis, the former Social Credit cabinet minister who resigned from the legislature after being convicted of fraud for cashing government-paid first-class air tickets for economy fares and keeping the difference.

Tothill's other opponents are Joy Langan for the NDP and Joy Gilmore for the Conservatives.

After the 1972 election, the party held five seats, but Pat McGeer, Garde Gardom and Allan Williams all deserted the fold for Social Credit. They were all rewarded with cabinet posts after Bennett became premier and are running again in this election.

Stuart Leggatt, MP for New Westminster in the last Parliament, is running in Coquitlam-Moody, while Frank Howard, MP for Skeena for 18 years, is tackling Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford in the provincial Skeena riding.

In Vancouver-Little Mountain, Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy and Finance Minister Evan Wolfe are engaged in a straight two-party fight with NDP hopefuls Michael Harcourt and Jean Swanson.

Rosemary Brown, who was a top contender for the federal NDP leadership when Ed Broadbent was chosen party chief, is running in Burnaby-Edmonds. She was one of two members for redistributed Vancouver-Burrard.

The race in Shuswap-Revelstoke pits two members of the last legislature, NDP House leader Bill King and Social Crediter Len Bawtree, against each other, while Frank Calder, a hereditary Nishga Indian chief, is running again in Atlin, a riding he has held since 1949, except for a three-year span in the political wilderness.

Calder was a member of the NDP and for a time a minister without portfolio in Barrett's cabinet, but defected to Social Credit.

Mall Plan Shelved

A proposal that would see the Government Street mall closed to traffic for a total of three weeks this summer has been put on the shelf temporarily to allow objecting merchants a chance to have their say.

Ald. Bill McElroy withdrew his proposal at a council meeting Thursday night saying that he felt obligated to hear from the merchants on the matter.

McElroy made the proposal last week and a few days later city hall received a 110-name petition from merchants opposed to the scheme.

"Some of the objections lead me to believe the proposal is not understood," said McElroy.

He said McElroy could use some extra time to meet with merchants and other groups involved before bringing his plan back to council.

McElroy wants to close off the mall from May 18 to May 28 and again from July 16 to July 30.

Prior to and during the second closure city hall staff would do a traffic and pedestrian analysis, to determine if there was any noticeable change in pedestrian and shopper patterns in the experimental period.

N-Plant Decision Stalled

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission postponed for a second time Thursday a decision on whether to shut down four operating nuclear power plants built by the same firm that constructed Three Mile Island II.

Staff members were meeting continually with utility executives, NRC chairman Joseph Hendrie told a packed and expectant hearing room, and had asked for more time to study the executives' proposals. Staff chiefs had reported Wednesday that safety demanded the closure of the Rancho Seco plant of the Sacramento Municipal Utility District in California and Oconee I, II and III in South Carolina, owned by Duke Power Co. of Charlotte.

Safety, however, was the topic of the day as the emergency preparedness staff explained that the NRC has essentially no role in the operation of state and local accident planning other than to be kept informed.

Licences for plants may be issued without any state or local evacuation or emergency plan, and in fact only 11 states have plans that comply with NRC guidelines, reported Harold Collins, assistant director of state preparedness programs.

"We just look for evidence of obvious incapability," he said. "There is no role spelled out for the NRC itself in any of these plans, either at the staff or the commission level." None of the plans set any time limit in which anyone must be notified of accidents, either Collins said.

Seattle Has Gas

Gas stations in the U.S. northwest are restricting service because of supply shortages but motorists will have no serious problems getting gas, according to the American Automobile Association in Seattle.

A spokesman for the AAA said there is no gas rationing anywhere in the U.S.

However, about 75 per cent of the service stations in the northwest are closed on Sundays and most are also closing earlier in the evenings, some by 5 p.m.

There are no limits on gasoline purchases, nor are there any lineups at the pumps.

Drivers Lucky Police Say

Two persons escaped with minor injuries after their cars were demolished in separate single-car crashes on Pat Bay Highway early today.

David Smith, 33, of 550 Ledsham, emerged with nothing more than minor head cuts after his car sailed off an off-ramp at Quadra, flipped over and rolled down an embankment.

In the other accident, Darlene Mae Gardiner, 26, of 21 Gorge East, received bruises and a shaking-up when her car hit a lamp standard at Vanalman, flipped completely over and spun into a ditch.

Both were taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where they were treated and released.

A Saanich police spokesman said the two are lucky to be alive.

Air Canada Joins Surcharge Brigade

TORONTO (CP) — Air Canada has introduced a fuel surcharge on its charter-class international flights, joining three other major airlines which have added the additional charge for international charter-class flights during the last week.

However, spokesmen for Air Canada, CP Air, Wardair and British Airways said Thursday that the fuel surcharge, about $25 each for all airlines, will not apply to passengers who have already purchased tickets.

Earlier, Wardair and CP Air had announced that the surcharge would be tacked onto international tickets already purchased.

All airline surcharges are subject to government approval and do not apply to domestic routes.

An Air Canada spokesman said its surcharge, which will average about $25 for charter-class fares depending on destination, was approved Thursday on regularly-scheduled runs overseas, effective May 1.

Brock Stewart said the fuel surcharge on charter-class fares is effective May 4 for flights after May 18. Passengers already holding tickets for flights after May 18 or who buy their tickets before the May 4 deadline do not pay the surcharge.

Wardair had announced a $25-fuel surcharge last week for unscheduled charter flights beginning May 18 and had said that customers who had already bought tickets would be billed for the extra amount.

But a Wardair spokesman said Thursday the company now will not bill persons who have paid in full before May 1.

On Wednesday, both British Airways and CP Air announced their version of the fuel surcharge.

CP Air added a $25 surcharge to unscheduled charter fares between eastern Canada and Britain and a $35 surcharge on the same flights originating in Vancouver.

CP Air, which originally intended to bill customers who had already bought tickets, said Thursday it would not apply the surcharge to tickets bought before May 5.

British Airways also announced Wednesday it will tack an additional $25 onto its charter-class fare for flights after June 1 but the surchage will not apply to customers buying tickets before May 1.

Mill Confirms Spill

MACKENZIE (CP) — Officials of the British Columbia Forest Products mill confirmed Thursday that about six million gallons of caustic chemicals spilled into Williston Lake on April 16.

Mill manager Bill Clark said the spill consisted of a combination of untreated effluent made up of caustic soda, wood waste and sodium sulphide.

He said the material broke through an earth dike around a small holding tank and poured down an embankment onto the ice of the lake.

Clark said the dike has repaired, the situation studied and operating procedures upgraded.

A pollution control branch spokesman in Prince George said the company has been asked for a full report which will go to Victoria.

Disaster Missed by Inches In Flaming Jet Horror

LEALHOLM, England (Reuter) — Schoolchildren watched horrified today as an U.S. Phantom jet fighter swooped in a ball of flame past their school in this North Yorkshire village and crashed nearby.

Both crewwmen died in the crash. No civilians were hurt.

Headmistress Audrey Rayment told how the children watched and gasped as the plane swooped 30 metres from the school at rooftop level.

Eyewitnesses said the plane exploded in the sky and then plummeted towards the village.

Miss Rayment said: "We missed disaster by inches. We were in the school when the children gasped and looked out of the window. The plane swooped past with flames and smoke pouring from it. Then we heard the sickening bang. We just prayed it had not smashed into the row of houses."

Pat Bertram, secretary at the 55-pupil village school, said: "My reaction was one of sheer horror.

"I understand the pilot was wrestling with the plane to stop it hitting us — he did not eject when he could have.

"If that is right, we owe a lot to him in Lealholm."

Ten-year-old Alastair Jackson, who was sitting by a school window, said: "We all know we are very lucky because it only needed to be a little bit closer and it would have crashed into us."

Bernard Hodgson, who witnessed the crash, said the plane careened along the ground, smashing down stone walls and a telegraph pole. It slewed across a road before the wreckage came to rest on the edge of a farmyard not far from the village railway station.

Finding Son Alive Nearly Killed Them

Karen Delahanty and her mother

In Columbus, Ohio, James and Maxine Blankenship had finished calling relatives with the bad news and were starting to think about funeral arrangements. Then the door opened, and in walked the son they thought was dead. "It shocked us to death when he came walking in," Mrs. Blankenship said. "I'm still numb." It all began when Kenneth Blankenship, 23, loaned his motorcycle to John Snyder, 22, also of Columbus. Snyder was riding alone when he crashed into a parked car and was killed. There was no identification on the body; so deputies, after tracking down the licence number and registration, told Mr. and Mrs.Blankenship that their son had died. Then, three hours later, Kenneth returned home. He had been out looking for Snyder and the bike, Mrs. Blankenship said, and was unaware his parents thought he had been killed.

Another happy mother is Lorraine Delhanty whose 23-year-old daughter Karen regained consciousness Thursday in New Britain, Conn., and asked, "How long have I been sleeping?" The reply: "A year." Miss Delahanty spent that year in a coma — a year in which doctors first said she would not survive, then predicted she would not awaken.

A man described as "a wizard of words" was honored Thursday at the spring convocation of Huron College at the University of Western Ontario, in London, Ont. Malcolm Muggeridge, communicator, pundit and humorist was conferred with a Doctor of Divinity degree.

Elsewhere on the honors list, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin has proposed to the Norwegian parliament that it award the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize to U.S. President Jimmy Carter for his role in achieving the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty. Begin informed Carter of his move in a letter sent to Washington Thursday.

The Lee Marvin "palimony" trial is over, but the reverberations still are being registered in Hollywood, and Rod Steiger is the latest to be rattled. He lived with estranged wife Sherry for four years before he married her — then made her sign a prenuptial agreement, letting him off the hook on a property split in the event of divorce. But Thursday, Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Robert Fainer ruled her "Marvin rights" aren't affected by that. Presumably, even if Steiger is home free for the married years, he'll still be vulnerable to live-in lawsuit. Meanwhile, her attorney — Marvin Mitchelson, naturally — is challenging the agreement on grounds it was coerced.

Not in court yet but under investigation is lawyer Mark Lane, being probed by the Los Angeles County district attorney's office for possible theft of $7,500 from members of the Peoples Temple cult. A spokesman for the district attorney confirmed the investigation Thursday. Lane could not be reached for comment and district attorney spokesman Al Albergate also said his office had not been able to reach Lane. "I can confirm we do have an investigation into the allegation that Mr. Lane took $7,500 from people closely connected to the People's Temple," Albergate said.

The search for ancestral roots isn't the exclusive preserve of author Alex Haley. In their own way, Natalie Wood and Peter Ustinov are on the same trail. They're in Moscow, working on a documentary about the city's Hermitage Museum for NBC-TV. Ustinov's great uncle, Alexander Nicolai Benois, was curator of the museum in the 1920s, and both of Miss Wood's parents were born in Russia. She was Natasha Gurdin before she anglicized her name for the marquee.

Out if the hospital is Billy Carter, reportedly looking for rest and privacy. Neither the Long Beach Naval Regional Medical Centre nor Carter spokesmen would disclose Billy's whereabouts Thursday.

Finally, a 1960 Lincoln Continental once owned by singer Elvis Presley has been sold for more than $200,000, says its former owner. Mike Moon of Buena Vista, Ga., bought the car a year ago in Memphis. He said Thursday he sold it to Larry McClure of Dillard, Ga., for "between $200,000 and $300,000."

Sacre Bleu! Enough To Drive A Man To Drink

DIJON, France (AP) — French authorities formally opened a judicial investigation Thursday into allegations that a Burgundy wine vintner shipped more than 50,000 bottles of ordinary wine to the United States under prestigious labels.

The judicial inquiry, to be carried out under a Dijon magistrate, followed allegations from the French service for the control of wines and liquors against vintner Bernard-Noel Grivelet.

The wine scandal is alleged to involve about $1 million worth of wine, shipped under such prestigious labels as Chambolle-Musigny, Morey-Saint-Denis and Chambertin Clos de Beze.

Top quality Burgundy wines such as these sell for about $23 a bottle. Ordinary wine goes for between 70 cents and $1.16.

The French wine control service alleged the wines in question were a mixture of several lower grade wines that were not entitled to carry the label "appellation d'origine controlee," which certifies wine made from a single vintage of grape.

To protect the good name of French wines, the Institute National des Appellations d'Origine announced Thursday it will join the case against Grivelet.

Leaded Gas Fraud Charge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the first case of its kind, the Environmental Protection Agency Thursday issued civil complaints against Texaco Inc., a distributor and 11 service stations for allegedly selling leaded gasoline as unleaded.

The agency asked for $159,000 in civil penalties from the parties involved, in what it called the "most serious instance of fuel switching ever prosecuted by EPA."

Named in the complaints are Texaco Inc., Houston; Calleri Oil Co., San Leandro, Calif.; and 11 Texaco stations in Alameda County, Calif.

The agency has estimated that as many as 10 per cent of the cars that should be using unleaded gas are actually running on leaded fuel, in part because of the higher prices of unleaded.

"However, today's action is the first major case where motorists who were willing to pay the higher price of unleaded were actually being sold leaded," it said.

An EPA spokesman said profit, not shortage, was the apparent motive for the alleged fraud, since leaded gasoline is cheaper and more money can be made if it is sold for unleaded prices.

Strangely shy

For people who profess a willingness to participate in a public debate of the issues by the party leaders in the provincial election campaign, Premier Bill Bennett and NDP leader Dave Barrett are strangely shy whenever anyone actually mentions a time and a place.

Bennett's initial challenge to debate the opposition leader — only if he brought along his former resources minister and the head of the B.C. Federation of Labor — was clever. Tying his opponent to the top labor boss in the province and the former NDP politician most feared in the business world was good for a bit of publicity early in the campaign, but it was a challenge that he knew Barrett would never accept. It was designed to be refused, a painless political gambit.

Now he has pointed the finger at the NDP leader for skipping a church-sponsored leaders' forum in Vancouver. He said he was running away from a confrontation at the last minute.

"Why did they [the NDP] wait until the last minute to tell these poor people he wouldn't be there? We've had this invitation for weeks and accepted any date they wanted and changed our schedule to do it. Finally his bluff was called. He is great on challenges — until he has to show up," said the premier, who added that he intended to participate in the forum.

But shortly after he made these remarks, the premier climbed aboard his campaign bus and then an aide told reporters the premier was also pulling out of the Vancouver forum. Oh.

For his part, Barrett talked of the premier's "childish behavior." But why wouldn't he appear on the same platform with the premier? He had a prior commitment. It's hard to believe that an arrangement couldn't have been made, if he really wanted to debate Bennett.

The forum sponsored by the ultra-conservative Greater Vancouver Christian Churches Association may not have been the ideal setting for a left-wing socialist politician to state his views, but trenchant questioning and informed, probing criticism are the essence of debate. And any politician who can't turn a loaded question around to discuss whatever he wanted to in the first place should turn in his party membership card.

There is still time to arrange a debate between the leaders. As Barrett noted, he and the premier appear on a Vancouver television show on consecutive days in the last week of the campaign, and would be simple enough combine their appearances and let the cameras roll for an hour or two.

Some party officials on both sides have been saying that the legislature is the proper forum for debate, but except for the brief nine-day sitting last month it's been almost a year since Bennett and Barrett appeared in the legislature. Some of the issues in the election campaign were not around then, and Barrett kept a very low profile most of the time.

A debate between the leaders is no luxury the voters can readily dispense with. It is a necessary prelude to making an informed decision on May 10.

Binding on whom?

Victoria city council has displayed good sense in agreeing to accept the terms of an arbitrated settlement with its police force. After the police union presented its case for arbitration last night, council averted a strike threat by the police by saying it would be bound by the settlement handed down by an arbitrator.

However, the fact that the union and council had to go through the whole procedure points up an anomaly in existing law that should be rectified as quickly as possible.

The problem is this: the police union negotiates with the police board, a group appointed in part by the provincial government and so not directly responsible to city council. Under the provincial Essential Services Act, a police union may apply unilaterally for arbitration, and that arbitration is then binding on both sides.

So, if the union applies for arbitration, the settlement is binding on it and on the police board. All well and good, but city council must then approve the final police budget. If the politicians don't agree to the money, the arbitrated settlement can't go ahead. In fact, this came very close to happening in Victoria a few years ago. Only the intervention of the provincial police commission prevented the procedure from breaking down entirely.

The law allowing unilateral binding arbitration by essential service unions, such as policemen, is a good one. It would need only a simple amendment to ensure that such arbitration was binding on the authorities that foot the bill as well as the nominal negotiators.

RICHARD GWYN

Can CLC get out the vote?

TORONTO — Beyond a doubt, the shop steward's question nettled Dennis McDermott.

McDermott is president of the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC), and a group of about 70 shop stewards, business reps and local officers of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers' Union had heard out his appeal for organized labor to link hands with the New Democratic Party. Then came the steward's question whether the NDP could really run the country, "because, well, you know, to run a big company like Canada Packers takes a lot of power and talent."

McDermott's reply reverberated off the walls of the small union hall: "That kind of thinking is straight out of the Middle Ages. It's an attitude that because someone is a lawyer or a doctor or an executive, they are intellectually superior to workers. Well, we workers don't have to take a goddamn back seat to anyone."

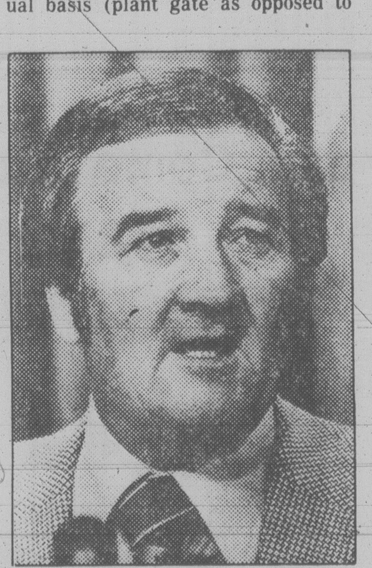
The applause — you'd have to guess some of it was triggered by shame — bounced back off the walls.

Just an agglomeration?

McDermott's goal in this election is to put organized labor into Canada's political front seat. He told the packing house workers, and earlier about 100 municipal and hospital union members, that he's attempting to show whether "we can deliver the votes or not. If we do, we'll have political clout. If we don't we might as well stop pretending we amount to anything more than an agglomeration of unions, with national direction and without national political muscle."

McDermott may be attempting the impossible. Canadian workers, unlike European ones, lack a consciousness of themselves as a distinct political class: 59 per cent told a recent Gallup poll that unions should not engage in politics. One packing house shop steward told me after the meeting: "It ain't easy. Some guys don't like it; some will tell you they're going to vote NDP, but I've no idea if they will."

Time, as well as tradition, is against McDermott. Only his own auto workers and the Canadian Paperworkers Union (the key to the NDP's surprise victory in last year's federal byelection in Newfoundland), were ready and raring to go when the election was called. The auto workers, for instance, have flooded their locals with leaflets, signs, stickers, fact sheets and detailed instructions such as: "Distribute leaflets on an individual basis (plant gate as opposed to lunchroom tables) . . . canvassing must be on a one-to-one basis."



DENNIS McDERMOTT
. . . CLC campaign meets resistance

Yet McDermott may do it. So far, organized labor's effort has gone largely unnoticed, mostly because it isn't intended to be noticed. Rather than staging TV-grabbers such as public rallies — "We aren't trying to elect McDermott," explains congress political education director Pat Kerwin — organized labor is mobilizing itself from within.

McDermott describes the effort as a "separate, but parallel, campaign." While the NDP goes its own way, the unions are going at their own members, with their own message.

To read the strategy, all you need to do is to read the slogans: "What you win in bargaining, we're losing in parliament;" "The NDP. It's your wage insurance;" "Remember wage controls," and "The perfect union: Me and the NDP."

To give substance to these slogans, organized labor is mounting a complete mini-campaign among its 2.3 million members, and through them among union spouses, voting age children, retirees, friends and neighbors.

About 1.5 million copies of a "kitchen economics" leaflet are being distributed to union members. Inside the leaflet, NDP Leader Ed Broadbent appears, removing a lettuce from his fridge (or putting it back in) and explaining how the NDP will do something about price increases, and at the very least make sure that "wage controls" don't return.

Every union member

In 14 cities from St. John's, Nfld., to Nanaimo, B.C. (including Toronto and Vancouver), in all of the swing ridings, every member of every union will be called on behalf of the NDP by an officer of his or her local, if the plan is followed.

At the front end of all this effort is what McDermott, quite correctly, calls "a political precedent" — a one-on-one "in-plant canvass" of the union rank-and-file by their own shop stewards, business reps and local officers. "For at least five minutes, get them off hockey and onto politics," McDermott tells his audience.

We won't know until election day whether McDermott will be able to mobilize the political consciousness of Canadian workers. The exercise is just beginning.

All that is certain is that before he's done, McDermott will have challenged the consciousness of Canadian workers as it has never been challenged before.

B.C. Tel tricks

On April 16, I received a telephone call at home and the caller asked to speak with an acquaintance of mine. I told her that he did not live in my home but offered to take a message. The caller, who failed to identify herself, said she had an "urgent, personal message" for my friend, and asked me to get him to call her right away. I told her I didn't know where to get in touch with him, but if she could give me some more information about this "urgent, personal message," I might see that it was important enough to warrant my trying to find him.

She told me she didn't know who the message was from because it was in a sealed envelope and she hadn't opened it. I couldn't quite fathom all this mystery. Perhaps it mysteriously appeared by her cereal bowl or wafted down from the twilight zone.

I asked her why she was calling my number and she seemed think I was my friend's wife, which I am not and never have been. She then told me that if I were his wife she could give me the message, but since it was so personal, she couldn't possibly give it to anyone else. I was fully exasperated by this time and took her phone number, saying I might get my friend to call her if I happened to see him.

A couple of days later I did happen to see him, and told him about this mysterious phone call. He took the number, which turned out to be in Vancouver, and called collect, asking for "Darlene Parker", as the caller had finally identified herself.

It turned out that the "urgent, personal message" was an overdue phone bill from a house my friend had lived in over a year ago.

I was astounded. I could hardly believe that B.C. Tel would resort to such underhanded trickery to find people who owe them money. This letter is not to debate the rightness or wrongness of people not paying their phone bills. It is to bring to light this very unsavory method of B.C. Tel trying to collect. This kind of thing must be going on all over the province.

It is shocking to learn that B.C. Tel operates in such a way. — Thelma Queenswood, Victoria.

Federal stature

We voters are so showered with gifts and promises that we seem to forget our recent past, namely the two federal-provincial conferences which preceded the election calls.

On both meetings our premier stood up tall to defend and protect the rights of our province.

The other premiers and the prime minister did watch and listen to Bill Bennett who enhanced the prestige of his government and of British Columbia.

Our premier received many congratulations for his Ottawa performance, even from many people who are not often kind towards Social Credit.

Remember the days when Dave Barrett represented our province in Ottawa and was described as "clownish" and "amusing"? — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Rd.

15¢ boat-bus ride

Attention senior citizens: Do you know that by using the Valley-to-Sea bus from the ferry terminal at Tsawwassen with a single transfer from the Ladner Ring, a senior citizen may travel from Swartz Bay to Vancouver for the exorbitant sum of 15 cents? Bus fare alone for others is 50 cents Monday through Thursday, plus $2 for the ferry.

Unless the travelling public makes more use of this splendid service, it is in danger of being discontinued. Let us make sure this does not happen. — Louise M. Iverson, 410-118 Croft and Lauretta Holdridge, 509 Oliver.

Keep the tanks out

As the owner of one of the "handful of homes" which would be affected by Mrs. Dowell's proposal to move the tank farm to Plumper Bay in Esquimalt harbor (New Site for Oil Tanks; Times, March 31), I cannot claim to be disinterested. However, I would like to take her to task on several points:

☐ I hope that it was ignorance rather than a deliberate attempt to divide and mislead that she said doubling the tax base would result in View Royal residents' taxes being cut by 50 per cent. This is incorrect on two counts:

The school tax would not be affected by moving the tank farm from one area of School District 61 to another. Any marginal increase in property assessments would benefit all residents of School District 61 and would be minimal. The provincial general assessment would remain unchanged and the only assessments which would benefit would be the View Royal fire department and Capital Regional assessment, accounting for less than 25 per cent of the total mill rate. A 40 per cent reduction on 25 per cent of the total tax bill comes to a total possible reduction of 10 per cent.

There was no mention of the costs associated with increased fire prevention responsibility for View Royal fire department which would more than offset the above reduction and View Royal residents can collectively expect an increase in taxes as a result of the move.

☐ Mrs. Dowell stated that "Victoria Plywood already has a wharf on the proposed site where CPR boats used to tie up." This is incorrect. The derelict wharf in question was demolished some five or six years ago and a wharf some 600 feet long would be required to get out into deep water or substantial dredging would be required.

The above points illustrate the lack of serious study of the question. It is obvious that no one has done an economic analysis of the effects of the move Mrs. Dowell has recommended.

In addition to pointing out the above inaccuracies, I am violently opposed to the relocation for the following reasons:

☐ The upper area of Esquimalt harbor is a waterfowl reserve and our bay is a haven for dozens of species of birds, seals, otters, mink and fish. An oil jetty with the inevitable spills will result in eventual elimination of the wildlife which is presently enjoyed by any interested visitors to Portage Park.

☐ My initial understanding of the proposal was that the tank farm would take the place of the mill. How naive! But I didn't think anyone would seriously suggest placing nine million gallons of fuel downwind from a mill which reported 27 fires in the last 10 years and has probably had in excess of 100 additional fires extinguished by their own staff during the same period. I now understand that the proposal is that the mill and tank farm are supposed to coexist.

I am at a complete loss to see any advantage in moving the tank farm from a primarily commercial harbor to a predominantly residential harbor at a cost of many millions of dollars. For a fraction of the cost the present tank farm could be cleaned up, screened and landscaped. — Robin Spear, 103 View Royal Avenue.

Murder trial divides San Francisco

By WILLIAM SCOBIE

SAN FRANCISCO — "Death to fags," says a slogan scrawled on walls in seedy southern San Francisco, where people sport T-shirts bearing a message for homosexuals: "Free Dan White!"

Daniel White, 32, former city superviser and businessman, went on trial this week for the murder of his colleagues Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk, leader of San Francisco's gay community. The bizarre case is focusing national attention on a problem America's supposedly most liberal city would prefer to forget.

In the past decade, thousands of gays have flocked to San Francisco from all over the U.S., transforming entire neighborhoods into so-called "gay ghettos". City-wide, some 25 per cent of the adult population, male and female, is estimated to be homosexual. The invasion, to angry "straights", mostly blue-collar workers, is beginning to look like a takeover.

The gays have snapped up and refurbished old Victorian houses, established businesses, shops, bars by the hundreds. They've sent values and rents soaring. They have their own powerful political organizations and favorites, among whom were Mayor Moscone and his ally, the openly gay Milk, elected as their representative on the 11-member board of supervisors, San Francisco's governing body.

Worse, in the eyes of conservative and religious factions, the gays have put their life-style on the streets and made homosexual behavior open and explicit.

WHITE
... backed death penalty

Dan White was the anti-Sodom and Gomorrah candidate. A clean-cut, Irish Catholic ex-policeman, he was elected to the board in 1977 by a mainly Irish and Anglo community which feared their neighborhood would be next to "go gay". No one had to tell White what was required of him.

"We are not going to be forced out of San Francisco by radicals and deviates," he told audiences. "Crime is our number one problem." In public, he fiercely opposed Milk on issues related to gays. In private, he spoke contemptuously of "coloreds" and "queers" from whom San Francisco must be saved.

To older politicians, White was a hot-tempered, slightly absurd newcomer to the art of the possible. "Dan was naive," says a former Moscone aide. "He couldn't separate the personal from the political. He felt people were laughing at him."

Last November, the tough-talking young Vietnam veteran found he had more friends than he knew. Citing personal pressures, debts and his inability to support a family on a supervisor's $9,600-a-year pay, he resigned — only to be swamped with offers of financial help and support from business interests and the police.

White asked for his post back. The mayor was evasive. When White eventually heard that he would be replaced by a man his allies considered a "leftist radical", he dropped a .38 in the pocket of this three-piece suit, drove to city hall and, the prosecution will charge, assassinated Moscone and Milk in their adjoining offices.

White surrendered to police 35 minutes later. According to a brief filed in court by the District Attorney, officers taped "a full statement" in which he confessed to shooting the two men "because there was a game being played against me and I was the scapegoat." White had accused Harvey Milk of scheming against him, the brief went on. The 48-year-old supervisor had "smirked" and White opened fire.

Defence lawyers have announced that they intend to "dramatize" the conflicts and public frustration which lay behind the double murder. In short, the gays and their life-style will be on trial along with Dan White.

And what people here are describing as San Francisco's "sexual integration crisis" will be brought into the open at last. To thousands of irate and bitterly anti-gay Californians, White is a kind of hero. A "Dan White defence fund" is thriving, although organizers refuse to say how much has been collected.

"The gays get violent these days, you know," said one girl selling raffle tickets for the fund. "I don't care what Dan did, we're behind him 100 per cent."

White was a fervent advocate of the state's draconian new death penalty laws, restored last year by popular vote. Ironically, he could face a mandatory death sentence, or mandatory life imprisonment without parole, under provisions of these laws which specifically refer to the assassination of "elected public officials."

'Gays' taking over the city?

Ambulance drivers demonstrate outside Parliament

By NORMAN WEBSTER

LONDON — Last Sunday I turned on my television set and settled back for a couple of hours with Peter Sellers and his classic comedy I'm All Right, Jack. Instead, I found myself watching Humphrey Bogart, and he clearly wasn't in the north of England.

It turned out that the thought of the nation watching Sellers' hilarious portrayal of a Marxist shop steward in the middle of the election campaign was just too much for the Labor party. Words were murmured into ears, and the movie was canned. The newspapers grumbled briefly about political interference, then the matter blew over.

It does seem a bit much, but you can understand Labor's panic. The last thing it needs on the TV screens is more Bolshie union leaders. It knows that if Margaret Thatcher wins this election, she will have the British trade union movement to thank.

It was the recent spectacular winter of discontent that shot her ahead in the opinion polls. On the campaign trail these days, it is her swipes at "flying pickets, the kangaroo courts, the merciless use of closed shop power" that win roaring applause. People remember. They're still mad.

Not, of course, that this country has never had to suffer strikes in the past. Economically, it has been harder hit on other occasions. But this winter there seemed to be a change in the nature of union action, a trampling on decencies and tolerances that make life livable on a small island.

The dead were left unburied, along with the garbage. Blood donor clinics were closed and supplies for hospital patients callously blocked. Ambulance services stopped.

The country seemed to be in the hands of undisciplined groups of workers. They decided whether feed could be delivered to starving farm animals, whether meals could go to elderly shut-ins, whether doctors could do operations, whether courts could function and cables get through to the Foreign Office.

In Parliament, the attorney-general produced the interesting new concept of "legal intimidation" by union bully boys.

Somehow it all seemed to be summed up by the headmaster of a primary school. With the school kitchen about to be closed by strike action, he advised parents not to give their children sandwiches to bring to school, since this might be construed as strike-breaking. Even Peter Sellers couldn't top that.

That was just three months ago. People remember.

Prime Minister James Callaghan is well aware of this, and he makes no apology for trade union excesses. But he is putting a sophisticated argument to the electorate.

He argues that whatever her righteous indignation, Mrs. Thatcher's tough remedy just won't work. The result will be more rather than less disruption.

Mr. Callaghan says Winston Churchill was prepared to jaw, jaw even with the Russians, while Mrs. Thatcher's only approach to the unions is war, war. Co-operation, not confrontation, is what it takes to run this country, he repeats. British voters, who suffered through strike after strike during Edward Heath's showdown with the unions in 1970-74, may find this argument compelling.

All of which is to say that Mrs. Thatcher has not yet won the election.

Mr. Callaghan holds a healthy lead over his rival when it comes to personal popularity, and he is waging a vigorous, clever campaign. He was first into the field, and he has been challenging and specific, while Mrs. Thatcher concentrates on not blowing the Tory party lead in the polls.

Those polls, too, must be watched closely. While they all show the Tories comfortably ahead, there is evidence that the result in parliamentary seats will be closer on election day.

Most ridings here are already locked up by one or the other of the two major parties. It does Mrs. Thatcher no good to pile up greater margins in safe Tory seats.

The election will be decided in the marginal constituencies, and here Labor isn't doing that badly. Last week a Gallup Poll in 56 Labor marginals found the governing party still ahead — down to a 3½-point lead from the five points of the last election, but still on top. It was a significant finding.

The most recent poll from Scotland also indicates Labor has shaken off the devolution-referendum blues and is back in command north of the border, picking up votes from the Scottish Nationalists. Mrs. Thatcher hasn't got a lease on Number 10 yet.

Not too proud to beg

By JILL TWEEDIE
Manchester Guardian

I have been sunk deep in a number of biographies lately: well-written books by authors who marvellously quicken their subjects, enabling readers to fold themselves under a second skin and lead, vicariously, a whole past life. I am now on intimate terms with, among others, Mary Wollstonecraft, her daughter Mary Shelley, Louisa Alcott and, as of last week, Karl Marx's daughter Eleanor. I have suffered with them through their trials and tribulations, rejoiced with them in their triumphs and feel I could now anticipate each one's particular reactions to particular events.

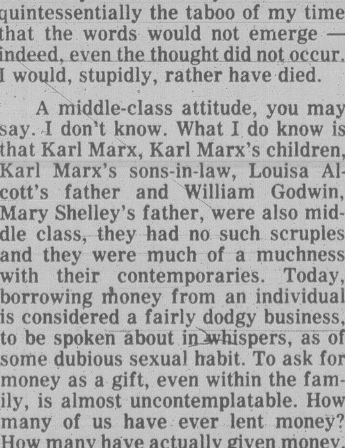
But there is one aspect of such past lives (by no means confined to women) that I still find utterly baffling, and that is the whole question of money. Domestic life and loves, happiness and tragedy, the difficulties and exhilarations of work, are all familiar fields with which I can easily identify, but then the financial nitty gritty comes up, my century parts company with theirs and I peer into an alien world with no known touchstones. For example, I absorb the fact that the biographee is grindingly poor, too poor to go out for lack of a bonnet or a pawned pair of gloves, too poor to invite friends home to squalid rooms where cold bites the bones. I shiver in sympathy, I feel for them, I am outraged on their behalf. And then it is mentioned in passing that these stricken and near-starving figures have a servant. Have two servants. Even have a nursemaid for the starving children. The mind reels.

If the heroine and her husband are destitute, how does their servant fare? If they eat gruel, must the skivvy lick the spoon for sustenance? If mother, father and four children share two rooms, what foetid cubic inch does the servant occupy? How ever on earth did these poor people's poor people exist?

There is another financial conundrum. Out of this dire poverty, this inability to keep the bailiffs from the door or pay tradesmen for food or the wicked landlord for rent, all of a sudden the hero, the heroine, or the whole family, separately and together, rise up and take a holiday. Go to Paris, Florence, or Carlsbad, take three weeks of ozone at Margate or Plymouth, rent a cottage in Kent or a mansion in Tuscany. Has the author got things wrong (but no, there are the bills, the letters, the tickets). How is this miracle accomplished?

The third financial mystery of past VIPs (and they were not VIPs at the time) is the ease with which they asked others for money or, sometimes, dispensed it — the oddest of social customs for a twentieth-century reader to understand. Most of us have endured some period of our lives when finances were tight, if not fairly desperate. I existed, once, on £10 weekly with a new-born baby in one room plus bed and one-bar electric fire. I wore the same grey sweater and jeans for three years and periodically moved my typewriter into my neighbor's room so that the tall and smiling bailiffs with their tall and smiling teeth could not carry if off and stop even my tiny income trickling in. But I never asked anyone for money. That was so quintessentially the taboo of my time that the words would not emerge — indeed, even the thought did not occur. I would, stupidly, rather have died.

A middle-class attitude, you may say. I don't know. What I do know is that Karl Marx, Karl Marx's children, Karl Marx's sons-in-law, Louisa Alcott's father and William Godwin, Mary Shelley's father, were also middle class, they had no such scruples and they were much of a muchness with their contemporaries. Today, borrowing money from an individual is considered a fairly dodgy business, to be spoken about in whispers, as of some dubious sexual habit. To ask for money as a gift, even within the family, is almost uncontemplatable. How many of us have ever lent money? How many have actually given money, even to upholster our nearest and dearest, unless we are extremely rich (and even then, how often?). Most of us are Scrooge-like with our own living-in children, divesting ourselves of the odd pound under loud protest, pontificating upon their grasping natures and ignorance of life, lecturing them on principle about the sins of spending.



MARX . . . no shame

When he first arrived in England, Karl Marx and his family lived in bleakest poverty. In all his life, he was never confortably off. It is extremely doubtful that he would ever have been able to write his master works if he had not been subsidized by Frederick Engels. This angelic man worked for ten years in a job he disliked, in reality and on principle, simply to keep the Marx family afloat.

When illness struck, he paid the doctor's bills and sent claret. When celebrations were in order, he paid up again and sent champagne. In all the interminable Marxist crises, he was ready with the readies. After Marx's death, he took on the children's welfare without question. Married daughter Laura had her Paris flat paid for and a stream of begging letters from her husband to Engels ("Can you send me £10, for I am devilishly hard up") were always successful. No one showed shame, no one appeared to think shame at all necessary.

They were not alone. Louisa Alcott's father, Bronson, cheerfully dunned his friends for his debts and sponged on his wife and daughter. William Godwin constantly asked his son-in-law Percy Shelley (always in financial difficulties himself) for money, as his due. Godwin's letters were cold, abusive and concerned with nothing but his monetary needs. He was indifferent to his daughter's griefs or health, he refused actually to see the couple and Shelley was forced to intercept the letters to Mary in fear for his wife's sanity. "I wrote to this hard-hearted person . . . to entreat him to try and soothe her in his next letter (Mary's son had just died). The next letter, received yesterday and addressed to her, called her husband (me) 'a disgraceful and flagrant person,' tried to persuade her that I was under great engagements to give him more money and urged her if she ever wished a connection to continue between him and her, to force me to get money for him."

Today we would dismiss Godwin as a uniquely nasty and greedy father. Then, he was acting quite normally. What, I wonder, has so changed in some hundred years that our views of giving and getting money are thus transformed? The rise of banking has, perhaps, deflected borrowing from individuals to organizations but our ancestors expected gifts as common coinage. Were they shameless and profligate or is it, after all, us who are mean and ungenerous to a fault?

Press Talks Restart Without Pressmen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Talks aimed at ending the strike which has shut down Vancouver's two daily newspapers for nearly six months continued Thursday without the pressmen.

The pressmen, whose intransigence on the issue of manning levels was blasted in a report by private mediator John Kagel, did not participate in the negotiations which resumed Wednesday.

Kagel, the San Francisco lawyer who was brought into talks last month for $2,000 a day, was holding discussions with representatives of Pacific Press, which produces the evening Sun and the morning Province, and with representatives of five other unions which make up the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions.

"I believe his intention, and you would have to confirm it with him," said Sun publisher Clark Davey, "is either to stay until we've resolved outstanding issues with the unions or until those talks have broken down."

Neither Kagel nor any union representatives were available for comment.

The pressmen's union turned down a management suggestion that the manning issue be submitted to compulsory arbitration while management was unwilling to submit the matter, as the union suggested, to a union-management committee.

Davey said it would take about 72 hours to get the newspapers back on the street "once we had the necessary agreements with the unions and confidence in our joint ability to produce a paper."

Major Music Festival Events Set for Tonight

It was a low-key day Thursday at the Victoria Music Festival except for speech arts. All other major events are scheduled for tonight — operatic classes and piano open performance concert group — and next week.

But it was honors program night for speech, bringing to a conclusion a week of monologues, duologues, prose, poetry and mime. The standard was generally above average at this year's sessions, according to Alberta adjudicator Walter Kaasa.

For the final event he had selected from among the many good things he had heard, an attractively varied program. It opened with a fine speech choir from Norfolk House School and included dramatic pieces from David Cooper and Sandra Foweraker; humor from Martha Readings; a clever and amusing mime presentation by Mike O'Brien and an unusual, well thought-out choric drama piece by Uplands School.

St.Patrick's School speech choir; solo performers Alan Ford, Julie McCracken, Michael Miller, Kathy Olafson, Betsy Donald, Cindy Golin, Hilary Freundlich and Christina Banman were others chosen for the program. And to conclude it, 15-year-old David Wingrove as an excellent story-teller recounting his own tale entitled The Zoo.

Awards were presented by Kaasa, including two "adjudicator's awards" to Hilary-Freundlich and Sandra Foweraker. Speech art's senior award was won by Christina Banman and David Wingrove won both the award for bible reading under 16 and the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria intermediate award, under 16. A special Victoria Music Festival award was made to David Cooper.

Piano accordion classes commenced Thursday and concluded this morning. Top marks and recommendation to the Provincial Music Festival went to Nicki Gurr in under 15 solo class and Robert Zupanc in under 16. They received 89 and 88 marks respectively.

Built by the West German firm of Neoplan Co. for some $600,000, the 59.4 ft. long snoozer consists of two double-decker cars, joined by an accordion-like hinge, on an air-suspended chassis; it can traverse the bumpiest byway. Powered by a 10-cylinder 400-h.p. diesel engine superbus can reach 80 mph and is as high and wide as the law permits (13.12 ft. by 8.2 ft.); a six-footer can walk its length without stooping.

The main feature of "SNOOZER" is the fact that it is equipped for hotel accommodations with maximum onboard comfort in each individual cabin/room, of which there are 9. All are equipped with radio, television, hot and cold water, toilet, shower, air conditioning and heating units. The cabins are finished in solid mahogany and the carpeting, furniture and appointments are luxuriously finished throughout the vehicle.

UVic Science Grants

More than $1.2 million in research grants has been awarded to scientists at the University of Victoria for projects during the next year.

The grants, made by the National Sciences and Engineering Research Council of Canada, will help scientists hire assistants and pay for research equipment.

Regular grants totalling $835,000 will go to 80 scientists in seven departments enabling them to carry out research into such areas as the effect of freeze-drying on cells, cold water survival, the internal combustion engine, eye movement, and decision-making in urban transportation systems.

In addition $225,000 has been awarded to UVic's team of nuclear scientists attached to the TRIUMP cyclotrone project at University of B.C., $153,000 to cover the first year needs of 13 UVic scientists involved in a three-year $518,000 study of marine pollution, and $30,000 to assist researchers on the UVic research vessel John Strickland.

Graduate studies dean Dr. John Dewey said the NSERC grants represent an overall 9.3 per cent increase over last year's.

However, he said while pleased with the increase he was disappointed that allocations for second and third year continuing research projects had only gone up 3.5 per cent.

Such an increase, he said doesn't come close to covering the cost of inflation.

"There has been no significant increase in research funds since 1969," he said adding that statistics show research costs have risen much faster than the cost of other items.

Guitar Ensemble

The Guitar Consort of Victoria is composed of members of the faculty of the Conservatory of Music and is directed by Bryan Townsend: Tonight at 8 at the Conservatory the Consort will present a program of music for guitar ensemble.

The Consort was former in the fall of 1978 and this event will be its debut recital.

Featured in the program will be rennaissance dances by Praetorius, duos by Francois Couperin and Beethoven as well as larger works for guitar quartet by Fernando Sor and Gilbert Biberian. Being played for the first time on guitar will be the celebrated Cavatina from the late quartet in B flat, Opus 130 by Beethoven.

Doman Income of $2.5M Increase More Than 100%

DUNCAN — Net income of Doman Industries Ltd. totalled $2.5 million in the first quarter, up more than 100 per cent over the same time last year.

As a result the company will increase its annual dividend to 40 cents from 10 cents, president Herb Doman has announced.

He told the company's annual meeting Thursday the increased dividend will take effect with the July quarterly payment.

Sales in the first quarter hit $23.1 million, up five per cent from $21.9 million, he said.

Profits from operations totalled $2,548,000, an increase of 116 per cent over $1,178,000 in the same three months of 1978. Last year the company also had additional net income of $290,000 from the sale of assets.

This year the company plans to spend $25 million on an expansion program, including investment in transport equipment, logging equipment, logging development and a new sawmill.

This expansion will represent 400 permanent jobs, Doman said.

He said profits at year's end should be above last year's level of $11 million or $1.68 per share.

A new director of the company is David Radler of Vancouver, president of Sterling Newspapers Ltd. of Toronto.

At the meeting, one shareholder, Mrs. Brigette Meagher, asked Doman a number of questions about how the company's expansion plans might affect the environment of the Cowichan River estuary.

Company executives answered some of the questions and then asked Mrs. Meagher, a former North Cowichan alderman, to ask the remainder of her questions after the meeting.

Doman said any investor buying Doman shares in 1964 when they first were issued could have got them at $5 each. Because of increased value and stock splits the value of each original share now would be about $100, he told the meeting.

Mine Strikers Halt Truck Firm's Fuel

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Pacific Petroleum's plant at nearby Taylor has halted shipments to two city firms which are being picketed by workers from the Endako molybdenum mine near Fraser Lake.

Plant manager Vic Hope said today the shipments were halted after about 10 workers from the mine, who have been on strike for more than two months, started picketing a bulk gasoline agent and a trucking firm owned by the same man.

A spokesman for the pickets said the companies are strikebreakers because they did not have a contract to haul ore from the mine before the strike, but are doing it now.

The Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, which represents the striking workers, has applied to the British Columbia Labor Relations Board for a cease-and-desist order against the two firms.

That application is expected to be heard Saturday in Vancouver.

Feelings have been running high in Fraser Lake, 120 kilometres west of Prince George, since the strike by members of the association started Feb. 14. Shots have been fired at several truck convoys carrying molybdenum from the mine.

Hope said he feared his plant would be picketed if he continued shipments to J. P. Cronin and Sons, a bulk gasoline agent, and to Pathfinder Lines, a trucking firm.

Doukhobors to Stand Trial for Arson

NELSON (CP) — The leader of the Orthodox Doukhobor sect and two other men will stand trial on all arson charges facing them, it was decided Thursday in provincial court.

Leader John J. Verigin, holder of the Order of Canada, Peter Astasoroff and William Evdokimoff were arrested last year following several months of investigation into fires in the nearby community of Grannd Forks.

They are charged with four counts of conspiracy to commit arson after fires at the Sunshine Valley Co-op, the Union of Spiritual Communities of Christ hall, the home of Stefan Sorokin, leader of the Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect, and the old post office building.

No date was set for the trial.

Women stripped off their clothes on several occasions earlier during appearances in court by the three men. Verigin had said outside the court that the women were not members of his sect.

Ex-Policeman On Probation

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 28-year-old former city police constable was given a six-month suspended sentence and placed on probation Thursday after pleading guilty to assault.

Donald Dyck was charged with assaulting a doorman and waiter at a local hotel in November.

Police said the doorman suffered head injuries after he and a waiter tried to remove Dyck and a friend from the hotel premises after closing hours.

Boyfriend Hunted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police have issued a warrant for the arrest of a 21-year-old man who allegedly kidnapped his girl friend Wednesday.

Police said Lola Demetro, also 21, was dragged by the hair from her home with a gun held to her head. A shot was fired during the incident, but no one was hurt.

Firebomb Trial

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 47-year-old man charged with 11 counts of arson following a series of firebombings between December and March has been ordered Thursday to stand trial June 20 although he has no legal counsel.

Court was told Thursday that Bela Demjan has rejected a total of six lawyers offered by the provincial legal aid society.

Demjan has appeared 11 times in court on the charges.

He was charged March 14 after a CB radio operator, assisting police on a stakeout of a Canada Manpower office, caught a man after a molotov cocktail was thrown through the office's window.

At least 22 banks and government institutions were struck in the series of incidents.

Fortune Hidden

Probe Dropped

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police have stopped active investigation of a terrorist-style attack in which the headquarters of the Coordinated Law Enforcement Unit (CLEU) was sprayed with bullets Feb. 13, a spokesman said Thursday.

The spokesman said that the file still is open but seven people police believe are responsible for the attack either are before the courts or in jail on unrelated charges.

Police said that at least two men in a car fired 17 bullets from an automatic rifle shattering front windows and a door in the early morning attack.

Police believe the attack was the result of a grudge against CLEU.

Waiters Charged On Taxes

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Federal income tax officials have filed income tax evasion charges against seven waiters and a waitress working in local hotels and restuarants, a tax office spokesman said Thursday.

The charges were laid following an intensive investigation by the government into hotel and restaurant waiters' incomes, he said.

The charges allege that the eight made false income tax statements involving unreported income totalling more than $34,000, the spokesman said. They are expected to appear in court early next week.

BURNABY (CP) — Seventeen people charged after a picket-line confrontation during a bitter strike at Simon Fraser University will go on trial separately beginning June 21.

Charges against an 18th person have been dropped.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, Jean-Claude Parrot, national president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, criticized police methods in making the arrests and demanded that the charges be dropped.

"The RCMP is out of control . . . when it can attack a group of citizens who are peacefully exercising their legal right to protest, beat a number of them up and arrest 18 of them on trumped up charges," he said.

"We are no longer talking about the possibility of a police state. These are the actions of a police state."

The arrests were made March 23 after a crowd of pickets blocked the road leading to the university which sits on top of Burnaby Mountain.

The 5½-month dispute between the university and 650 clerical and technical employees, represented by the Association of University and College Employees, escalated from rotating to full-time strikes and lockouts.

It ended last Friday when the two sides signed a letter of agreement for a 16-month contract.

Those charged after the March 23 demonstration appeared in provincial court here Wednesday, and the first trial date was set for June 21.

Parrot said that if the RCMP were prosecuted for its illegal actions in the same way as workers are prosecuted, the entire force would be in jail.

Bruce's Appeal On Vows Fails

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federal Court of Canada dismissed an appeal Thursday by a convicted murderer who wants to marry a 23-year-old woman he once held hostage.

Andy Bruce, serving a life sentence for a contract killing in 1970, had asked the court to overturn a decision by the director of the British Columbia Penitentiary to deny him permission to marry Sandra Meadley, daughter of prisoner rights activist Betsy Wood.

Meadley and Wood were among a dozen persons taken hostage by Bruce and three other convicts during a week-long incident at the maximum-security B.C. Penitentiary in nearby New Westminster in January, 1978.

Mr. Justice Alison Walsh said in dismissing Bruce's appeal without costs that there was no evidence to show that prison director Herb Reynett acted unfairly in denying the prisoner's request.

New York

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 6.49 on Thursday, lost another 4.85 to 856.12 by 2 p.m.

Losers outdistanced gainers by about a 5-to-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Federal Reserve Board statistics issued late Thursday showed a $4.1 billion jump in the basic measure of the money supply for the latest reporting week.

Analysts said the unexpectedly sharp rise might well increase pressure on the Board to tighten credit further, pushing interest rates upward.

It also was seen as one piece of evidence that inflationary forces remain strong in the economy, despite the central bank's efforts to date.

Charter Co. climbed 2¼ to $18¼ before the company requested a trading halt in its stock. Heavy interest in Charter shares has been attributedto the company's plans to acquire Carey Energy Corp.

Charter Co. warrants gained 2 to $12⅜.

Interway, also active, was up 1⅛ to $35⅛. Gelco Corp. raised its offer for 49 per cent of Interway's stock from $37 to $40 a share.

Montreal

Alberta Gas Trunk Line gained ⅛ at $20, Brascan A ⅛ at $23½, Dominion Stores ¼ at $18¾, Genstar ¼ at $43⅝, Norcen Energy Resource ⅛ at $20¾, and Reed Stenhouse ¼ at $9.

Among speculative issues, Stanford Mines dropped two cents at 58 cents on a volume of 3,000 shares traded.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was mixed near the close of light trading today. The Financial Times index fell 3.1 to 543.8. Oils advanced but industrials eased and golds were narrowly mixed. Canadian stocks declined.

Divests Plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nestle S.A., a Swiss-based food company, will divest itself of a plant in Darien, Wis., under an agreement announced by the U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

The frozen-food plant to be divested is operated by Libby, McNeill and Libby, a Nestle subsidiary.

The agreement settles a 1975 FTC complaint challenging Nestle's 1973 acquisition of Stouffer Foods. The commission alleged that the acquisition would substantially reduce competition.

The FTC complaint also named Unilac Inc., a holding company affiliated with Nestle and based in Panama. The consent agreement provides for dismissal of charges against Unilac.

The agreement will be the subject of public comment until June 25, after which the commission may make it final or withdraw its acceptance of the agreement.

Shell Cda.

Higher gasoline and furnace oil sales helped Shell Canada Ltd. achieve first quarter earnings of $46.1 million or 42 cents a share, a $9.2 million increase from the $36.9 million or 37 cents a share reported for the same quarter a year ago.

Shell said in a report to shareholders that while increased sales, plus higher prices for oil and chemical products, helped improve profits "the return on capital invested in this part of the business remained at an unsatisfactory level."

It said increased income from higher crude, liquids and natural gas sales was offset by higher costs.

Nu-West Dev.

Shareholders of Voyager Petroleums Ltd. approved a plan to sell Nu-West Development Corp. Ltd. the 32 per cent of outstanding shares not already owned by Nu-West.

The sale of the remaining Voyager stock at $25 a share, $1 a share more than the trading price on the Toronto stock exchange April 23, will complete an acquisition with a total cost of about $198 million.

Nu-West Development Corp. Ltd. also announced the purchase by its affiliate, Nu-West Development Corp. of Arizona, of V. H. Development Inc. of Phoenix, Ariz.

The purchase price was $6 million.

V. H. is a homebuilder in metropolitan Phoenix with annual sales of about 700 homes valued at $30 million. The combination of V. H. Development and Nu-West's existing Arizona operation will have an expected 1979 volume of 1,400 homes and $75 million in sales.

H.B. Oil

The West Pembina region has gained prominence in recent years for its oil reserves, but S. G. Olson, president of Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Ltd., told shareholders "we feel that the area contains significant reserves of natural gas and condensate."

Olson was among the slate of incumbent company directors who were re-elected at the annual shareholders' meeting.

He told the meeting that since the first Devonian oil discovery was made in West Pembina in February, 1977, the company has participated in the drilling of 29 wells, resulting in 19 oil and gas discoveries. Of these, three oil and four gas discoveries have been made in the Nisku formation.

A recently completed Nisku oil discovery drilled with Pacific Petroleums Ltd. will soon be placed in production. Hudson Bay has a 50-per-cent interest in the well, which tested in excess of 700 barrels a day.

Olson said the company now has interests in 239,000 acres in the West Pembina region, which are believed to make up at least 10 per cent of the area considered to be prospective for Nisku Reef development in West Pembina.

Mitsubishi Spurs B.C., Alberta Economies

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

CALGARY (CP) — In the 12 months that ended March 31, nearly $1 billion in Canadian imports and exports were handled by one company, Mitsubishi Canada Ltd.

Worldwide, the Mitsubishi family of industries, topped by the largest trading company in the world, handles close to $50 billion in trade annually.

The growing presence of such powerful Japanese corporations in Western Canada has been a significant factor in the region's economic boom.

A recent study sponsored by the Canada-Japan Trade Council found that slightly more than half Canada's exports to Japan came from British Columbia and nearly one-third from the Prairies.

With total Canadian exports to Japan running at about $3 billion a year, $1 billion more than imports, that means a large market for Western resources.

Mitsubishi money took 25 per cent of Crestbrook Forest Industries Ld. of Cranbrook, in 1967, followed in 1973 by 23 per cent of United Oilseed Products Ltd. at Lloydminster, and 20 per cent of Lakeside Farm Industries Ltd., a large feedlot operation in Brooks, Alta.

Also in 1973, Mitsubishi made the first substantial investment in Western Canada coal, combining with several Japanese steel mills to purchase 27 per cent of faltering Kaiser Resources Ltd., which mines metallurgical coal at Sparwood.

Mitsubishi added to its lumber-manufacturing interests last year with purchase of 40 per cent of Mayo Forest Industries Ltd. of Nanaimo.

The company sees an excellent future for Western Canada and does not rule out activity in any sector, vice-president Michael Mizoguchi of Mitsubishi Canada said in a recent interview.

Mizoguchi said it is considering investment in grain-handling facilities, among other possibilities.

It biggest investment plans, however, focus on the Alberta oil industry.

That petrochemical project would also produce byproducts to help fuel a nearby $162-million synthetic natural gas plant, which would be only the second such plant in Canada.

The traditional orientation of Japanese giant corporations toward long-term planning has also led Mitsubishi into oil sands research.

Six years ago, Mizoguchi said, 200 tons of bitumen was shipped to Japanese plants for experiments on whether the oil-sand mixture could be converted directly into petrochemicals.

Success in such efforts could give a strong economic boost to development of Alberta's vast oil sands and young petrochemical industry.

The outcome of the initial 1973 tests, said Ronald Dalby of Edmonton, executive consultant to Mitsubishi Canada, has so far been a research program involving provincial agencies and discussion about building an experimental pilot plant in Alberta.

Mitsubishi Canada is also a participant with Norcen Energy Resources Ltd. and Imperial Oil Ltd. in an experimental oil sands plant.

With Canada's current oil deficiency, Mizoguchi said, there seems no chance of Canada being able to export any of the oil for a decade.

Dalby, however, says Canada could develop new oil resources faster:

"I think if Japan was in Canada's position, Japan would take faster action than Canada in bringing about a proper balance between supply and demand. There seems to be a better understanding between the needs of the business community and the government in Japan than there is in Canada.

But Japanese companies will not push such development aggressively, Dalby and Mizoguchi said. The Japanese style is to adapt to the local pace, to encourage but not push.

Mitsubishi feels that projects in which it participates must be Canadian-managed and majority Canadian-owned, Dalby said. About three-fourths of the 105 Mitsubishi staff are Canadians.

Mizoguchi said Mitsubishi does not consider Canada as merely a source of resources and a market for Japan:

"For the past several years Mitsubishi Canada Ltd. has emphasized the export of Canadian products to countries other than Japan, such as India, Australia, Southeast Asian countries and European countries."

PWA Prospects 'Promising'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific Western Airlines had a successful year last year and the future looks promising, PWA president Rhys Eyton said Wednesday after the airline's annual meeting.

"If the traffic levels continue as high as they are, the operating profits should equate at least with what we've ended up with last year."

Total profits should be up this year due to the sale of one Hercules aircraft, two Fairchild F28s and the company's last Boeing 707.

Air Cargo To Triple?

EDMONTON (CP) — Air Canada is considering construction of a new $5 million air cargo facility in Edmonton.

Roger P. Gadsden, Edmonton cargo sales and service manager, said Air Canada officials have made a proposal for a building that would triple their current cargo facilities.

Department Store Profits 'Disappoint'

By LAWRENCE MOULE
The Canadian Press

Shareholders in department stores and grocery chains will be disappointed this year, a Toronto analyst says.

Kevin McAsey of Wood Gundy Ltd. said in a recent interview, "Outside of special situations, we feel the outlook this year for both groups is poor for profits."

Department store profits rose in 1978 but will fall in 1979, largely due to a reduction in sales.

"First-quarter sales will probably be good on a year-on-year basis because sales in the first quarter of last year were weak," McAsey said.

"But sales in January and February, seasonally adjusted, were down."

Figures from Statistics Canada show that department store sales rose 13.1 per cent in January from the previous year and 4.6 per cent in February.

However, seasonally-adjusted figures, which do not make allowance for inflation, show that February's sales were down 0.7 per cent from January, January's down 3.8 per cent from December and December's down 0.1 per cent from a strong November.

Department store inventories grew at a faster rate than sales in 1978, particularly in the latter part of the year, and McAsey said several company representatives have told him that their inventories have grown uncomfortably large.

McAsey noted in a recent market report that during 1978, spending by the average individual outpaced his income in real terms. Part of the difference was made up by heavier borrowing.

"We think people will have to cut their spending because of their increased debt," McAsey said. "This will cause particular weakness in consumer durables, which account for 40 per cent of department store sales."

Clothing accounts for another one-third of sales but McAsey said he anticipates buyer resistance this fall to the fact that clothing prices will rise by 10 to 15 per cent.

Problems of weak demand and growing inventories will be compounded by increased overhead, as wage rates are expected to rise at a faster rate than in 1978.

"Most department store stocks appear fully-priced in relation to these prospects," McAsey's report said.

Bells Ring and Money Trades

By LARRY KRAMER

LONDON (WP) — The rooms are dark, carpeted, air-conditioned and sealed off like a vault from the outside world, a sharp contrast to most other offices in the bank. A couple dozen or so traders, most in their 30s, sit around futuristic octagonal consoles that could have been part of the set for Star Trek.

But at exactly 9 a.m., bells ring, lights go on, and television screens hung above all of the desks begin to flash the latest prices of various currencies. Within a matter of seconds, millions of dollars have changed hands.

The money traders are the pounding heart of the Euromarkets. Sometimes they merely are executing orders from bank clients, but other times they are riding herd on millions of dollars of the bank's own money, buying, selling, bartering to make an extra buck from the rise and fall of a currency — any currency.

The scene is the same for all of the major banks' trading rooms, here as well as in all of the big money market centers.

Scores of highly motivated traders play a never-ending guessing game, trying to figure out how high or low a certain currency will be on a given date, or even at a given hour.

The pressure is intense. Many traders burn out after only a few years. Few sleep well, knowing that at all times someone, somewhere, is buying or selling the currencies they have invested in.

Each has dozens of phone lines, which at the press of one automatic-dialing button can produce a quotation on the exchange rate of one major currency against another.

"Things happen so fast in a trading room that we can't possibly keep track of all of our traders," said one New York bank officer. "We have to trust our managers to keep their traders in line, and we give them limits that they aren't supposed to exceed."

While many of the trades made in any of the major trading rooms are in response to specific transactions — the bank may need to pay off a loan in a particular currency that it doesn't have on hand, or a client company might want to sell some French francs because it has too many — perhaps half of the trades are primarily speculative.

In some cases, the real gambler sells something he doesn't have, hoping to quickly borrow to cover what he has just sold or buy it back at a cheaper rate before he has to pay off.

Unlike the public's perception of the staid international banker poring over papers and contracts before making a move, the money traders play what may be the fastest game in the world.

Sitting back in a London pub after a tough day, two American money traders sip pints of ale and reflect on their jobs and the millions of dollars that they handle every day.

"Sure, on a quiet afternoon — specially at the end of a week — we can take some pretty strong shots and send the dollar spinning," one said. "But it won't last long. You've got to move awful fast to make that kind of money."

"Look," says the other. "They watch us pretty closely. But if you saw a real chance to make some fast money, and you didn't have time to clear it, you could exceed your limit and buy or sell a bundle. On a good day, you could even make the bank a couple million.

"But you'd better be right," he added quickly. "Or it'll likely be your last day on the job."

Imperial Oil Picks President

TORONTO (CP) — Jim Livingstone, 58, a key figure behind the development of the Syncrude oil sands project in Alberta, has been named president of Imperial Oil Ltd., succeeding J. A. (Jack) Armstrong.

Armstrong, 62, moves up to chairman but will retain the post of chief executive officer.

As executive vice-president, Livingstone was considered the heir apparent to Armstrong and had been handling many of the president's duties recently.

Elected a vice-president and director in 1969, he became a senior vice-president in 1971 and executive vice-president in July, 1975.

He said both he and Armstrong will be active in the development of the company's oil sands project at Cold Lake "with Jack in the foreground."

$191M Plans By CP Rail

MONTREAL (CP) — CP Rail has announced the company expects to spend about $191 million this year to upgrade rail facilities and buy new freight train equipment.

Announcing:

The New Home Warranty Program of British Columbia and the Yukon.

Protection for your new home investment.

The New Home Warranty Program of British Columbia and the Yukon was initiated by the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, B.C. Council and was established in April, 1976.

It's a nice warm feeling ....
The Warranty means protection for you and your investment in a new home, five kinds of protection for five years from the date of purchase.

- Your deposit (money you paid in good faith to bind the contract) to the registered builder is protected, up to $5,000.
- Registered builders provide a one year workmanship and materials warranty, which is guaranteed by the Program.
- You are protected against structural defects in your new home to the end of the fifth year from date of occupancy, up to $20,000.
- In the event of a dispute with your builder, the Program provides impartial conciliation to help you resolve your differences.
- And, if you decide to sell your new home during the five year period, the balance of the warranty is transferable to the new owner.

Today, there are over 10,000 new homes in B.C. and the Yukon protected by the New Home Warranty Program. Look for this sign when buying your new home.

Work On CF 'Not Cure'

CALGARY (CP) — University of Calgary microbiologist Bill Costerton cautioned Thursday his research team has not found a cure for cystic fibrosis (CF) despite having made good progress in understanding the fatal disease.

He said no specific treatmen) has been developed and there is no guarantee a cure will be developed in three years, as suggested in some reports about his team's work earlier this week.

But although scientists still have "a tough row to hoe," they now have a theoretical basis from which to work and are closer than ever to finding a cure for the disease which affects one of every 1,800 children born in Canada, Costerton said.

Dr. Janet Forstner cf Toronto said, "We have to be careful not to be over-optimistic. There have been so many false alarms about supposed methods to control the disease."

Costerton said he is not raising false hopes because he is certain about the results of his research, but it is "quite fair" to criticize because of "all the false alarms we've had about cures."

Costerton's team found the glue-like mucus which builds up in the lungs of CF victims is associated with enzymes which stick to certain germs called pseudomona. The mucus prevents antibodies and antibiotics from reaching the bacteria to kill them and even more mucus is produced, eventually suffocating the victims.

Don't Panic: Vasectomy Expert

OTTAWA (CP) — An Ottawa doctor who has performed more than 4,000 vasectomies in recent years urges men not to seek reversals because of a "scare" report last week suggesting the procedure may carry some risks.

Dr. Edward Shapiro was commenting on a London report which said men who have had a vasectomy run risk of accelerated aging, high blood pressure and premature arterial disease.

The report said research on monkeys showed that sperm denied an outlet break down and enter the bloodstream forming anti-sperm antibodies, (formed to fight toxins) which stick to blood vessel walls and speed damage.

"Antibodies can be present in any male, vasectomized or not," Shapiro said.

Dr. Elaine Jolly, who heads the fertility clinic at the Ottawa General Hospital, said: "It would be a shame if a report based on preliminary data involving monkeys, persuaded some men to reverse the procedure."

While Dr. Jolly conceded that specific tests to determine increases in blood pressure have not been done, she stressed that there are too many variables to state conclusively that vasectomy led to the conditions described in the monkeys.

A spokesman for the Oregon Primate Centre in the United States, where initial tests were conducted on rhesus monkeys sterilized seven to 14 years, said the study was too preliminary to be directly related to man.

Wardair Cleared On False-Ad Rap

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial judge has found Canada's largest charter airline not guilty of false advertising.

Judge Robert Dnieper said Thursday that Wardair Canada (1975) Ltd. and its subsidiary, International Vacations Ltd. (Intervac), which sells flights to the public, "are entirely innocent of any wrongdoing."

The companies were charged for supplying an inadequate number of seats on three Toronto-to-London flights in 1977.

Federal prosecutor Robert Hubbard told the judge during the three-day trial that Wardair's advertisements for bargain flights contained false and misleading claims about the availability of seats.

A Toronto couple testified that after reading full-page ads for bargain fares they tried to book for Aug. 27 or Aug. 31, 1977, but were offered flights on Sept. 23.

"The company is advertising a product which doesn't exist," Hubbard said.

"The misleading aspect is that the ads suggest all you had to do is book your seat but in fact no seats were available when people responded to the ad."

Defence lawyer A. R. Morrison said the ads presented Wardair's operating schedule and contained the note: "Some flights may be sold out."

Holding a full-page ad in his hand, Judge Dnieper said he did not know what else Wardair could have done.

"This would not mislead even the ignorant, if the person reading the advertisement took the care to read all of it."

Claim Exaggerated

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Although a retail distributor advertised that an engine device would cut fuel consumption by about 25 per cent, the mechanism actually has little effect on gas mileage, an investigator said Thursday.

Martin Friend, a technical officer with the National Research Council, testified in provincial court that tests showed the Mini Fuel-Jector could cut gas consumption by little more than one per cent.

However, a London branch of Consumers Distributing sold the device in 1977 for $19.95 claiming it would give gasoline savings "of up to 25 per cent or more."

The store was charged under the Combines Investigation Act with misleading advertising.

Frank Mather, Consumers' merchandising manager in Toronto, said the company bought 1,230 of the Mini Fuel-Jectors in 1974 after the importer, Oxford Industries of Montreal, showed him test results and an engineer's statement.

Oxford later pleaded guilty to a charge of misleading advertising and was fined $1,500.

It also incorporates an FG servo-controlled DC motor for superior stability and accuracy. The Dolby noise reduction system featured on the A-103 is behind its component-level sound, found on few other decks in this price range. First Unlist Phone . . .

MONTREAL (CP) — For all you new millionaires, Loto Canada has just published a guide on how to handle your loot.

The 28-page booklet Wise Planning for Loto Canada Winners, is designed to soothe the trauma of becoming a million dollars richer overnight and is the final phase of a study of 93 big winners and how they handled or mishandled their windfall.

It is full of hints on how to keep your family and friendships intact without shelling out your winnings.

As the booklet says: "Your prize can bring you many pleasures and also some new problems."

It tells how to unlist your phone, how to invest and how to avoid paying gift taxes.

The booklet says you can give your spouse, country, municipality and your favorite charity unlimited gifts. Donating farmland to a family member and bequests in valid wills are also tax-free.

Otherwise the maximum value of a tax-free gift is $3,000.

Attempt to Free RCMP's Hands Died at Cabinet Level: McIlraith

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet minister who was responsible to Parliament for the RCMP from 1968 to late 1970 testified Thursday he was told by the RCMP Security Service it was crippled, inhibited and impeded by the law.

George McIlraith, 70, now a senator, told a Royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing that he was aware of the dilemma facing the security service: that members might have to break laws to carry out their duties.

But he said he was never made aware the Mounties actually were breaking the law — only that they were crippled in their investigation of terrorism in Quebec by the fact that they couldn't go beyond the law.

"They said they couldn't do their work?" asked royal commissioner Guy Gilbert.

"Yes," replied McIlraith.

"And they were left with no answer?"

McIlraith replied that solving the dilemma was the second priority in the autumn of 1970 when it was raised at official and cabinet-level meetings several times only to be deferred indefinitely at a Dec. 22, 1970, meeting headed by Prime Minister Trudeau.

The first priority was finding kidnapped British trade envoy James Cross and those who had abducted him McIlraith said.

McIlraith returns to the stand Tuesday but he already had earned unofficial plaudits from lawyers and Mounties in the audience for "best performance by a former solicitor-general," in two days of testimony this week.

Jean-Pierre Goyer, who succeeded McIlraith as solicitor-general, will follow him to the stand. Warren Allmand, another former solicitor-general, testified a month ago.

McIlraith portrayed himself as a cabinet minister who wasn't briefed when he became solicitor-general, who was half-blind with cataracts and couldn't read the documents and reports that came before him, and who couldn't recall the subject of law-breaking as a reality being discussed.

Questions to McIlraith focused on a Nov. 24, 1970, meeting of the cabinet committee on priorities and planning which was held to discuss the inherent contradiction facing the Security Service: lawbreaking in the line of duty.

McIlraith testified that poor eyesight prevented him from reading the report, which may not have come into his hands until the meeting was about to start.

He couldn't recall seeing a list of questions attached to the report, including one which asked: "What should be done to eliminate inherent contradiction in existing security service which turns around the question of the commission of crime in the national interest?"

He couldn't recall asking John Starnes, then director-general of the security service, for a briefing even though Starnes came to his office with another senior Mountie en route to the meeting.

And he said Starnes must have been talking about someone else when Starnes wrote in a personal memo that McIlraith raised with him the subject of RCMP law-breaking and was told the Mounties had been breaking the law in the line of duty for 20 years.

McIlraith said cabinet-level meetings engaged in "the widest-ranging generalities" and the recorded minutes sometimes set down "exactly the opposite" of what was said.

Furthermore, cabinet ministers didn't have an opportunity to correct such minutes.

CIDA Puts Quake Relief At $200,000

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian International Development Agency has contributed $200,000 to the Red Cross for emergency relief for victims of recent earthquakes in Yugoslavia, the agency has announced.

The agency cheque was sent through the Canadian Red Cross Society, which itself contributed $7,500.

Mexican '79 Quota Set at 18

WINNIPEG (CP) — Agriculture minister James Downey says 18 Mexican farm workers—one fewer than last year—will be allowed into Manitoba in 1979 to work for Portage la Prairie-area vegetable producers.

Downey, speaking to a legislature committee considering his departmental spending estimates, said most of the 60 permanent and 90 casual jobs on the vegetable farms will go to native workers.

The minister said there is a pool of between 150 and 200 native workers in the area. He said 60 of the native workers took courses in the winter designed to improve their skills in farm work.

Downey said the 18 Mexicans are being allowed in as a result of talks involving producers and the native workers, who are represented by the Manitoba Farm Workers Association (MFWA).

The MFWA protested in 1976 when 24 Mexicans were brought to work on Portage-area farms. The federal government did not allow any Mexican workers into Manitoba in 1977, when unemployment rates suggested preference be given to local workers.

Bill Uruski (NDP—St. George) said Manitoba's Progressive Conservative government should ensure that all vegetable farm jobs go to native people, instead of to imported workers.

"There is an attitude problem towards native help in that area, and a resistance to native help," Uruski said.

Lloyd Hyde (PC—Portage la Prairie) said he has nothing against native workers. But if a farmer has a valuable crop waiting to be harvested and no native workers are available, the farmer will use "the Mexican boys."

Sam Uskiw (NDP—Lac du Bonnet), minister of agriculture in the previous government, said the fundamental problem is to stabilize agricultural income, so farmers can pay competitive wages for farm workers.

Farm work at $3 or $4 an hour is "misery and it's slavery of the worst kind. The big issue is to have agriculture on a financial foot so that it can pay workers on the same basis that General Motors pays workers to build cars.

Injunction Eyed Over School Gym

MOOSE JAW (CP) — The Moose Jaw public school board has been accused of "selling Alexandra school parents down the river" with respect to the building of a new gymnasium, said Bob Wenman, chairman of the Alexandra school gymnasium committee at a meeting.

In 1977 the town burgesses voted $147,000 to be set aside for a new gymnasium for the school. The following year the school board rejected tenders for the project and now the board is suggesting the money be used for new construction at Westmount elementary school.

About 30 parents heard Wenman suggest the only way to get a point across to the school board would perhaps be to seek a court injunction halting all future construction of school buildings in the city public school system until action was taken in favor of Alexandra elementary school.

"The fears of the parents are that if Alexandra doesn't get a new gym, there won't be a school here long," said Wenman.

The parent's committee will meet with the school board soon and Wenman said "extraordinary action will be taken in order to get our point across and to let the board know we mean business."

Child Abuse Doubles

Gail Will, a provincial child abuse consultant to the city of Edmonton, said almost 8,400 cases were reported in 1978, compared with 4,500 in 1976.

The increase could be the result of a province-wide government publicity campaign aimed at enlisting public help to beat child abuse, Mrs. Will said.

She made the comments at a conference on child abuse.

Dr. Brenda Schmidt, a pediatrician with the city, said certain injuries are common to battered children such as bruises from body-to-body contact and injuries from shaking children. Shaking a child can tear veins leading into the brain and cause hemorrhaging.

Fran Grunberg, a child abuse specialist from Vancouver, said services which help relieve pressure on parents are useful in preventing child abuse.

Saskatoon Fines Hiked

SASKATOON (CP) — The city of Saskatoon has increased parking fines by $10 for all violations but will give $10 discounts if the fines are paid within 72 hours.

The city has been finding that without any real teeth in in a summons, 20 per cent of the fines went unpaid. Under the new system, a $3 dollar parking fine would increase to $13 unless the offender paid in less than 72 hours.

Moose Jaw and Regina have been using this system, but it has not been tested in the courts.

Park Road Set

EDMONTON (CP) — An Edmonton firm has been awarded a $2-million contract to build 14.5 miles of road into Kananaskis Provincial Park. North American Road Ltd. will build a road to connect the Spray Lakes area to the Kananaskis Highway.

Trudeau Drops Guard When Asking Students About 'Forced French'

By PAUL WHITELAW
FP News Service

ABBOTSFORD — Like a prizefighter momentarily dropping his guard, Prime Minister Trudeau left himself open to an unexpected counter punch Thursday when he asked a crowd here: "Has any of you ever been forced to speak French?"

"Yes," came the resounding reply.

But it wasn't a reeling blow and Trudeau emerged from the mid-day rally an apparent winner on points even if he didn't score a dazzling political knockout.

Winding up a four-day campaign foray into the crucial British Columbia election battleground, the PM was striking out at the opponents of Ottawa's bilingualism policies.

But he was speaking in the auditorium of the local Mennonite Separate School and forgot that more than half his audience of about 1,200 people were youngsters wrestling as exam time approaches, with a heavy load of compulsory courses, including French.

As the students rumbled affirmatively that they were being forced to speak the language, Trudeau quickly regained his footing and retorted: "What about mathematics? Has that been forced down your throats too?"

"Yes," the students responded much louder this time.

Trudeau, stressing the national unity theme of his campaign in a low-key 25-minute speech, noted that "three times" the previous he had been "told, 'why are you pushing French down our throats."

"There are some four million French-speaking Canadians in Quebec who don't speak English and probably never will," the PM noted, explaining Ottawa had to provide government services in both official languages to keep the country united.

Trudeau, looking at a sign-carrying man in the audience, interrupted his speech to explain:

"I'm (now) being asked a fourth time ... here's a 'Bilingulism Today, French Tomorrow' guy."

The man had raised a hand-printed placard alleging Trudeau was attempting to turn Canada into a unilingual francophone nation.

Then the PM asked if anyone in the audience had been forced to learn French.

"Why just pick out French?" Trudeau asked the students when he heard their response. "Why not pick out geography or history? Why do you single out what divides us?"

Adopting the professorial tone that turns his stump speeches into inspirational unity sermons, Trudeau continued with the comment that young Canadians who don't want to learn French could "Go and live in the woods somewhere."

The PM conceded there are "problems of unemployment and inflation and prices that are higher than we would like.

ELECTION 79

"But certainly this is not a miserable country in terms of the economy. And what is even more certain if we didn't have this community called Canada we wouldn't have this great (economic) record period."

Trudeau told his audience there is a "duty you have as Canadians" to vote for candidates of a party that didn't back away from the need for a strong central government to balance conflicting regional interests.

PM's Jibe Flying High . . .

ABBOTSFORD (UPC) — Pierre Trudeau, is offering voters a bird's eye view of the campaigns of his two political opponents.

The prime minister described NDP leader Ed Broadbent Thursday as flying "in close formation" with B.C. NDP leader Dave Barrett and the Canadian Labor Congress, but said both the Liberals and NDP had been upstaged by the "Tory flying circus."

Trudeau said Conservative leader Joe Clark had to share the limelight with provincial Tory leader Vic Stephens, "who's supposed to be his co-pilot" but wound up "out on the wing without a parachute."

B.C. Premier Bill Bennett appeared to be in Tory control tower, he added.

'FROM HUMBLE ROOTS. . .'

Clark . . . set for Toronto radio audience

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Joe Clark praised Canada Thursday as a country where a man like himself from humble roots can run against a millionaire's son and become prime minister.

"This is a nation, think of this if you will, where somebody from a little corner of the foothills in Alberta without much money behind him, without much of anything in background behind him, can stand in equal opportunity with a millionaire's son to become prime minister of Canada," he said.

The millionaires's son was a reference to Prime Minister Trudeau, whose father was a sucessful Montreal businessman.

The little corner of the foothills in Alberta was a reference to High River.

No Free Lunch, Clark Warns In Northeastern Ontario Swing

By JOHN MARSHALL
FP News Service

TORONTO — Joe Clark yesterday revived an old campaign slogan: There's No Free Lunch.

And in a long day that took him from Toronto to Timmins to Sault Ste. Marie and back to Toronto, he:

Gave his fall schedule for parliament and for federal provicial meetings if he heads the government;

Warned that a vote for a third party with no chance of forming the government was dangerous, and was a vote for Pierre Trudeau;

Said New Democratic leader Ed Broadbent has "signalled" that he plans to support Trudeau in parliament;

Charged that the prime minister, in suggesting he could stay in power with less seats than the Tories, had said in effect, "I am bigger than the people."

On an open-line radio talk show in Toronto (no tough questions) Clark said the Inco strike and some other private sector labor disputes might come under his proposed Industrial Disputes Commission. The IDC would decide what is an essential service, an area in which strikes could not be countenanced.

However he said he would prefer to have the public sector act as an encouraging example for the private one rather than to have a ban on the right to strike.

The Tory leader was handed the no-free lunch catch phrase by about a dozen young Timmins Liberals. They welcomed him with chants for Trudeau outside a hall packed with about 800 Conservatives.

Taking a leaf from the earliest chapter of the Trudeau campaign book, Clark sprang off his bus and, ignoring the security of the hall's entrance, veered quickly and aggressively right into the sign-waving huddle of hecklers.

He practically hit the sidewalk orating — about democracy, first in French then switching to English. The intensity of his approach moved the demonstrators a few feet back down the sidewalk.

At one point they roared with laughter when he said the Conservatives would win locally (northeastern Ontario is arrid country for the Tories.)

Then some of the youths, apparently in reference to the buffet lunch that had been served inside to hundreds of the party faithful, began chanting, "We want a free lunch."

"If you do, you're certainly in the right party," Clark said putting the phrase in a larger oldline idological context.

He said the young people that he was hearing from wanted no free lunches.

He invited the demonstrators into the hall to participate in democracy. They apparently declined — missing a normal partisan session with no heckling and no question period.

Clark related the story of his encountr with relish to the crowd.

And he said that Trudeau and the "Trudeau supporters in disguise, the NDP," have long-encouraged people to expect a free lunch.

His own policies, he said, were to encourage people to "help Canada to grow by going out and going to work." He said later, "government is not a free lunch, government is helping Canadians to build on the strength of this nation."

On the Toronto radio show he gave his schedule of action if he is elected to head the government.

After selecting his cabinet and making changes n the senior civil service he would call a short session of parliament in September or October.

However he plans a fairly heavy agenda for that session. there would be stimulative budget which, among other things, would include his mortgage deductability proposals, the tax cut averaging $300 for lower and middle income earners, and "some incentives to create jobs."

He would also bring before the house freedom of information act and he would give committees the power to initiate inquiries and to sit even when parliament is not sitting.

He said parliament would then "rise for a while" while committees would continue their work.

He said his cabinet would then focus on three major areas. They would look at ways to reduce waste in government. He said priority would be given — particularly from himsslf — to efforts to "modernize Confederation." He said he would probably call a meeting of provincial premiers before his first parliament met and that there would certainly be a series of meetings throughout the fall.

Finally, he said, he would make a major effort to consult with the private sector to try to work out strategy to build Canada's industrial strength. Out of such consultations he suggested, could come a number of things including guidance for tariff negotiations.

His approach Thursday was not devoid of humor. Some of his sniping at Broadbent is often heavy-handed but in references to the rainy day he encountered in Timmins he said he was sure it was for Broadbent — also visiting there today — not for himself. He suggested that that's all Broadbent was going to get out of the Timmins area.

He said there was one special issue in one area of northeastern Ontario that he hoped the voters would take into consideration and that was the desire of two of his nephews who live there to swim in the famous Trudeau pool on Sussex Drive.

Three Political Antagonists United in This One Cause

MONTREAL (CP) — Three political opponents in the May 22 federal election have joined forces to sue suburban City of Lachine for a total of $5,000 for ripping down their campaign posters.

Liberal MP Rod Blaker, Peter Blaikie of the Progressive Conservatives and New Democrat Burford Norman are also seeking an interim injunction from Quebec Superior Court to block the municipality from removing any more posters.

City employees took the campaign material off utility poles after the city council voted last week to enforce a bylaw prohibiting posters on public property.

The candidates, all running in Lachine riding, counter that the poles are owned by Hydro-Quebec, a provincial Crown corporation, and privately-owned Bell Canada.

"If the interim injunction is granted . . . we will be able to put them (the posters) up in non-public areas as defined by the Cities and Towns Act and the court," Roy Amaron, the lawyer representing the candidates, said Thursday.

Action Aplenty for Broadbent . . .

By PATRICK NAGLE
FP News Service

TIMMINS, Ont. — It took two flying leaps to get here but New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent found plenty of action when he finally landed in Northern Ontario hard-rock country.

Bad weather Wednesday night forced the NDP election campaign jet to divert to Ottawa and the snowstorm here Thursday was no screaming welcome eigher.

Indeed, Broadbent might have wondered why he flew at dawn for a high school question and answer session at l'Ecole Secondaire Theriault.

The students were appreciative of his warm-up pitch, which included his campaign issues — unemployment, inflation, resource ownership and his newly-defined home ownership policy.

He switched confidently from French to English, perhaps too confidently, because the first question was about why he had not been more forceful about national unity.

"It is not a question in this campaign for this reason," Broadbent said, "we have all three leaders — myself and Joe Clark and Pierre Trudeau — all accepted federalists.

"When the referendum is called in Quebec I will go to Quebec to fight for federalism just like the other leaders."

Then things got sticky.

Broadbent tried to explain that Prime Minister Trudeau was motivated as a Quebec-born politician.

The students hooted him down.

They insisted that the issue was not a Quebec one but a Canadian one to be addressed by both anglophones and francophones.

The NDP leader then shifted his attack to Trudeau as the leader of a government which had watched the Quebec separatist movement grow during 11 years in office.

A student responded by pointing out that, historically, there had been a strong Quebec nationalist movement at work long before Trudeau was born.

Broadbent agreed that was correct but he took one last shot at the prime minister, saying that Trudeau's attitude towards the aspirations of Quebec had aggravated the problem.

"Claude Ryan, the leader of the Liberal Party in Quebec, thinks exactly the same way I do, I assure you," Broadbent said.

The rest of the day went well as he travelled by road to Smooth Rock Falls for a buffet lunch at the Canadian Legion.

The crowd of about 300 responded vigorously to the man they described as "the next prime inister of Canada and the first national political leader ever to visit Smooth Rock Falls."

Broadbent said such communities could benefit from an industrial strategy which produced more manufactured goods in Canada rather than exporting raw materials.

He said the federal government-backed Canadian Development Corporation and the Export Development Corporation were "examples of mindless economic planning."

The CDC in particular, he said, was a "scandal" because — as an NDP idea — the corporation was to create jobs in Canada.

Instead, Broadbent said, the CDC had grown in such a fashion that it "now controls more jobs outside Canada than within Canada."

Later in the afternoon he visited the Spruce Falls Power and Paper Company in Kapuskasing where the employee lunchroom was jammed to the walls with men wearing green hardhats decorated with brown and orange NDP buttons.

The workers appreciated Broadbent's promise to protect the universal medicare benefits in the country.

He said he would seek federal authority, "to ensure where a buck is given for medicare, that buck is spent on medicare.

"We don't intend to bring back to Canada a system of one treatment for the rich and another one for the poor," he said. In thanking him, Tom Curley of the Canadian Paper Workers Union, described Broadbent as "the inevitable future prime minister of Canada."

"Remember the turkey we were given on Oct. 14, 1975 (wage and salary controls)," Curley said.

"Just remember on May 22 to return the dressing to the turkey (Trudeau) who gave us that turkey."

In the evening Broadbent met party workers in the Timmins-Chapleau riding where he once again tackled Trudeau on national unity.

He said he felt the morning's students might have been Liberals, which the partisan night crowd agreed with.

"National unity is an important thing to Trudeau because he has fouled up everything else," he said. "It is phoney for the prime minister to raise this issue when his economic record is abyssmal."

LONDON (CP) — Rabbits are multiplying so fast in many parts of England that they have become a major threat to farmers, a recent agriculture ministry report says. It says a new strain of rabbits has developed immunity to diseases which had kept the animal population down for 20 years. It is estimated that the rabbits are destroying crops worth £100 million each year.

Barrett Adds Manufacturing Plank to Platform

B.C. '79

CRANBROOK (CP) — Dave Barrett added an industrial strategy aimed at expanding processing of B.C. resources to the NDP's election platform Thursday night.

The party leader told a rally that attracted a standing room crowd of 400 to a school gymnasium that the time is ripe to increase manufacturing because the decline of the Canadian dollar against other currencies has reduced production costs by 30 to 40 per cent.

He said fewer than three per cent of B.C.'s exports are finished manufactured goods, a record worse than Mexico.

"If B.C. did the same level of processing of its forest cut as central Canada, the B.C. forest industry would generate an additional 70,000 jobs without any increase in the volume of timber cut," he said.

Barrett said an NDP government would institute purchasing programs to give B.C. suppliers an advantage in supplying needs of Crown corporations and large private corporations.

Tax policies would be adjusted to stimulate increased processing of resources. Barrett has said earlier that resource royalites would be negotiated with individual resource developers.

He also said Thursday night that an NDP government, through such agencies as the B.C. Development Corp., would assist companies that undertake a certain level of resource processing.

Government research and development efforts also would be strengthened to develop new products in manufacturing.

Barrett did not give specifics about his manufacturing programs but when a questioner asked how they would be financed, he repeated his claim that selling B.C. natural gas at international prices would bring in an additional $150 million a year and a dollar-a-ton increase in coal royalties would add an additional $10 million.

He also pointed to previous NDP aims of setting up a steel mill and an oil refinery.

Asked if higher royalites would scare off resource developers, he said "resources must produce jobs and security for everyone, not just the millionaires and car dealers," a label he frequently applies to the Social Credit government and its supporters.

"We'll go a little bit slower, we'll be a little more cautious but we'll never lose the dream that we want to be masters in our own house."

The rally in support of Kootenay candidate Doug Wright, a 29-year-old insurance agent, was reminiscent of Barrett's platform performances in the 1972 campaign as he warmed his audience with anecdotes — many of them recycled — about how his government saved and created jobs with its corporation purchases.

He also provided National Hockey League playoff scores and dropped the gloves with a couple of personal shots at Premier Bill Bennett.

He waved a newspaper headline that said Bennett felt the campaign is boring and again said Bennett is avoiding a face-to-face debate with him.

"I believe the premier is out to win the election by boring us to death," Barrett. "If he can't undertand the problems of ordinary people he should be thrown out.

"People are beginning to say he is afraid to face me and face the people and own up for 3½ years of bad government in B.C."

Kootenay is a riding the NDP will concentrate on in this election. It was held from 1949 to 1975 by Leo Nimsick.

Nimsick, who was present at the rally Thursday night, retired from politics and car dealer George Haddad, a former Cranbrook mayor, defeated steelworkers executive Jim Patterson by 692 votes in the 1975 general election.

This time Haddad has retired.

Barrett Goads Bennett On TV Debate

VANCOUVER (CP) — NDP leader Dave Barrett called Premier Bill Bennett childish Thursday as he continued his attempts to goad the premier into a debate.

"I just think that anyone who is witnessing the childish behavior of the premier knows he is abandoning his responsibility to deal with the issues," Barrett said in an airport interview before taking his election campaign to the Kootenays.

Barrett was commenting on a statement by the premier Wednesday that he would not debate with the NDP leader to help sell television commercials.

Bennett also withdrew from a church-sponsored meeting here when he found out that Barrett would not be there.

The premier said Barrett was afraid to meet him on the podium, but Barrett said he had a prior campaign commitment and the organizers knew that.

Barrett said Bennett might not want to sell television commercials in a one-on-one debate, but pointed out that the premier used more than 20 minutes of prime tv time to announce the election on April 3.

Barrett is scheduled to appear on Jack Webster's morning television show on BCTV May 7 and Bennett is scheduled May 8. Barrett said he will be available both days to debate with the premier.

"Whatever excuse he seeks to pursue is one he will have to pursue and explain," Barrett said. "I'll be available."

20% 'Off' Voters' List

KIMBERLEY (CP) — Voter enumeration has been so poor that 20 per cent of the eligible electors in Kimberley have been left off the list, Columbia River NDP candidate Sandy Smaill said Thursday.

She said in an interview she is not saying there are irregularities in the May 10 election, but voter registration figures "are not in accord with what has happened in the constituency."

"There are new subdivisions and new apartments going up in Kimberley. The voter population has not grown smaller."

She produced party figures which showed there were 5,242 registered voters in Kimberley for the 1975 election but that number has dropped by more than 1,000 to 4,212 for the 1979 vote.

"That's a pretty good indication that lots of people were left off the list," she said.

Party president Yvonne Cocke had asked for more time to enumerate voters when the election was called but the Social Credit government refused.

NDP figures show the drop in Kimberley, where 61 per cent of those who cast ballots supported the New Democrats in 1975, contrasts with an increase in registration to 1,006 from 970 in Invermere, hometown of Lands Minister James Chabot, where the NDP had the support of only 14 per cent of the vote in the last election.

In Golden there were 2,076 registered voters in 1975 but are 1,940 this time. Canal Flats has 474 voters compared with 541 in the previous election.

"We worry more about the drop in Kimberley than the growth in Invermere," said Ms. Smaill, a 29-year-old lawyer.

Columbia River has been a traditional Social Credit stronghold. Chabot held it by 241 votes when the NDP became government in 1972 and his plurality over NDP candidate Orlando Pecora increased to 1,435 in the last election.

Ms. Smaill says a major issue in the riding is the proposal to divert Kootenay River water into the Columbia system at Canal Flats to provide more generating power for the Revelstoke and Mica dams.

Social Credit is not committed to the project and Chabot has threatened to resign if it happens but Ms. Smaill says B.C. Hyudro is continuing its studies on the diversion.

"That indicates things are still amiss."

The diversion would reduce the flushing effect of the Kootenay River on effluent from the Crestwood Forest Products pulp mill at Skookumchuck. Other issues are the area economy, export of resources and the lack of public transportation, she said.

Bennett Struts on Barrett Turf

Bennett drums for support in Barrett's riding

By CHARLES LaVERTU

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett walked the street of east Vancouver in an effort to fulfill his prediction that NDP leader Dave Barrett will lose in his own riding in the May 10 provincial election.

Bennett said he is still convinced that Barrett will finish fourth in the Vancouver East riding that he and former attorney-general Alex Macdonald represented in the last parliament.

Barrett lost in Coquitlam in the 1975 election, then won a byelection after former cabinet minister Bob Williams resigned his seat to make way for the party leader. Barrett won 19,900 votes to 7,000 for his Social Credit opponent.

The premier said it is the second election prediction he has made. His first, he said, was a prediction that Barrett would lose in Coquitlam in 1975.

During his tour of the riding with Socred candidates Bernie "Whistling" Smith, a retired policeman, and Vancouver Ald. Helen Boyce, Bennett attracted many well-wishers, particularly in the Italian section of the constituency.

This was in sharp contrast to the reception he received while mainstreeting earlier in the week in Saanich on Vancouver Island and in Prince Pupert where few people turned out to greet him and he was forced to enter stores in search of hands to shake.

Bennett said he has been welcomed warmly on his campaign tour of the province.

"I get a good feeling back," he said. "I feel there is a mood of quiet confidence in B.C. and I hope it will not turn into complacency. We have two weeks to go, and I will work as hard as I can."

The premier said during an interview at another senior citizens' home, one of his favorite campaign venues, that the key riding as far as he is concerned is Okanagan South, his own riding.

He said he is also interested in the new riding of Shuswap-Revelstoke which is being contested by Len Bawtree, the Social Credit MLA in the former Shuswap riding, and former labor minister Bill King, the NDP MLA from the old Revelstoke-Slocan riding.

Other key ridings, he said, are the new Coquitlam-Moody and Maillardville-Coquitlam constituencies and Alberni on Vancouver Island.

"These are key because of the mix of voters, the changes in boundaries and the closeness of votes in the last election."

Bennett, who also met federal NDP candidate Ian Waddell, said the people of Vancouver East want to support "someone who lives there."

"They don't want to be considered a constituency of convenience any longer for the NDP absentee leadership."

Bennett said he decided not to take part in an all-leaders' meeting Thursday because Barrett would not be there. Bennett said Tuesday that he would appear even if Barrett didn't.

"My campaign committee advised me that they had negotiated on the understanding that both leaders would be there."

Instead, he said, he would return to his old schedule which was amended to allow for the meeting of party leaders.

Premier Bids On Pay TV

VANCOUVER (CP) — A California pay television system offering first-run movies such as The Goodbye Girl has agreed to sell half its shares to a Vancouver firm that hopes the experience will help it sell Canadians the same service.

George Fierheller, president of Premier Cablevision Ltd., said Thursday his company expects to complete an agreement in May to buy shares in California Satellite Systems, which shows new movies, celebrity specials and live sports events in Sacramento and Stockton, Calif.

The California system provides 10 or 12 new movies repeated several times during the month, live sports events such as boxing and soccer matches as well as other specials not shown on regular channels. It costs $13 a month.

"I think Canadian television viewers are ready for something like this," said Fierheller in an interview.

He said that although pay television has not yet been approved by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, he hopes buying into the California company will give Premier first-hand information on the marketing and distribution of pay television. Purchase price was not disclosed.

Premier, through its subsidiaries, provides cable television service to 530,000 subscribers in the Vancouver area, Victoria, part of Toronto, Borden and Oakville, Ont., along with Dublin and Waterford, Ire.

Fierheller said cable subscribers, who pay about $6.50 a month each, would pay an additional charge if they want the entertainment package. That price is still undetermined but he said both standard and additional cable services might total $15.

Federal Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve, Fierheller noted, has said pay television is inevitable in Canada and the Canadian Television Association has asked the CRTC for permission to introduce it.

He said Premier also is beginning to invest in films being produced in Canada and it is possible some of them could be shown through the American pay television system.

Fierheller said Premier, primarily Canadian with 16 per cent of its shares owned by Columbia Broadcasting System of the United States, is looking at several other undisclosed American aquisitions, but "we would rather spend our money on pay television in Canada, if the CRTC lets us."

Premier reported Thursday net earnings for the six months ended Feb. 28 of $2,257,000 or 67.7 cents a share compared with $2,116,000 or 63.5 cents a share for the corresponding period a year ago.

Chabot Denies Lauk's Charge

SALMON ARM (CP) — Lands Minister Jim Chabot said Thursday there is no substance to an NDP charge that the Social Credit government's plan to release Crown land will mainly benefit land speculators.

Chabot, speaking on an open-line radio program, said Gary Lauk, NDP lands ministry critic, made a wild charge to grab headlines.

Chabot said the government does not intend to make the land available to real estate agents, but is releasing it for the benefit of all British Columbians.

Lauk said Wednesday he has information which shows the government's scheme will give some of the land to the public, but the largest share and choicest land will go to speculators.

Boarding School Flavor To Drug Addict Centre

NANAIMO (CP) — Groups opposing the government's controversial heroin addiction treatment program will have little to complain about when they discover how the programs have been packaged.

With its freshly-painted corridors, unbarred windows and holiday-resort scenery, the Brannen Lake residential treatment centre for heroin addicts just north of here looks more like a well-equipped boarding school than a detention centre where unwilling junkies will be forced to kick the habit.

"We're certainly trying to demonstrate this as a treatment resource rather than a lock-up or penal institution," centre director John Higenbottam said during opening ceremonies earlier this month.

"It's true that we have the legal sanctions if somebody wants to go out of treatment, but we're not going to be using lock-ups here or solitary confinement or things like that."

The six-to-10-bed wards each have a lounge area beside a large, unbarred window. There are plants and pictures and black vinyl furniture in the lounge.

Curtains are red or green and the bedspreads are all bright yellow. Beds are separated from each other by semi-partitions and each patient has his own night-table and lamp.

The patients, voluntary or otherwise, will spend six months at the centre, then be released back into their own communities for the remainder of the three-year treatment term provided by the program.

When they are back on their own, a network of community clinics and follow-up services will try to keep them from returning to the drug subculture.

Although the facility opened its doors at the beginning of April, it has so far had only two occupants — both on their own accord.

There are about 30 other voluntary patients on the waiting list, but they first must go through evaluation assessment panels which were just recently established by a cabinet order-in-council.

The non-volunteers will start coming into the system in the next few months when the centre begins accepting referrals from the criminal courts and the police.

Higenbottam said programs at the centre will be aimed at getting addicts to chance their basic attitudes, to find alternatives to their drug-centre lifestyles.

For those who can't be persuaded to want to be treated, there is little standing between them and escape. Security consists largely of 17 unarmed security officers, a high wire fence and wire mesh screens over windows in certain parts of the building.

Higenbottam said he is relying on the legal deterrent to keep compulsory patients in the centre. A summary conviction for escaping could mean a fine of up to $2,000 or a six-month jail sentence.

"I would think most addicts would rather be treated here than be imprisoned," he said.

Higenbottam said one of the major functions of the security staff and the wire fence is to keep illicit drugs out of the centre. Patients will be monitored daily by urinalysis to determine if any drugs are getting through.

Patients first coming into the centre will go through detoxification — withdrawal from heroin by methadone under medical supervision.

Efforts then will be made to bring their health up to par through proper nutrition and treatment of acute physical conditions such as hepatitis.

After about two weeks of withdrawal and health restoration, patients will enter the six-month regular program, which includes long-term counselling, therapy and educational assistance.

Higenbottam said that, while the centre is preparing for an influx of patients, the numbers will depend on what the courts do with the program.

"If it becomes a diversionary program, we could see a large number of people coming in."

The legality of the heroin treatment program now is being challenged in the courts.

Ruth Schneider, a patient taking the province's methadone treatment program, is attempting to show that the Heroin Treatment Act, passed in June, 1978, is unconstitutional because it comes under federal, not provincial jurisdiction. She is being supported by the B.C. Civil Liberties Ass.

Despite the opposition, Health Minister Bob McClelland is pushing ahead optimistically and, at the centre opening, criticized the federal government for not supporting the program.

"I have said in Ottawa and in other places that this is Canada's problem despite the fact that it is manifested most seriously in B.C.," he said.

Forest Fire Danger Low

The forest fire danger remains low throughout most of B.C. but a prolonged warm spell quickly would increase the danger, H. G. Doerksen, provincial fire suppression manager, said Friday.

Doerksen said 37 new fires were reported this week bringing the 1979 total to 82. Twenty-six fires were still burning.

Rapid Transit Link-up Seen

An experiment in light rapid transit between Victoria City and Colwood could be under way within five years, Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf said Thursday night.

He said the final decison would be up to the Urban Transit Authority but it should be feasible to run light rail commuter coaches from Colwood to the city, at least on an experimental basis.

Trial runs could begin sooner, using existing E&N coaches, but it is more likely the UTA will wait until more appropriate rail cars are available.

Bawlf made the comments at a meeting of the Victoria West Community Development Association.

He and Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber were discussing needs of Victoria West at a meeting planned before the election was called. The discussion was basically non-political and dealt with long-term planning for the community of 4,000 people.

Residents expressed concern about heavy traffic through Vic West, which tends to divide the community into smaller regions.

Barber said the E&N rail line must become a light rapid transit service to relieve the pressure on roads through the Vic West area.

Barber said, in addition, some streets should have traffic barriers to permit local traffic only.

Bawlf added that recent improvements to the Island Highway also should result in less traffic going through the Vic West community.

Barber and Bawlf stressed the need to preserve at least parts of the district on a heritage basis.

They also urged the establishment of additional facilities, especially for recreation and cultural events.

Fitness Beat For Police

After three years planning, Saanich police force is to get its own made-to-measure physical fitness program.

The police board Thursday approved spending up to $300 to permit a four to six-man team of officers enroll in a 10-week training class that the Victoria YMCA has set up in cooperation with the force.

Chief Bob Peterson said today the team will then appraise the fitness standards of their colleagues and set up individual or group programs.

Selection of the team members hasn't been made yet but Peterson hopes at least one will be a woman. There are four policewomen on the force.

Peterson said a special committee of the Saanich Police Association, comprising Sgt. Bill Chisholm and Constables Chris Bowles and Derek Egan, has spent three years working out details of the program which hopefully will be developed in seven stages.

He said the next major stage will be to acquire gym equipment and set up a work-out room in an area of the police station basement now used for storage. Firemen will be invited to use the facility, but not other municipal staff members.

Later there are plans to develop a jogging trail in the nearby Swan Creek area and eventually a circuit training track with 18 exercise stations will be put in. It will likely be open to the public.

Get Ombudsperson, VGH Told

The board of the Victoria General Hospital was told in no uncertain terms Thursday that the Southern Vancouver Island Society wants an ombudsperson and not a mechanism at the hospital.

The position has been a core of controversy at the hospital board ever since board member Dr. Eugene Kaellis brought up the need for an ombudsperson at a society meeting last fall but failed to get support from his fellow board members.

Kaellis received overwhelming support from society members but the board resisted the idea, saying a qualified person would require full-time work at a salary as high as $25,000. This, they said, the hospital cannot afford.

Instead the board instituted an ombudsperson service this month, using existing nursing and social services staff. Patients admitted to hospital receive a card outlining the service.

Kaellis went to Thursday's meeting with a resolution that the society reaffirm its earlier support for an ombudsperson and that an ombudsperson be at the hospital by June 1. He noted the earlier resolution had not mentioned any salary, leaving the position open to a volunteer.

Kaellis said an ombudsperson must be independent of the hospital so as to be able to handle complaints without conflict of interest.

While some society members praised the board for doing what best it could under financial restrictions, Kaellis received strong support from the society.

Hospital board chairman Alan Patterson defended the service concept, which is on a six-month trial basis, as an experiment to test the need for an ombudsperson.

The society finally passed an amended resolution by Kaellis, which calls for a volunteer ombudsperson to be working with the full cooperation of the hospital staff and the board by not later than June 1.

Employees Eligible to Join

Employees of the Victoria General Hospital can now become members of the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society which manages the hospital.

The society agreed to the change Thursday but not before Oak Bay Ald. Doug Watts, former chairman of the hospital board, warned it could lead to a takeover of the hospital by the employees.

He told the special general meeting the hospital is a public institution and, as such, should be controlled by the general public.

He said the amendment allowing employees to become members "will in effect abdicate the role of the society."

Watts said the hospital has 1,200 employees who could pack the society's annual general meeting and elect their friends to the board of management.

The amendments approved Thursday still stop hospital employees from running directly for seats on the board of management, although one seat is reserved for an employee.

Watts said, with friends on the board of management, employees could influence the hospital to withdraw from the Health Labor Relations Association, the bargaining association for B.C. hospitals, and negotiate a sweetheart contract.

Rampaging Rivers Spell Destruction

Carter Sends Aid

Associated Press

President Carter declared 40 counties in North Dakota a federal disaster area Thursday and Minnesota Gov. Al Quie said he will request similar designation for Minnesota sections of the valley once the water has receded enough to assess damage.

Red River floodwaters, surging toward an expected crest today, were sweeping along a 240-kilometre front of prime prairie farmland north from Grand Forks, N.D.

The flat, fertile Red River Valley allows no real drainage, and one of the National Guard helicopter pilots scouring the flooded area for marooned farm families reported "water as far as you could see going north into Canada."

In East Grand Forks, Minn., and its sister community, Grand Forks, N.D., the Red River climbed to more than 15 metres late Thursday, 46 centimetres under its expected crest. An estimated 2,000 persons remain away from their homes in the beleaguered communities, civil defence officials say.

The only cheery note was the fact that, for the first time this week, the Red River Valley was also bathed in sunshine.

Meanwhile, a hot sun baked South Florida Thursday as residents of the wealthy Gold Coast area north of Miami tried to dry out following this week's record rainfall of more than 40 centimetres in a 24-hour period.

In northeast Louisiana, heavy rains along the Mississippi River produced flooding in Catahoula, Concordia and LaSalle parishes and the evacuation of 175 familes.

Farmers tend sheep and chickens on island of dry land on north of Oslo, Minn.

RISING, RISING rising are the waters of Goulais River north of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., where spring runoff combined with rains have combined to create flooding conditions. Some homes in northern Ontario have been evacuated and transportation by road and rail has been interrupted. Here Lawrence Tallot of the Ontario ministry of transportation and communications studies situation.

Looks Like Grain Disaster

WINNIPEG (CP) — The mass of water creeping across the Red River Valley floor, destructive and obstructive as it is to farming, will leave some good in its wake.

The thousands of acres touched by the floodwater will be left with a crown of thin, black but fertile silt.

But that's the only good news for farmers existing on the flat valley floor at the suffrance of the capricious Red. The rest is bad news and getting worse.

Some consolation was given Thursday by Transport Minister Otto Lang who toured the devastation by air. Lang, who also is the minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, said there will be financial assistance under federal-provincial programs for damage to homes, buildings, furniture, and farm land.

Efforts are being made to move trains into afflicted areas over whatever lines are still operational, to bring out grain and other goods.

"Another day or two of rising waters will stop all grain movement into or out of grain elevators in the Red River Valley," said Keith Wilson of Manitoba Pool Elevators.

"I'd say 70 to 75 of Pool's elevators in the area will be out of commission by the end of the week."

Wilson said more than $100 million worth of crops could be in jeopardy of downgrading or loss, depending on how wet binned grains get and how they recover after farms dry out.

It was estimated that up to one-third of the province's total crop of 150 million bushels stored on farms is in the flooded area.

A spokesman for Canadian National Railways said that since last Friday 173 cars were moved in to take out grain. A special unit of 25 cars went out from Winnipeg on Thursday to take out grain from St. Agathe.

But Wilson said time is rapidly running out for rail cars going south of Winnipeg to haul out grain.

"Anything not moved today or tomorrow isn't going to get out for some time," he said.

The flood also is soaking up valuable time needed for spring seeding operations in the valley.

Normally, spring seeding gets under way by early May and sometimes much earlier. It may be early June before valley farmers can get on the land.

"Some farmers have got by in the past planting as late as the first part of June," said Al Martin, crop sections chief of the provincial department of agriculture.

"But pushing the growing season into autumn runs serious risks of frost damage."

Most of those affected likely will switch cropping practices to seed earlier-maturing varieties.

Others may stay with traditional crops and pray for the weather to give them a break. They may feel they deserve one.

Wraps On Machine

A Victoria man building a machine to harvest milfoil from Okanagan Lakes isn't going to show it to the public until it undergoes trials next month.

Errol Stewart, who won a $10,000 design prize for his weed-eating machine, has almost completed it but is keeping it under wraps.

He will get a further $50,000 if the machine does a good job of cleaning lakes of weeds this summer.

A spokesman for the environment ministry said Stewart has requested no visitors and no publicity until his machine is ready for testing.

Drug Jurors Excused

Jurors were excused until Monday morning when the two-weeks-old narcotics conspiracy trial of five accused resumed in Victoria county court Thursday.

The five are Garth Clarence Vincent Joseph Sexton, 28, of Vancouver; Ronald Cecil Spurrell, 31, of Surrey; Frederick Charles Scott, 28, of Vancouver; John Mobley Doss, 25, of Dillon, Colo., and Frank Piersanti, an American, who were arrested near Tofino last July.

Police siezed 13.63 tons of marijuana valued at $20 million, and charged the men with conspiracy to import a narcotic, importing a narcotic and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

Fourteen others are not indicted but are named as co-conspirators.

Submissions by the Crown and defence counsel, and from Sexton who is representing himself, were expected to be presented to the jury Monday.

Smooth Design Sailing

The Canadian Coast Guard reversed engines and went off on a whole different tack to win Victoria's support for a warehouse at the new marine base on Dallas Road.

As a result city council spiked its guns Thursday and voted approval for the new structure.

City hall and the Coast Guard have been exchanging salvos over the base for several months because of a building design that council found totally unacceptable.

At one point Mayor Mike Young called the planned building "crude and gross," while Ald. Bob Wright suggested cutting off water and electrical services to the base if the structure were built against the city's wishes.

But council members didn't fire a single shot at the Coast Guard in Thursday's meeting.

Ald. Bill McElroy today explained that the Coast Guard had won city hall support by completely redesigning the building.

"They hired a different architect, redrew the plans and design details, and got full approval from (council's) advisory design panel, the body that had initially opposed their plans," said McElroy.

He said the warehouse now fits in with the other buildings at the Coast Guard base.

"The open work yard us covered over now, too," added McElroy, "and that was one of the big bugaboos."

TOWN TALK

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis announced Thursday that the assistants were being placed on leave-without-pay until the day after the provincial election.

Whether or not they'll have jobs to come back to after May 10 is something that remains to be seen.

Like wildflowers? Then this is your weekend for lilies.

Some other plants to be seen are large white trilliums, clumps of yellow wood violets and the false lily-of-the-valley.

An unusual plant is wild ginger, which is in no way associated with the spice. It has heart-shaped leaves and a three-parted calyx with whip-tip lobes. The flower is brownish-purplish.

There is also hellebore, sometimes called Indian poke, a large plant with clasping leaves rising a foot or two above the forest floor.

The plant reserve on the flood plain of Sutton Creek is situated about a half-mile past the bridge over the creek at Honeymoon Bay. A sign along the highway to Caycuse indicates the presence of the wildflower site.

This Sunday members of the Victoria Natural History Society, as well as visitors from the mainland, plan to visit the reserve.

His wife, Anne, says the 65-year-old veteran of B.C. political wars is doing well and venturing out with the occasional visit to the local store.

She says the operation was a success.

"They got it all. He's doing beautifully, I guess he's very tough."

"It might get him too excited."

Strachan last served as B.C. agent-general in London, England, a position he held from late 1975 to August, 1977.

When White Spot restaurants go funky in the near future, a lot of the credit can be claimed by Attica, Victoria's largest dealer in used furnishings, fixtures, windows and architectural artifacts.

The firm recently shipped $5,000 worth of stained glass windows to be used by General Foods in renovations of the restaurant at 72nd and Granville.

General manager Patrick Wemyss said it was typical of the kind of requests coming from restaurant chains and individuals in various parts of Canada and the U.S.

One string of eating places, which he could not identify, just paid $23,000 for a package of various old items including arched doorways made of oak, bevelled glass and brass for a Vancouver-restaurant, and a brass mailbox for one in Hamilton.

The minister announced Thursday he intends to hold a series of public meetings around the province to discuss the Fish and Wildlife branch's proposed new wildlife management plan.

The meetings begin May 23 and continue until June 21. Election day is May 10, but Mair obviously doesn't expect any developments then that might force him to change his plans.

A round of applause from this corner for B.C. Hydro, a crown corporation often criticized for its ugly contributions to our urban landscapes: power lines, bunker-like substations and all the rest.

But a new substation planned for downtown Vancouver is evidence of a change of attitude. The four-floor structure with a total of 155,000 square feet will be, idiomatically and literally, out of sight — 50 feet underground beneath a city park.

Described as the first of its kind in Canada, it's a joint venture between Hydro and the city of Vancouver.

The only hint of its presence will be six round ventilation pillars projecting about 20 feet into the air.

From the local girl makes good department word that Victoria singer Jane MacKenzie so dazzled members of Britain's prestigious Royal Society of Arts that they awarded her a grant of about $2,500 to continue her U.K. studies.

She got the award after appearing before panel of 12 judges, including world-renowned singer Janet Baker and British tenor Sir Peter Pears, who decided to take her as a student at the Benjamin Britten-Peter Pears Summer Classes.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The first Tall Ship to be built in Victoria during this century is taking shape in the scrap metal yard of Capital Iron and Metals Ltd. on the city waterfront.

Her owner, Claude Lacerte, began working on her in November, helped by a friend, Tim Doherty.

Lacerte is building her of steel because it is faster and cheaper. When completed the 118-foot overall vessel will be a three-masted barquentine.

Lacerte has taken the hull lines and rigging from the wooden-hulled Tall Ship Regina Maris and plans to add a large cabin.

Some people on the waterfront are shaking their heads at the rather unorthodox way in which Lacerte is building the massive hull but he says he has learned from reading and watching others' mistakes.

"I'm not a builder, I'm a seaman," he says.

Lacerte has had a love affair with boats and ships since he was a boy in Trois Rivieres. His first boat was a 15-foot dinghy he and his chum built. Her sails and the two boys' matching sailor suits were sewn by Lacerte's mother.

Since then he has never been far from the sea. He left the navy as a lieutenant seven years ago to buy the old-timer Marabell and run her as a charter boat. He sold her in order to finance his latest dream.

"I decided to go steel five years ago and bought a welding unit for Marabell's engine room," he says, adding his experience has been gained from what he learned from a crew member who was also a welder, books and a short course at Camosun College.

He started work on the hull in November, working in rain and snow with only some plywood planks on two sides of the steel frame that surrounds the hull to ward off the elements.

Others on the waterfront are wondering how Lacerte is going to get the hull off dryland into the water once it is completed. Lacerte says this is no problem. He will do what they do in Quebec; bulldoze a slope from where the hull sits to the water's edge and have her pulled off by a tug.

Lacerte says her launching should take place in June and then she'll spend a year alongside as the rest of her is completed, finally going on the ways to have her engine and other equipment installed and her hull gussied with paint.

This is the first boat he's built in steel but there have been many more wooden boats built by Lacerte since that first 15-foot dinghy. Like that dinghy the barquentine will be very much a home-made effort.

He and his wife Pauline intend to make her many sails. Her masts and spars will also be home-produced. The lower masts will be of steel while the upper masts and spars will be hewn from spruce.

A determined man, Lacerte says the barquentine will be ready to go into operation in the spring of 1980.

She will be named Belle Blonde in honor of his blonde wife and two daughters. She will be the second boat of that name the Lacertes have owned, the last one being a 36-foot ketch.

During the first seasons, Lacerte says, he will concentrate on fishing charters because he will need the money to meet operating costs.

Ultimately, however, he hopes to use her as a sailing school, having students aboard from grades 10, 11 and 12, who will put in seatime from October to April or May, sailing before the mast to such far-away places as the Caribbean islands.

While the Belle Blonde's cadets are at sea Lacerte says they will keep up their academic studies through provincial goverment correspondence courses.

Eventually, he says, Belle Blonde will be away from her home port 10 months of the year in her dual role of sailing school and charter vessel.

Does he ever have second-thoughts about tackling such a huge project?

No 'Pistol Point' Talks On Island Sale: Curtis

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis charged Thursday the owners of Sidney Island are holding a pistol to the government's head to ensure they will be allowed to develop the island the way they want.

The "pistol," Curtis said, is a parcel of 105 acres of land that the government wants to buy to extend the existing Sidney Spit Marine Park on the island.

He said the owners of the island, particularly principal owner Jack Todd, are willing to sell the land for a park but only if the government will guarantee in advance that they will be allowed to subdivide the rest of the island.

Until that guarantee is given, the owners have said they will not sell the land for any price, said Curtis, who is seeking re-election in the Saanich and the Islands riding, which includes Sidney Island.

But David Orton, chairman of the Vancouver Island region of the B.C. Federation of Naturalists, said Curtis's charge is sheer nonsense.

He said for two years Todd negotiated with the governemt to sell the island for a park but the governemnent last year turned the offer down.

He said maturalists groups on the island favor purchase of the whole island but think the price of $3.7 million is too high.

"Our position is if the owner does not reduce his price the government should take the island over. Curtis knows the the government can do this."

Orton also recalled that at a meeting held in Nanaimo in March, Environment Minister Ralph Mair was quoted as saying that it was against Social Credit philosophy to expropriate the island.

"For Curtis to say that the 105 acres is the most valuable part of the island is also incorrect," he added.

"The whole island is valuable and should be acquired for the people of B.C."

This year a massive campaign was launched to buy the entire 2,000-acre island for a park but the government said it could not justify paying the asking price of $3.7 million.

However, Curtis said, the government had been negotiating with the owners for almost two years about the island's future and had eventually agreed that the most valuable part to buy for a park would be a 105 to 110-acre parcel lying next to the existing park.

The owners have developed their plans for the rest of the island assuming that that parcel would go for park purposes, said Curtis, but they won't consider selling it until they are assured their other development plans will be allowed to ahead unfettered.

In particular, the owners want a guarantee that the cabinet will not approve a bylaw now being proposed by the Islands Trust that would limit all subdivision on Sidney Island to a minimum lot size of 20 acres. The bylaw would effectively scuttle plans for subdivision of most of the island. Current minimum lot size permitted is two acres.

Much of the land also lies within the agricultural land reserve and would have to be removed from it before the subdivision could go ahead. Curtis said the owners have not mentioned this aspect, but they might well want a guarantee that cabinet would also overrule the Land Commission if necessary so the land could be removed from the reserve.

Although the government is keen to enlarge the park, Curtis said, "we won't negotiate in this atmosphere.

"I can't encourage the government to negotiate under this kind of a threat," he said. "I won't negotiate with a pistol at my head."

Victoria Police Win Promise

Victoria policemen won a promise from city council Thursday night to be bound by any contract settlement that is binding on the police board.

Union president Sgt. Bryan Bailey sought council's word on the matter because the policemen feared a repeat of a situation in 1975 when an agreement reached between the policemen and the board was later vetoed by council.

Council agreed to be bound provided the policemen don't go on strike but, in the event of an impasse, opt for binding arbitration.

"We're happy with that," Bailey said today.

Police board and union negotiators met with mediator Clark Gilmour for the second time today but there is little likelihood he will be able to resolve the outstanding issues.

Bailey said there is a meeting Tuesday of the union's 130 members and the executive will be recommending at that time that the policemen apply for binding arbitration.

The major issue in dispute is the policemen's demand for parity with their Vancouver counterparts plus three per cent.

The Victoria policemen's whole economic package works out to about a 19-per-cent increase in a one-year agreement. The police board has offered 7.5 per cent over the same term.

Victoria police back up their demand with statistics indicating their workload is 51 per cent higher than their counterparts in Vancouver.

Lock Cut On Costly Bicycles

Saanich police are looking for a thief who used a bolt-cutter to steal two high-priced, 10-speed bicycles in front of the University Centre on Tuesday.

A spokesman said today the bikes were padlocked and were taken sometime between 3 p.m. and 5:30 p.m.

One of the bikes, an Italian-made Atala, light metallic blue in color, was valued at $700. The other, a Dawes, black in color, was valued by its owner at between $400 to $500.

Trout No Lure for Council

A proposal to restock trout and salmon in badly degraded Craigflower Creek was rejected by Victoria's city council Thursday.

But Fish and Wildlife branch biologist Chris Dodd says he isn't prepared to let the project die without a fight.

"How could we possibly give up on something as important as this? There's just no way that the life of a creek is going to be thrown out because of a political decision like that.

"What we (at the branch) have to do now is work to get city hall to change its mind," Dodd said today.

Council turned thumbs down on the proposal after hearing parks committee chairman Ald. John Hayes say that there was too much conflicting information on the project's impact.

The branch proposed constructing a new dam and spillway at the outlet of Thetis Lake in order to maintain winter high levels in the lake and slowly release water throughout the summer.

The plan would have caused flooding around the lakeshore and could have resulted in the drowning of 350 trees. It would also have allowed branch biologists to improve fish habitat in the creek, and restore trout and salmon stocks in the once productive waterway.

At a parks committee meeting last week the proposal — which included a provision that any drowned trees be replaced by provincial government replanting — won approval despite objections from Hayes.

But Ald. Bob Wright and Larry Ryan, both of whom had supported the branch proposal at the committee stage, were absent from Thursday's council meeting.

Hayes said he'd heard too many conflicting views on the project's impact and recommended that council just put the whole thing on the shelf.

"This is getting almost crazy," objected McElroy, who pointed out that the proposal has been kicking around city hall for six months.

McElroy agreed that there was conflicting information concerning the plan but urged council to support it because the Fish and Wildlife branch has a good record on environmental concerns.

Mayor Mike Young disagreed, saying that any plan that killed off over 300 trees in a nature sanctuary was unacceptable.

"That's a heck of a nature sanctuary, isn't it?"

Crime Prevention Seminar Filling

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce is making a last ditch effort to fill a crime prevention seminar that gets under way in Saanich next week.

Manager Brian Small said today that while 475 persons have registered so far, there is still space for 125 more.

The three-hour seminar, prepared by Greater Victoria police forces in corperation with the chamber, will be held at the Red Lion Inn Monday and Tuesday.

Both evening sessions are filled, but there is still space in seminars held in afternoons.

"A lot of people who complain about the crime problem or try to ignore it, should be going," he said.

Salvation Army Launches Appeal

More than 2,000 volunteers will canvass door-to-door in Greater Victoria Tuesday night for the Salvation Army Red Shield Appeal.

The appeal target is $217,000.

Campaign director Capt. Bill Merritt said canvassers hope to call on more than 40,000 residences between 6 and 9 p.m.

Canvassers will also solicit donations from professional men, businessmen and employees.

'Forgotten Man' Canadiens' Hero

MONTREAL (CP) — It hasn't been a vintage year for Montreal Canadiens centre Pierre Larouche, but he may get to sip champagne after all if his heroics in the first game of the National Hockey League semi-final series against Boston Bruins are a harbinger of things to come.

The 23-year-old Larouche, the forgotten man in Montreal, had only nine goals during the regular season, but he made his first playoff goal a big one, snapping a 2-2 tie at 12:17 of the third period to help lift the Canadiens to a 4-2 victory over the hustling Bruins.

"It was only my fourth shift of the night, and I didn't really feel warmed up," said Larouche. "I said to myself, 'If Dougie (Risebrough) gives me a pass, I'm going to shoot right away.' I have to admit I didn't have much to do on the goal. Risebrough did everything."

Risebrough, Montreal's top performer for the night, shrugged off his role in the game-winning play by tossing the credit to right winger Guy Lafleur.

"Guy made a great play to get the puck to me," Risebrough said.

Bruins goaltender Gerry Cheevers said: "We made one too many mistakes, but one of these days things will turn around in our favor."

The Bruins had rallied from a 1-0 first-period deficit, the result of a goal by Jacques Lemaire, to take a 2-1 lead at the end of the second frame on goals by Jean Ratelle and Don Marcotte against Canadiens goaltender Ken Dryden, who faced 21 shots, the same number as Cheevers.

Lafleur's attempted pass off the skate of Bruins defenceman Mike Milbury tied the game at 3:44 of the third period and set the stage for Larouche. Doug Jarvis added an empty-net goal with 27 seconds left in the third period.

Rick Middleton appeared to pull Boston back into a tie at 3-3 only moments after Larouche's goal, but referee Dave Newell ultimately ruled that Middleton steered the puck into the net with his gloved hand, evoking strong protests from the Bruins.

"What can you say?" asked Bruins coach Don Cherry. "Middleton was looking at the point where the shot came from, and the puck hit his arm. Linesman Leon Stickle said he steered it into the net and Newell eventually agreed."

The normally-outspoken Cherry refused to heap criticism upon the officals, however.

"I get criticized all over Boston for telling the truth," he said. "I'll take the goal they called back and Serge Savard of Canadiens not being penalized for grabbing the puck in the goal crease, and I'll just bite my lip.

"It was a good game, and the Canadiens are a good hockey club, but I think we can play even better than we did tonight."

Wayne Cashman, who missed a glorious opportunity to score for Boston in the final minute of the game, before Jarvis's empty-net goal iced the game, was still beside himself in the dressing room after the game.

The Bruins get a chance to end that string Saturday night when they meet the Canadiens in the second game of the series.

'SAY UNCLE' may not be the game Canadiens' Bob Gainey had in mind but Boston defenceman Brad Park gives it a shot as he restrains Montreal winger beside Bruins' goal during early action in Thursday's National Hockey League semi-final. Gainey and Canadiens didn't say uncle, after trailing 2-1, and rallied in third period for 4-2 victory at Montreal Forum. (CP Wirephoto).

Little Johnstone Rangers' Big Man

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — If there is such a thing as a hockey yardstick, Ed Johnstone of Brandon, Man., is a little guy who puts some big players to shame.

He's not really all that small but his big blade has given New York Rangers five important playoff goals so far, including the one which proved to be the winner as they romped over New York Islanders 4-1 Thursday night.

The Islanders were stale while the Rangers were just like loaves of hot bread fresh out of the oven, doing everything right to take a 1-0 lead in their best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final.

Johnstone, a graduate of Medicine Hat's junior Tigers, is a muscular 5-9, 175-pounder who can fight as well as dig in the corners. He warmed the bench throughout most of the regular season, scoring just five goals in 30 games.

After centre Bryan Trottier caught Ranger goalie John Davidson flatfooted with a long blast for a 1-0 Islander lead, Don Murdoch's power-play goal and Johnstone's rebound shot put the Rangers ahead in the first period 2-1. Ron Duguay and Bobby Sheehan completed the scoring for the Rangers in the second period while the Islanders were limited to just three shots on goal.

Rangers coach Fred Shero said he thinks it's a crime the way the hunt for NHL talent is concentrated on the extra big player with the good, small player often overlooked.

"We're all the same way in sports," he said. "We go for the big guys. Montreal has some little guys and they're doing okay."

Johnstone may not have been high on Shero's talent list during the season but now the 25-year-old right-winger is earning the admiration of the Ranger coach-general manager.

"Eddie will go in the corners. He'll fight anybody. He fought everybody this year. Players really love to fight him because he's little but they find out he can fight."

Fight he did against the Islanders, tangling with Garry Howatt late in the third period. Howatt, the feisty little left-winger who played his junior hockey in Victoria and Flin Flon, had a total of 18 minutes in penalties for his part in three fights including two majors.

Johnstone was 104th overall in the 1974 amateur draft and the sixth pick by the Rangers. He always felt his size cost him a high pick and bucks in his pocket.

"Big is not always better," he said. "I've always been a fighter ever since I put on a pair of skates. That's the way I have to play to be effective. I have to bump. I can't let guys intimidate me."

IAN BRIDGE SIGNED BY SEATTLE

Ian Bridge, who played for Victoria Athletics in the Vancouver Island Soccer League last season, has signed a professional contract with Seattle Sounders of the North American League.

Tagged by many as the "Blond Bomber," Bridge has impressed officials early in the season and many are saying he is a prime "rookie of the year" candidate.

Cafeteria service will be provided at the alpine area, open 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday through Monday.

Rentals will be available at the day lodge in the lower area from 9 to 11 a.m.

Canada Bounces Sweden But Still Finishes Fourth

MOSCOW (CP) — Bobby Smith scored two goals in the third period today to lead Canada to a 6-3 win over Sweden, giving the Canadians their first triumph in the final day of the world hockey championship.

The Canadians wound up with one win and five defeats in the medal playoffs, finishing fourth. The Soviet Union won the title with Czechoslovakia placing second and Sweden third.

Smith, a rookie centre with Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League this season, scored at 8:01 of the third period to give Canada a 4-2 lead. He got his second goal late in the game.

Al MacAdam, also from Minnesota, Marcel Dionne of Los Angeles Kings, and rookie Ryan Walter and defenceman Rick Green, both from Washington Capitals, scored the other goals for Canada.

The Canadian team, mainly put together from NHL teams that missed the playoffs this year, led 2-1 after the first period but Sweden's Bengt-Ake Gustafsson scored the lone goal in the second.

Green snapped a 2-2 tie with a goal at 6:05 of the third period, then Smith made it 4-2.

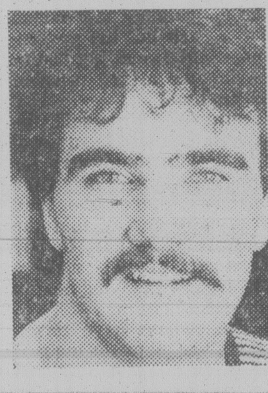
In preliminary round competition, Canada defeated the United States 6-3, lost 4-1 to Czechoslovakia and beat Finland 5-4.

Canada lost 5-2 to the Soviet Union in the first game of the playoff round. The Canadians then were defeated 5-3 by Sweden, 10-6 by Czechoslovakia and 9-2 by the Soviet Union, which won its second straight world title and 16th over-all.

Shamrocks Gather In Another Fergus Player



CRAIG ROBINSON
. . . a standout junior

Defenceman Craig Robinson, six-foot-two and 205 pounds, is the fifth acquisition from the small community during the past two years.

Goaltenders Scott Marshall and Larry Smeltzer, Terry Sanderson and Jerry McKenna are the other Fergus products to play for the Rocks and Smeltzer was responsible for bringing Robinson into the fold.

"Craig and he told me he wanted to come to Victoria," said Smeltzer. "I knew we needed a big defenceman with a lefthand shot so when I got home I told our coach (Bill Munroe) Robinson was on his way out."

Robinson, 21, played for four seasons with Elora in the Ontario Junior Association. He scored "about 50 goals" in league and playoff games last season while helping Elora reach the Ontario final.

He was named to the OLA junior all-star team and was picked as Elora's outstanding defenceman.

Robinson has worked out with Shamrocks for the past week and is expected to dress for the exhibition game against Nanaimo Timbermen at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Cowichan Community Centre.

Hot Practice by Villeneuve

MADRID (Reuter) — Canadian Gilles Villeneuve, fastest in today's first official practice, and Frenchman Jacques Laffite renew their duel for the Formula One world drivers' championship at the Spanish Grand Prix auto race Sunday.

Villeneuve, winner of the last two Grand Prix races in South Africa and California, leads Laffite by two points after four races.

The 27-year-old Villeneuve, in only his second season with the Italian Ferrari team, clocked one minute 14.87 seconds in practice — more than five seconds faster than the 1:20.06 record for the Jarama circuit which was set last year by Mario Andretti of the United States.

PLAYER OF YEAR

LONDON (CP) — Kenny Dalglish, Liverpool's Scottish striker, has been named as the soccer player of the year in a poll of British sportswriters.

Rhythm Tactic Soothes Oilers

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oilers switched from a cautious to a rhythmic approach to beat New England Whalers 6-2 Thursday night in the opening game of a best-of-seven World Hockey Association semi-final series.

"It took us a period to get our rhythm," said winger Blair MacDonald, who scored three goals against the lethargic Whalers.

The Oilers played physically but cautiously in the first period and found themselves trailing 1-0. They opened up during the next 40 minutes, striking for three goals in each of the second and third periods as the Whalers showed little interest in matching Edmonton's robust style.

"I wanted to take things carefully in the first period," said Oilers coach Glen Sather. "I didn't want them getting a lucky goal that would swing the momentum their way."

Steve Carlson, Dennis Sobchuk and Stan Weir scored the other Edmonton goals as the Oilers won the opening game of a series for the first time in five playoff appearances. The second game in the series will be played here tonight.

Gordie Howe and Larry Pleau scored for Whalers, who appeared tired and listless, particularly after the Oilers popped in a pair of goals within the space of 24 seconds midway through the second period to pull ahead 3-1.

"The old man looked awfully tired," said Sather, referring to 51-year-old Gordie Howe. Actually, Howe came up with one of the better New England efforts as the Whalers managed a feeble 21 shots on Edmonton goaltender Dave Dryden, few of them dangerous.

Hawks, '76ers Holding Out

By Associated Press

Defence was the difference as the no-name Atlanta Hawks and the big-name Philadelphia '76ers stayed alive in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Both clubs were one loss away from elimination prior to Thursday night's games, but both postponed their summer vacations with lopsided victories in the Eastern Conference semi-finals.

Steve Hawes and Eddie Johnson scored 12 points apiece in the second half as the scrappy Hawks beat the defending champion Washington Bullets 104-86 to even their best-of-seven series at three victories apiece. The deciding game will be played Sunday in Landover, Md.

"The most important thing in the game was defence," said Hawks coach Hubie Brown. "It was absolutely great."

Meanwhile, at San Antonio, Julius Erving was shifted to guard as Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham juggled his lineup to give muscleman Darryl Dawkins a start at centre. The Doctor responded with 32 points, 24 of them in the second half, as the '76ers routed the Spurs, 120-97.

The Sixers, who trail 3-2 in the series, will attempt to draw even on their home court Sunday.

"Our defence was the key," said Sixers Coach Billy Cunningham. "They missed some good shots, but it had a lot to do with our defence."

The winner will take on Seattle SuperSonics, who eliminated Los Angeles Lakers 4-1 in the other West semi-final. If Phoenix wins tonight, that series will start on Sunday.

Johnson and John Drew scored 22 points each for Atlanta and Hawes finished with 14 points and 14 rebounds. Washington's Elvin Hayes led all scorers with 24 points.

Vandals Hit Smolt Trap At Colquitz Trout Project

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Vandals struck earlier this week and damaged one of the traps the Fish and Wildlife Branch is using for their smolt enumeration studies on Colquitz Creek . . . It took two people a total of six hours to repair the damage after someone lifted the box lid off the downstream trap and broke a pipe . . . Luckily none of the smolts in the trap were harmed . . . The branch has embarked on a project under the federal-provincial Salmonid Enhancement Program to boost populations of searun cutthroat trout in both the Colquitz and Craigflower systems . . . In addition, it's been impossible to keep the signs explaining the aims of the project intact . . . This particular type of mindless action doesn't help one little bit . . . Unfortunately, it will be a factor that must be taken in account in any urban-oriented SEP projects.

Other fishing prizes include a Little Chief smoker, a six-inch Peetz reel and an Old Pal tackle box . . . In addition, there'll be numerous hidden-weight prizes . . . Memberships ($3 for adults and $1 for seniors) and derby tickets ($2) may be purchased at any Saanich Inlet marina . . . Prize presentations will be at Anglers' Anchorage soon after the derby closing time.

Now that we're in the midst of a provincial election, it might be a good time to pin down the politicians for a firm commitment on making Sidney Island into a park . . . Oceanside Investments of Vancouver, who were awaiting zoning changes to erect a subdivision on what would better serve the public as a park, had an option to purchase expire Apr. 7 . . . The assessed value of the property at $2.6 million works out to less than $1,500 per acre . . . It would be a fantastic addition to our marine park system because of relatively easy access for more than 200,000 residents on the southern end of Vancouver Island . . . With rising gasoline prices and ferry hassles, more and more residents will be spending their leisure time close to Vancouver Island in the future.

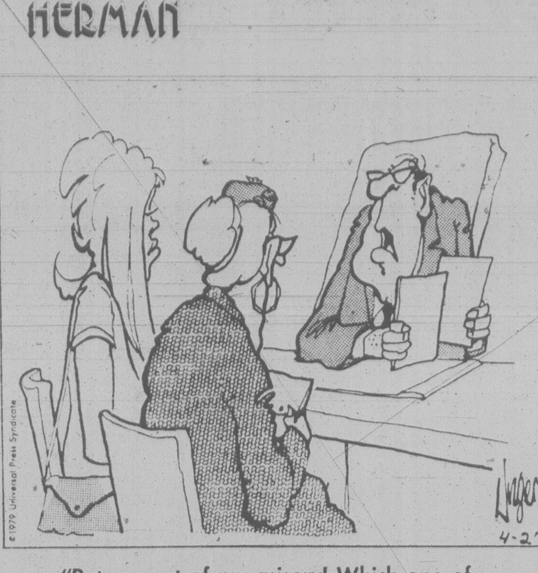
Connors, Borg Advance

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Jimmy Connors, his play unusually erratic in the opening set, came back to score a 6-7, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Roscoe Tanner on Thursday in the $250,000 Alan King tennis tournament.

Connors, the tournament's second-seeded player, advances to the semi-finals against No. 3 John McEnroe, who posted a 6-3, 6-3 third-round victory over Johan Kriek.

The tournament's top seed, Bjorn Borg, had little difficulty with his third-round foe, dispatching Tim Gullikson 6-2, 6-3. In Thursday's other match, Gene Mayer defeated Adriano Panatta 6-3, 6-4 to earn a spot against Borg.



"Put me out of my misery! Which one of you types 140 words per minute?"

Disability Ending Parent's Career

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Flyers' team physician says that if he had to bet, then Bernie Parent has played his last hockey game.

"It's no secret that he (Parent) has had a disabling injury," said Dr. Edward Viner. "It is legitimate to call him disabled permanently from an insurance standpoint. I feel there would be no squabbling on that point."

Viner said that he and the Flyers' management have been thinking more and more that Parent should call it a career.

Although Parent has apparently has told friends he won't play again, the National League goaltender has been quiet publicly.

Viner said no decision had been made on Parent's future, but if it was up to the doctor, the goalie would retire.

Viner has been treating Parent since the goalie inadvertently was struck in the right eye with a stick blade. The danger of further injury, causing even more permanent damage is the reason for Viner's prognosis.

"His injuries were quite serious," Viner said. "Some of the aspects of the injury are permanent. But the main problem at the present is that he has a buildup of fluid causing pressure in the front chamber of the eye. This has occured because the lens of the eye was dislocated by the force of the blow."

Viner said a future blow could further damage the lens and worsen the secondary glaucoma (gradual loss of vision).

The doctor used a lot more of the medical vernacular, but what it boiled down to was that he felt the 34-year-old Parent would be foolish to play again.

Champs Parade At Ball Openers

This is the weekend the softball season opens, and you'll have to admit there is promise of great class to the start of the 1979 campaigns.

That's class — like in champions.

First off, and first to bat, Victoria Budgets. The defending Canadian senior men's champions, and the nation's representatives in the Pan-American Games at Puerto Rico, do the honors when they play host to Woodinville Lumber in a Nothwest International League doubleheader Saturday evening at Royal Athletic Park, starting at 7.

Then there are Doc's Blues. Dethroned last year as Canadian women's champions but still a classy aggregation.

The Vancouver squad, including former Victorians Rosemary Fuller, Donna Blackstock and Joanne Mick, will help raise the women's curtain by meeting Victoria's Stocker North Americans in a four-game interlocking series.

And the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League will trot out champions in the season's opening salvo at Central Park. That would be Seaboard Construction, last year's provincial and Western Canada senior "B" men's champions.

Both Budgets and Stockers get started Saturday and wind up action with Sunday twin-bills.

Budgets, who have strengthen considerably with the acquisition of pitcher Mark Smith, catcher Sonny Phillips and first baseman Bob Walton, conclude the series with Woodinville with a Sunday doubleheader which starts at 1 p.m.

Stockers will play a partial interlocking schedule with the Vancouver League as well as a full schedule in the Victoria Women's League with pitchers Debbie Derkson and Kathy Hawley expected to play prominent roles.

Stockers will open against Doc's Blues Saturday afternoon at Heywood (1 and 3) and complete the series Sunday (11 a.m. and 1 p.m.) at Hyacinth, home park for the girls. Stockers will conclude a busy weekend by playing a third game Sunday against Victoria Pirates.

In addition to Stockers and Pirates, the eight-team Victoria Women's League includes VI-90, Strathcona Hotel, Butler Brothers, Breakers, Combos and Bemister's.

Seaboard again looms as the team to beat in the Stuffy McGinnis League but amalgamation of Elks and Athletics and apparent strengthening of Sooke gives hope of strong competition in Central Park. Port Angeles Telecable, Strandlunds, Juan de Fuca Builders, Labatts and Tally-Ho complete the eight-team league.

The Heywood Avenue Men's League also opens action with all six teams — Athletics, Capital Builders, Brentwood Merchants, Jack Mears Realty, Ingraham Hotel and Remco Office Systems — scheduled to show off their 1979 lineups.

Following is the schedule of Sunday's opening games in the McGinnis, Women's and Heywood Leagues:

Things will get under way on shore at 1:30 p.m. Among those who will be on hand to take part in the ceremonies are honorary members Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving and Rear-Admiral Michael Martin, commander maritime forces Pacific.

A bugler and two signalmen from the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps will add a nautical touch to the proceedings.

Shutter-bugs will have a field day, snapping pictures of boats, most if them dressed with signal flags, pennants and burgees.

The sailpast gets under way at 2:30 p.m. Taking the salute with John aboard Windward will be Ned Ashe, the club's honorary commodore.

Fleet captain Jack Trueman will act as parade marshall, leading the parade in L'Chaiim, being followed by the club's past commodores.

Members of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club had a surfeit of racing in waters off Sidney last weekend. On Saturday there was the annual invitational single-handed 10½-miler while on Sunday there was a 16 mile race to Russell Island and back.

Bob Bentham's Dystocia was the over-all winner in Saturday's race. After her came Cam Thomson's Cal-Lorri, Bill Tingley's Quintango, Will Jensen's Tiara, Peter White's White Squall, John Barker's Interlude, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua, Holger Brix's Caliente, Bill Martin's Georgia Girl and Ole Bachaus' Soria Moria.

In competition for racing boats it was Soren Isbrand's Danish Pastry, followed by Charlie Afford's Reefer and Eric Jespersen's Polyestermite.

Thirty-seven boats were in the Russell Island race which was won by Cal-Lorri. She edged out White Squall, Jim Morris' Madeleine, Roy Hingley's Romada II, Gordie Inglis' Water Mellon, Don Wilson's Menehune, Dystocia, Kevin McCullough's Vagrant, Herb Roberts' Bijou a Moi and Tzonqua.

Doug Taylor-Lee proved that wooden Thunderbirds are every bit as capable as their younger fiberglass sisters on the racing circuit last weekend when he sailed Helios to victory in the fleet championships, finishing with 8½ points in the five-race series that had one throw-out.

Right behind Helios in the 18-boat fleet was Gary Cooney's Hocus with 8¾ points. Next came Bob Grundison's Owl with 10 points, followed by Rod McBride's Lemolo with 11¾ points.

The new Cadboro Bay Sailing Association, which proposes to use the Gyro Park in Cadboro Bay as its headquarters, is now official. Gord Lawless is the commodore and Henry Niezen, vice-commodore. Other table officers are fleet captain Rupert Holmes-Smith, secretary Carol Harding and treasurer Fred Lerevend.

Application forms for membership can be picked up at Bosun's Locker, Ocean Books and Sail Trend, as well as the Gordon Head and Oak Bay recreation centres.

Henry reports Saanich has given permmission for the club to build a dinghy enclosure in the park and the membership fees will help buy materials and get the project started.

Bicycling Again Tops List Of Dangerous Pastimes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bicycles retained a firm grip on first place among sources of athletic injuries last year, while skateboard safety seems to have improved, says newly released government statistics.

Although its annual analysis of injuries caused by a number of products and activities was still being prepared, preliminary data from the national electronic injury surveillance system estimated that 446,878 Americans suffered injuries involving bicycles last year.

To be counted, the injury must be severe enough to require hospital attention.

Because of changes in the number of hospitals reporting to the system, and changes in what is included in some categories, 1978 statistics may not be directly comparable with figures from previous years.

But bicycles also caused the highest number of injuries in the sports category in 1977, estimated at 493,234.

Last year skateboards were estimated to have been involved in 87,093 injuries. In 1977 they had been counted in a single category with roller skates and scooters, and the total for that group was 226,666 injuries.

If the 1978 totals for roller skates and scooters — 97,886 — is added to that of skateboards, the total for the three is 184,979.

Turning to team sports, baseball, football and basketball led the pack for injuries. The government experts estimated there were 399,874 baseball-related injuries in 1978, while football accounted for 394,827 and basketball had 349,760.

By contrast the 1977 estimated injuries were: baseball, 400,266; football, 406,477 and basketball, 371,875.

Table Tennis Team Blanked

PYONGYANG, North Korea (Reuter) — Austria blanked Canada 5-0 and North Korea beat the United States by the same score in the men's team competition at the world table tennis championships Thursday.

A capacity crowd of 20,000 in Pyongyang gymnasium cheered every point scored by the North Koreans, who earlier had been whipped 5-1 by Hungary in their opening match of the tournament.

No surprises and little excitement were generated by the first day's play in the two-week tournament. Among the favored teams, China and Japan both won easily.

Irina Makes Plans

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Irina Rodnina, co-winner of 10 world titles and two Olympic gold medals in pairs figure skating, plans to defend her Olympic crown next year. She did not compete in this year's world meet.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Unpalatable Prizes Put Frank Into Golf

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Frank Conner, leading the $250,000 Greater New Orleans Open after one round of play, said he became a professional golfer when he found out he couldn't eat tennis trophies.

Conner shot a seven-under-par 65 over the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course Thursday, missing the tournament record for 18 holes by one stroke.

Doug Tewell, Curtis Strange and Jim Colbert were a stroke back at 66 after Thursday's first 18 holes. Allen Miller and Phil Hancock were at 67.

Conner is in his sixth year on the PGA tour after starting his career in professional athletics playing on the World Championship Tennis circuit.

"I wasn't going quite as far in tennis as I thought I should be, and professional tennis wasn't as big then, so I figured I'd better do something else," Conner said. "I was 24 years old, and I felt I wasn't going as well as I should have been.

"I played golf about three months and turned pro. I didn't want to spend time as an amateur. You can't eat those trophies. I have a shelf full of tennis trophies."

He turned pro in 1971, spent three years on the mini tours and got his PGA card in 1974. Golf hasn't put a lot of steaks on his table, either. Conner has earned only $40,155 since joining the PGA tour.

He failed to make the cut in the past four tournaments he entered, but he said he was confident he could put four good rounds together.

"Maybe I shouldn't say that, because I've never done it," he said. "But I'm in good shape. I jog every day. I've got my game together, and I feel like I can do it."

Lions Land a Free Pair

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions have signed two import offensive linemen who were free agents the Canadian Football League team announced Thursday.

Guard Kermit Pace is from California State at Northridge and tackle Tom Rushing played at Florida State. Rushing, 24, is a six-foot-four, 260-pounder who was a teammate of B.C. running back Larry Key in college. He played with Shreveport Steamers, an amateur team in 1978.

Pace, 23, signed a two-year agreement and the six-foot-two, 248-pounder also has experience at centre.

ADVANCED IN TECHNIQUES AND TRAINING BUT SHORT OF SHELLS

Cuba Emerging Power In Rowing

AL MORROW
. . . back from Cuba

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

First up were the Russians, who emerged as a power in international sports after the Second World War. Then came the East Germans, who cleaned up in swimming, rowing and track and field starting in the 1960s.

Now in the on-deck circle: the Cubans.

University of Victoria rowing coach Al Morrow, back from a two-week exchange visit to Cuba, is impressed by the program that country has developed.

"Like the East Germans, they seem to realize that sports is the way to achieve world influence," Morrow explained.

"One thing I noticed was that kids seem to specialize in one sport by the time they're 12 or 13. All kids go to school a half-day, then spend the other half-day going to some sports camp or playing a game.

"Where we were, there was water polo, synchronized swimming, rowing and canoeing and kayaking. It obviously was a centre for aquatic sports. It was nothing too sophisticated, but it served the purpose."

Morrow was one of three coaches and 10 rowers who made the trip on orders from Canada's external affairs department. It was a return visit following a stay in Canada by the Cuban oarsmen last summer. Aside from the airfare, the Cubans picked up the tab.

"It was almost the same as the ping pong diplomacy we had going with China," Morrow laughed. "Canada has always recognized Cuba since their revolution."

The result has been a variety of sports and cultural exchanges.

Cuba, with a population of 9 million, has about 1,000 rowers competing in 16 clubs, Morrow learned during his stay. All of them are men.

"According to the Cubans, they don't have enough equipment for women's rowing," he said.

True or not, the Cubans have acquired a lot of rowing gear from the East Germans. They have also acquired considerable technique from East German coaches who spent three years in Cuba from 1974 to 1977.

"They're well advanced in technique and training methods," Morrow said. "I believe they'll soon be a power to contend with. They're moving in that direction at a very fast pace. Their rowing association president figures in 10 years they'll be a world power."

The Cubans and Canadians, ranked together in the top 12 in the world, competed in one regatta in which the Canadians won only one of seven events.

They'll meet again in the Pan-American Games in San Juan, Puerto Rico, the first two weeks of July. Other Pan-Am rowing contenders include the U.S., Brazil and Argentina.

The rowers in Cuba, all from Ontario, will make up part of a Canadian team of about two dozen competitors at the Pan-Ams, so the Cuban sojourn helped acclimatize them.

Almost certain to make the Canadian Pan-Am team are Pat Walter and Bruce Ford, both of the Victoria City Rowing Club, in double sculls. The Canadian champs in that event, they were invited to Cuba but had to pass up the trip because of university examinations.

Head coach of the Pan-Am team will be Tudor Bompa of Toronto's York University while Alan Roaf of Vancouver will be one of about four additional coaches. Morrow may be another.

Roaf, currently running an informal training camp for women rowers at Burnaby Lake, and Pat Crosskerry of Hamilton Leanders were the other two Canadian coaches in Cuba.

Parting shots: The Canadians were based at Cinfeugos on Cuba's south-central coast, described ny Morrow as "a five-hour ride by slow bus from Havana." . . . The Canadians got the VIP treatment and miraculously escaped the affliction that inevitably strikes down visitors to Latin America, delicately referred to as Montezuma's revenge or the Aztec two-step . . . Prior to leaving for Cuba, the rowers were warned by the RCMP their rooms might be bugged. They found no evidence, Morrow said, "but then, we're harmless types." . . . Two UVic rowers, Brenda Cook and Sheila Serup, may attend Roaf's camp at Burnaby . . . Officials are close to signing an agreement forming the Victoria Rowing Society to serve as an umbrella organization for developing this area as a major rowing centre . . Derby Favorite 'Playing'

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The time was slow, the competition was non-existent, and Spectacular Bid was just playing around, but jockey Ronnie Franklin was happy and ready for the Kentucky Derby.

"I just hope Flying Paster (considered Spectacular Bid's main competitor for the Derby) is enough horse to pressure Spectacular Bid, because I'd like to see what he can do," said Franklin after Spectacular Bid easily won the $121,550 Blue Grass Stakes on Thursday.

The Blue Grass time was an undistinguished 1:50 for the 1⅛ miles, but Franklin said that once his colt got the lead on the backstretch, he "started loafing, just playing around and not leveling."

"I can run that fast," said trainer Bud Delp, but he added that he was satisfied with the race.

Crossing the finish seven lengths in front of Lot o' Gold, Spectacular Bid galloped out 1¼ miles in 2:07 3-5 to score his 10th straight victory.

Spectacular Bid paid a Blue Grass record low of $2.10 — there was win only betting — in beating the smallest field to contest the race since three ran in 1966. Completing the order of finish Thursday were Bishop's Choice and Pianist. Each carried 121 pounds.

Uvic's Recreation Facilities Available for Community Use

University of Victoria's McKinnon recreation facilities will be open to the community starting Tuesday, athletic and recreation director Mike Elcock announced today.

The program, continuing until Aug. 31, is designed to promote community use of the gymnasium, swimming pool, weight room, jogging trails, tennis and squash courts.

Non-university users must register for the summer activity sessions. Membership rates for the summer are $30 for adults and $20 for students 14 and over.

In addition, the public may use the facilities on a day-to-day basis through July and August for $1.50 a day plus a $2 charge for advance tennis and squashbookings.

Instructional programs organized by the recreation department are available to all members for a standard fee.

Programs offered include aquatics, dance, exercise, racquet sports, outdoor recreation, weekend trips, two youth day camp programs and a youth out-tripper program.

Memberships include locker and towel service at $5 for the season, equipment sign-out with a nominal charge for squash racquet rental, and fitness appraisal and counselling. Facilities will be open to the public from 7:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. weekdays and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Registration begins Monday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in room 121, McKinnon Building.

Canadian Idea Borrowed

MOSCOW (CP) — The International Ice Hockey Federation has followed Canada's lead and is insisting that members adopt face masks for all players 16 years and under.

"Sure it's a great boost for us, but I imagine they will go even farther at the next meeting and make the age 18 mandatory," said Gordon Renwick, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Federation.

Renwick said the members were asked to return home and select about three masks that meet necessary specifications and to endorse these throughout their minor hockey systems.

"It's the way we did it at home," said the CAHA officials, Canada's delegate on the IIHF Congress. "We've got three that carry Canadian standards stickers. The rest just aren't acceptable."

On the subject of world play, Miroslav Subert of Czechoslovakia, IIHF vice-president responsible for the new championship format, said he personally would rather see the old round-robin scheduling, but the current format of dividing the eight Group A teams into two four-team divisions would continue through 1981 and 1982 with on off year in 1980 for the Olympics.

"By that time we should have a better idea of how the teams accept it and then make changes if necessary."

The IIHF also announced the draw for the 1980 Winter Olympic tournament at Lake Placid, N.Y., that has been broken down into preliminary round play with two six-team divisions.

Canada has been drawn against the Soviet Union, Finland, the Netherlands, Poland and Japan. Czechoslovakia, Sweden, the United States, West Germany, Romania and Norway will be bracketed in the other division.

The federation also let it slip that Canadas Olympic hockey team has been entered in at least two pre-Olympic tournaments, the Rudy Pravo event in Czechoslovakia from Sept. 8-13 against national teams from the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Finland and Sweden, and in a later Japanese tourney against several top individual sides.

Milwaukee Musketeers Explode

By Canadian Press

Call them the modern-day hitless wonders — Robin Yount, 1-for-29; Gorman Thomas, 0-for-24; Ben Oglivie, 1-for-31.

The three Milwaukee Musketeers broke their slumps with a vengeance Thursday night, collecting 12 hits in 25 at-bats with four doubles, three homers and nine RBI as the Brewers snapped a five-game American League losing streak by sweeping a 5-1, 7-5 doubleheader from Detroit Tigers.

In a stroke of genius, manager George Bamberger made Yount and Thomas the 1-2 hitters in the Brewers' batting order and it paid off. Yount broke his slump with a three-run sixth-inning double in the nightcap and doubled home another run in a three-run eighth. Thomas, who homered in each game, followed with a decisive two-run single.

Including the double-header, there were only eight games on Thursday's major league schedule and two of them — New York Yankees at Oakland and San Francisco at New York Mets — were rained out.

In American League action, Boston Red Sox blanked the Seattle Mariners 2-0, Baltimore Orioles downed California Angels 4-2 and Kansas City Royals nipped Cleveland Indians, 5-4.

The Brewers won their first game from Detroit as Cecil Cooper homered and Charlie Moore lined a two-run single in a three-run seventh-inning.

They loaded the bases in the sixth inning of the nightcap on Oglivie's fourth straight hit, a walk and a checked-swing pinch single by Larry Hisle. Yount then doubled to score all three runners and give the Brewers a 4-3 lead. A walk and an error preceded Yount's RBI double in the eighth and Thomas followed with a two-run single.

Bob Stanley scattered six singles and Rick Burleson delivered a two-run single in the third as the Red Sox won their seventh game in a row and extended Seattle's losing streak to a club record 11 games. Burleson's hit followed Bob Montgomery's double, a single by Jerry Remy and a stolen base. Boston ran its record to 12-4, matching its previous best effort for April.

Pinch hitter Lee May's tie-breaking single and Eddie Murray's sacrifice fly in the top of the ninth inning helped Baltimore record its eighth straight victory and hand the Angels their fourth consecutive setback.

PENALTIES DECIDE IT AS KIWIS CLIP CANADA

PERTH, Australia (Reuter) — New Zealand defeated Canada's national team 5-4 on penalties today in a 10-country field hockey tournament.

Teams were tied 2-2 after four periods of extra time but New Zealand won when goalkeeper Maurice Marquet saved a tie-breaking shot by Bubli Chohan and Tony Ineson sank New Zealand's next attempt. Ineson and Ramesh Patel gave New Zealand a 2-0 lead in the first half but late goals by Fred Hoos and Alan Hobkirk of Canada forced overtime.

Hoos and teammate Has Kanjee were shown a green card for rough play and Hobkirk was sent off on temporary suspension in the last period of extra time for a harsh tackle.

MB REPORTS: The second in a series of five.

In 1978 MacMillan Bloedel sales were two billion dollars What does that mean to you?

Last year was a good year for MacMillan Bloedel—after several lean years. World demand for forest products was strong. Never before has MB brought so much money into B.C. We did well and we're proud of it.

In 1978, for the first time, MacMillan Bloedel's sales were over two billion dollars. Our worldwide profits were over $100 million. That's a lot of money and it means a lot to B.C.

We paid nearly one billion two hundred million dollars to people and companies who sell us supplies, equipment, services, everything from ships to paper clips, auditing to chain saw repairs.

About five hundred and thirty-seven million dollars were paid to the 24,000 people employed by MacMillan Bloedel.

One hundred and twenty million dollars in income, property, sales and other taxes is going to governments. The more money we make, the more taxes we pay. B.C. needs healthy, profitable industries to generate money for social benefits.

Our 17,000 shareholders—private individuals, trust companies, insurance companies, investment companies—shared about twenty-four million dollars in dividends.

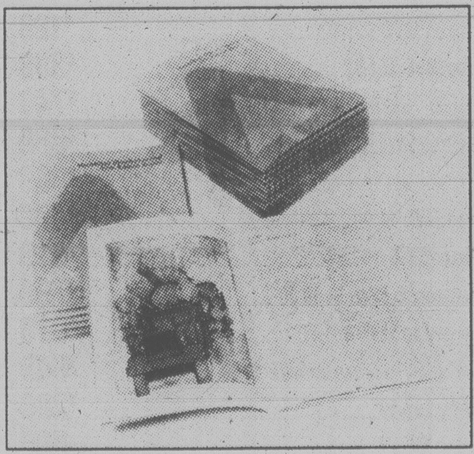
The rest of the profit, about seventy-six million dollars, has been ploughed back into the business to make mills more productive, buy new, more efficient logging equipment, develop new, faster ways to make paper, haul wood, produce wood products. It makes every worker more productive, every job more secure.

In the current five-year period, we're investing more than seven hundred million dollars in B.C. for improvement, enlarging mills, making them work better, purchasing the very latest harvesting machinery, speedier transportation—to make our products more competitive in world markets.

We will be investing another three hundred million dollars in other MacMillan Bloedel operations in Ontario, New Brunswick, the U.S., and other countries. These investments help strengthen this B.C. company in world competition.

Twenty-four thousand MacMillan Bloedel people have helped make this one of Canada's great financial and business successes, from the people in the forests and mills to the top policymakers. After several years of tough times we have turned the corner. From an average return on capital employed of 2.8% over the previous three years, 1978's is a gratifying 10%.

MacMillan Bloedel is a very healthy company—so healthy that a few months ago the news was humming with attempts to take over this independent enterprise. We believe it is best for B.C. that we remain an independent B.C. company.



This is MacMillan Bloedel's annual report. It explains how our business is going, management plans and policies, gives historical figures over the past several years, discusses future plans. If you would like a copy or you have a question, just write us at MB REPORTS, 1075 W. Georgia, Vancouver, V6E 3R9.

Cultural Issues Simmer Despite Votes

elizabeth forbes

While the two elections are main topics of conversation for the moment and the big question in everyone's mind is how to vote, there is also several important cultural topics simmering away in the background and raising questions for concerned citizens in this Greater Victoria area.

— When the Victoria Conservatory of Music moves out of Craigdarroch Castle, will the Castle Restoration Society be given the go-ahead sign to restore fully all the rooms and then open the whole building to the public?

— Will city archivist Ainslie Helmcken get his wish to have the city archives and museum housed in the historic Carnegie building at the corner of Yates and Blanshard, after the Victoria public library moves to new premises on Broughton Street?

— And does a statement made recently by provincial secretary Hugh Curtis that assistance would be forthcoming for restoration of St. Ann's Academy building, with thought of its eventual use for cultural purposes, mean that visual arts groups in this city would find space to work and expand in some of the academy's rooms?

In the matter of Craigdarroch I'm with the hundreds and hundreds of people who hope the castle society will be given the opportunity to go to work in earnest to save this historic landmark for posterity.

The society has waited patiently. It has, during the past decade, refurnished and redecorated rooms and halls available to it. But there is much still to be done.

Wear and tear of the years has resulted in damage throughout that part of the building still to be restored.

Look carefully and it is easy to see that mahogany and maple walls in what was once the breakfast and smoke rooms are badly chipped and scratched.

Padlocks and nails are bored into some beautifully grained hardwoods and priceless doors. Fireplace tiles are loosened and marred, where heavy filing cabinets and desks are in use.

Wall panels in a back hall are heavily gouged. Drawing room pillars and double doors and baseboards have been marked with the moving around of wooden and steel chairs and heavy furniture.

There are 18 fireplaces in Craigdarroch but years ago, after it ceased to be a private residence, they were all boarded over.

The castle society has opened eight of them and these reveal highly ornate designs.

What is behind the artificial fronts of the other ten is not known as yet — but that mystery would soon be solved if the society was given the go-ahead sign.

Mantles, some of basket-weave oak, others of maple and cherry wood, are very fine but many of them need a lot of work to bring them back to their original elegance.

There's also the kitchen, turned into a business office years ago.

Castle visitors (and I'm told there are as many as 100,000 in a year) always express disappointment when they cannot see the kitchen.

So, although it would be a tremendous and costly work, the society would restore it as one of the first projects.

A billiard hall on the third floor would also be high priority. At present it is divided into four rooms by dummy walls that conceal angel faces in mouldings and ornate archways.

Castle society president James Nesbitt tells you every effort would be made to do so.

He says: "The work can go on over a period of years with the building open so the public can see what their donations are accomplishing."

* * *

Helmcken's Dream — At a recent meeting of Victoria City Council's committee A, city archivist Helmcken and members of the Greater Victoria Civic Archives Society, pointed out that city archives currently housed in a location on Pandora Street across from city hall, is bursting at the seams, and they asked aldermen to seriously consider the Carnegie Building at Yates and Blanshard as a new site.

Here again, hundred and hundreds of Victorians, including myself, are backing Helmcken and the civic archives society in that request.

This historic building, used as a library since it was erected, is an ideal place for an archives and museum. It is central, easy to reach and it would be a big drawing card, not only for our own people but for anyone visiting the city.

There would be space to mound displays in imaginative ways and to show the tremendously interesting material hidden away at present in boxes and filing drawers.

It has also been suggested that documents and other historic artifacts pertaining to the Greater Victoria area, now taking up valuable space in the provincial archives, might be turned over to the city archives for display in such a building.

* * *

The Academy — Now let us turn briefly to an announcement by provincial secretary Hugh Curtis regarding a report prepared by his heritage conservation branch in which it is recommended that restoration of the now provincially owned St. Ann's Academy go ahead in four areas of action.

One of these recommendations suggested the building itself eventually be used for cultural purposes.

This raises hope in the minds of many people, that rooms in that building might be made available for the use of well-established visual arts groups in this city.

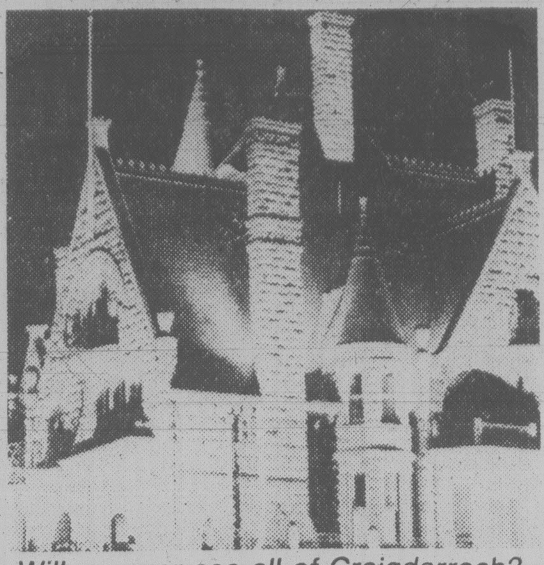
There are many such groups, all working in cramped and inadequate surroundings.

Just for example, let me remind you of the 283-member Victoria Handweavers and Spinners Guild. It meets in a small space at St. Alban's Church Hall, surrounded by its two permanent floor looms, 12 table looms and two spinning wheels which it houses there.

Last November eight of these groups, including the handweavers and spinners, met to discuss need for a suitable place in which to house their equipment and hold meetings and exhibitions.

Other meetings have been held since then and St. Ann's Academy has been named in discussions.

A member of one of those groups, writing to me, says in part "I certainly hope a spot can be found for our groups in St. Ann's Academy. I think it is about time the provincial government acknowledged what these groups could, and are contributing to the tourist industry in this city."



Will we ever see all of Craigdarroch?

Children's Migraines 'Common'

TORONTO (CP) — The American Academy of Pediatrics was told here that migraines in children are common but often misdiagnosed.

Dr. John Tibbles, a pediatric brain specialist at Dalhousie University in Halifax, told those attending the academy's meeting that the symptoms of a migraine can mimic appendicitis, epilepsy or the effects of drugs.

He said classic symptoms in adults include a vicious headache, usually on one side of the head.

But in children, he said, symptoms can vary so much that a child may go through surgery or various uncomfortable and even potentially dangerous diagnostic tests before the true problem is recognized.

Learning what causes a migraine can often lead to prevention, he said. In children, as in adults, migraine sufferers are usually "responsible, conscientious and even obsessional" — the neat, tidy, hardworking child at the top of the class.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, Amy, is engaged to a fellow who is a sports nut. Jerry follows baseball, basketball, football, hockey — any sport. He's an authority. He knows the names and numbers of all the players, how much they earn, who was traded for whom, etc. Jerry would sit and watch TV replays and live games all day if he could.

And when he's not watching sports, he's reading about it or talking about it. I worry that after they're married he'll make a poor husband and worse father because all he seems to live for is sports. I've tried to warn Amy, but she doesn't listen.

Amy doesn't enjoy sports as much as Jerry, but goes along with it just to please him.

— AMY'S POP

DEAR POP: Who knows? In spite of Jerry's preoccupation with sports and Amy's lack of enthusiasm for it, they could have a great marriage. You sound like a well-intentioned father who's running interference for his little girl who might well be able to call her own signals. Back off, Dad.

DEAR ABBY: My father's English is so poor it's embarrasing. He says, "He don't," "They was," "There ain't no," etc.

Although I'm only 14, I think it is never too late for a person to learn, and my father could learn if he wanted to. He's 35 and was born in his country, but sometimes he talks like a foreigner.

Sometimes I correct him in front of people because if I waited and corrected him later, he'd claim he never said what I said he said, and then we'd have a fight.

Don't you think adults should take criticism with a smile and appreciate it even though it's from a 14-year-old?

— Lenny

DEAR LENNY: It's humiliating to be corrected in the presence of others. Your intentions may be good, but your timing is bad.

DEAR ABBY: I have three children who have had paper routes for several years. At first, they put the paper on the porch of every subscriber, but found that fewer than 10 per cent tipped for the extra service, so now they porch only the elderly and the tippers.

— PAPER DAD

DEAR DAD: Most newspapers ask their carrier boys to "porch" delivered papers as a matter of course, not as "extra service." To expect tips for such routine service is out of line.

DEAR ABBY: Can you give us a definition of "maturity" without going into a lot of detail?

You seem to have a gift for putting a lot into just a few sentences. Thank you for your time.

SIXTH GRADERS

DEAR SIXTH GRADERS: Maturity is the ability to do a job whether you're supervised or not; finish a job once it's started; carry money without spending it. And last but not least, the ability to bear an injustice without wanting to get even.

Cheaper Air Fares There If You Take Time to Plan

What's in Store
Joan Watson

The price war on air fares in the United States has given the consumer some unbeatable bargains.

One line inaugurating a flight from Miami to Nassau not only gave away enough seats to first-comers to fill a flight a day for a week, the airline actually sweetened the deal by giving every traveller a dollar bill.

In Texas, 39 peanuts could get you on an inaugural from Dallas to Las Vegas. As ridiculous as these two examples might sound, they certainly increased interest in the airlines offering them.

In Canada we don't have anything to match those deals, but for those of us who want to save money on Canadian holidays this summer, some foresight and planning can give us a choice of three cut-rate prices: night hawk fares, Charter Class Canada rates, and ABC fares.

Night hawk fares are designed to use aircraft that would normally sit idle from midnight to seven a.m. Many airports in larger Canadian cities enforce a curfew as part of a noise abatement program. By taking off just before midnight, a plane can beat the ruling, fly through time zones and meet the restrictions at the other end, or fly to a city that permits post-midnight landings.

This is not a convenient time for the public to travel, but if you're willing to accept it, you'll save a lot of money. Both Air Canada and CP Air offer some night hawk flights all summer long between most major cities. The Maritimes, Winnipeg and Calgary, for example, have no curfews. So you could take off in the early hours and land in Toronto just after the airport opens at seven a.m.

The flights are generally available Monday through Thursday, but not on weekends. The regular fare from Vancouver to Toronto return is $402. Fly night hawk and you pay $212. A return flight Toronto to Saskatoon is $151 instead of $286 and Toronto to Halifax return is $101 instead of $192. Those prices could put a Canadian holiday within your reach this summer.

Now here's another option for you. The Charter Class Canada (CCC) fare will give you more conventional flying hours if you can't hack the overnight trips.

However, they too have their limitations. You must book thirty days in advance, and you have to pay for your ticket within a week after booking it. If you do this you pay the regular fare one way, for example Toronto to Vancouver, $232., and for your return trip you pay just $31 for the return ticket.

The third type of discount fare available to you within Canada this summer is the ABC, Advance Booking Charter.

A good example of the saving is the Vancouver-Toronto-return ticket priced at $199, Halifax-Toronto-return at $129, or Winnipeg-Vancouver-return for just $159. These charters are offered by regional airlines such as Nordair, Quebecair, Eastern Provincial or Pacific Western.

Because the whole plane load is made up of charter passengers, the reduced fares are offered on certain dates.

And while you can stay perhaps one, two or three weeks, if you fly out on a Thursday, you'll probably be required to return on a Thursday, so flexibility is limited.

You have to book a month ahead for ABC fares. Some lines have advertised a Toronto-Vancouver return flight for $189 instead of $199. Travel agent Hal Burns says that was strictly a loss-leader for one flight only so he won't advertise its availability. The chances of getting on the flight are slim.

Mr. Burns says the highly successful "seat sale" held in late winter has travellers flying at record-low prices right now, but the sale is over. Some consumers are still looking for these deals. They're not available.

Other points to remember: when you get any discount fare you can expect some inconvenience in your travel plans, and some inflexibility of schedule.

You frequently have to pay well in advance and fly when full-fare passengers don't want to.

Don't expect to get a charter class fare on a holiday weekend.

And you'll have a better selection if you settle for May or September instead of June, July and August.

Plan ahead. Be flexible if your boss is co-operative. You might start your holiday mid-week. Forget about Friday night and Saturday travel if you're bargain hunting.

Think now about travel next winter. During the peak season there might be as few as 10 seats per plane sold at a discount. In February, 75 per cent of the seats on some domestic flights could be bargain-priced.

Problem Readers May Get Wrong Type of Instruction

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Today's problem reader won't necessarily be tomorrow's illiterate. In fact, says Anabel Newman, an Indiana University education professor, today's low achievers in grade school may be tomorrow's college graduates.

"I worked with a boy in fifth grade who not only could not read, he would not read," she says. "He has now finished his master's in fine arts, he has had paintings displayed in the Metropolitan (Museum of Art), and he is reading voluminously in the areas he's interested in."

The young man's struggle against the odds of being categorized as a functional illiterate along with 20 million other Americans is chronicled in a long-range study begun by Mrs. Newman in 1964 in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Of the 400 first-graders pegged as low achievers, 310 remained in the study at the end of the first year. Of those, 135 were located when they reached 11th grade. Based on tests and interviews with them, Mrs. Newman concluded that 89 were no longer low achievers but were at or above average.

Finally, on 20 who reached 12th grade, she did case histories based on interviews with students and parents, tests and graphs of achievement for each school year. Of those, half remained low achievers but the other 10 were considered achievers.

What made the difference?

Mrs. Newman decided it was five factors — interest, motivation, models, pressure and perseverance.

"I would see certain kinds of things as being terribly basic, a certain kind of caring attitude in the home mixed with good teaching in which teachers are sensitive to what kids need . . . and push them hard enough so that they measure up to the standards set for them."

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Saul Levine, psychiatrist; Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

DEAR DR. LEVINE: I think I am going insane, or some deeply buried emotional problem has hit me. Over the last few months when I am watching TV, if there is a scene of kissing and my father is in the room, I leave. I feel uncomfortable if there is a sad scene and I feel like crying. I won't, I'll just leave the room.

I feel I cannot think of or discuss sex when I'm around him. For example I was reading a book and, when I came to a part about two people making love, my father walked up the stairs. I discontinued reading and felt angry that he had intruded.

I am 15 and am allowed to have steady boyfriends. I have never run into any problems of feeling guilty after necking or petting. Now I find I cannot kiss a guy without my father coming into my mind. This is very disturbing to me and, although I love him dearly, I feel great anger towards him for ruining my sex life. Why has he?

ANSWER: Let me first say, to reassure you, that you are not going insane. While the feelings you describe are not shared by all girls your age, they are certainly not that unusual. They have to do with lot of things happening simultaneously in your life.

You have passed puberty and you have begun to have some sexual experiences. You have a "sex drive" (a basic biological need), but also attitudes and feelings, both conscious and unconscious, or "hidden" from your thoughts.

It may be that there is some feeling of guilt attached to your sexual activity and that you feel it most when your father enters the room. It may also be that you find your dad attractive and that scares you. This would make you uncomfortable and lead to your angry feelings towards him.

The other side of the equation, your father's behavior, you didn't mention at all. It is not unusual for men to find their teenage daughters attractive, and you may be picking up his feelings for you.

Usually all these feelings subside, or return to the realistic family love (as opposed to romantic) that is so important to fathers and their daughters. I fully expect that to happen to you.

But you should also re-examine your own attitudes towards sex. Maybe you're blaming your dad for your own confusion. Again, these are all possibilities; I would have to know more before I offered a more definite response.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: At home I have everything I could ever want and need but this isn't my problem. In the past I have exhibited irrational behavior and suffered serious bouts of depression. For a while things got better, but now they are returning to their previous state. I have thought very seriously and I have decided to leave home.

I am a 14-year-old female. I do well in school and I am reluctant to give up my education, but I will. I am aware that it is very dangerous for a young girl on the run, but I realize I can no longer live at home. I hate it here.

Please don't tell me to phone the Children's Aid Society or some such organization, because, to my knowledge, there is no such organization in my town. I have a job and I am saving money now, before I go.

Is there somewhere I can go, where I could be safe from my parents and where I can try to begin a new life before its too late? Please don't think me a crazy, overdramatic kid.

Suicide is my other alternative, but I like the choice of running better, whatever it represents.

ANSWER: That you are very unhappy is obvious and I urge you to give serious thought to what you plan to do so that you don't add to your unhappiness. I recognize that "running" sometimes may be the only answer, but in my experience it has usually led to more complications.

You say you have "exhibited irrational behavior" and suffer "serious bouts of depression." These are symptoms that can be treated with proper help, and part of that proper help is having someone to talk with.

If you cannot talk with either of your parents, I suggest you describe your symptoms to your family doctor and he may be able to guide you to a proper treatment. Otherwise, I would strongly recommend that you consult a social agency in your community and ask for someone with whom you can discuss the reasons for your unhappiness.

As you realize that you do have irrational behavior, I hope you won't do anything on impulse, such as running away, or think about suicide, as they may be part of the irrational behavior you want to get rid of.

There are people, psychiatrists, social workers, psychologists, doctors, and others who have gained knowledge through experience, who have the knowledge and training to help you through the crisis that you are encountering. Ask them for help.

You have shown maturity in working and saving money to try and accomplish a goal, and you have also shown insight by recognizing your difficulties, so I hope those two factors will guide you to an appropriate source of help.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I am a 15-year-old girl and I have been having intercourse with my boyfriend. Can you give me the address of a birth control clinic where I can get the Pill without my parents finding out?

ANSWER: I hope it is not too late to refer you to a birth contol clinic, because you fail to mention whether you have been using any contraception method. There are excellent contraceptive methods available at your local pharmacy which you can buy and use.

However, even those methods require proper and consistent use. Mechanical or barrier methods such as condoms and contraceptive foam are effective, particularly when they are used together.

There are directions in the packages which will tell you when they should be used and how they should be applied.

Most women who go to a birth control clinic have chosen to use a method of birth control which requires medical consultation. These methods include the Pill or oral contraceptives, the IUD, or a diaphragm.

The counsellor at the clinic can also instruct you on the proper use of the condom and foam. She will discuss all the alternatives in birth control so that you can decide which method you want to use.

For Active Women

NEW YORK (AP) — Two diverse fashion designers showed their fall looks this week , but both had versatile styles for the active woman.

Geoffrey Beene says the fact that so many women now are a part of the workforce is an element that has influenced his collection. This means that the same outfit can, with just a change of jewelry or the addition or deletion of a scarf, be worn to the office during the day and then later to an evening event.

Skirts and jackets can be worn with garments of different fabrics and styles. In his evening wear, Beene was especially thoughtful in allowing a sporty knit sweater tunic to be worn over a long silk skirt.

A gray flannel pantsuit was shown with a sparkly, see-through gray blouse. The same suit with a more conservative shirt would be appropriate for the work place.

His rust-colored dress with yolking and high neck in silk is easily worn any time of day. A wide leather belt gives it a sportier look.

Shoulders were still wide and square in many coats and jackets in the Aimbez collection. One purple speckled coat had little feathers tucked in a fold under the shoulders.

Using a quilted metallic looking fabric, Aimbez created matching jeans and jackets. These were worn with matching quilted lumberjack hats with ear flaps.

He also was inventive with leather. These are clothes that are strictly for the disco set and not suitable for day-into-evening wear. Yarn-fringed vests with open weaves were worn over tight leather pants. A leather skirt was slit up the back and shown with leather halter and suede jacket.

Beene also played with leather. His were bronze leather tops with three-quarter-length sleeves sashed over long blue and gold metallic weave silk skirts.

Beene's lines, though still loose, are clean and uncluttered. Even his two-piece warmup suit ensembles were more form than baggy.

If you have yet to charcoal-broil that first-of-the-season hot dog or hamburger on the patio, you may not realize that the price of charcoal continues to climb. Buy a bagful and it will burn to the last lump if you store the opened bag in an airtight container — charcoal absorbs moisture in the air. To preserve half-burned lumps, don't douse the fire with water; suffocate the smoldering pieces by burying them in the surrounding ashes.

Since sewing patterns can't be returned, beginners should know that many patterns for knits are smaller, have less built-in ease, than patterns for woven fabrics. Deciding which size to buy depends on your preference for tight or loose-fitting clothes. Alwyas pre-shrink knits; machine-washable ones also lose the sizing that can cause skipped stitches during sewing and an easily popped seam when you wear your new garment.

Grandmother knew how to make socks last longer by rubbing wax into the fibres to strengthen areas where toes poke through and shoes wear out heels. But a reader who remembers hard times says he rubs waterproof glue into the toes of his not-cheap socks for the same reason. If you work the sock's toe while the glue's wet, the toe won't dry hard.

A chimney sweep, fire prevention officer and heating inspector claim consumers don't realize the potential dangers of wood-burning stoves, especially the most efficient ones that let little heat escape up the chimney. The potential danger is creosote, a black by-product that sticks to the flue. The "Sweep" proved the point by showing a section of a two-week-old stove's flue pipe with creosote buildup so bad it caused a flue fire.

A young career woman who moves to a new area every few years (sometimes even every few months) says she always has the lock changed for her newest rented apartment or house. That way she knows no extra keys to her front door are floating around in a stranger's pocket. It's worth the extra expense, she says, to prevent possible robberies.

Before you splurge on a new leather handbag, check the zipper. Could you replace the zipper if it broke?

Some leather good repair shops won't replace zippers; those that do charge a pretty fee, because some zippers are difficult to remove without also taking out the bags's lining or stitching so that it shows on the outside.

Olympics Packages Lined Up

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

Already a number of young Canadians have queried me on arrangements for visiting the 1980 Olympics in Moscow. Well, there's some good news and bad. There are special youth packages available but if you want to see specific events, there's no guarantee which competitions your tickets will cover.

Altogether about 7,500 Canadians will visit these games between July 19 and Aug. 3, 1980. Special arrangements are being made so that 1,200 of the packages available will be youth oriented. Not only does that mean that they'll be arranging cultural and entertainment programs with you in mind; but they're trying to work out a better deal on the rate. Simpson's Travel Service has been appointed the official organizers for Canada and under the name of Olympiad Tours they're now negotiating final itineraries and prices.

These youth packages will be co-ordinated in the U.S.S.R. by Spunick, the official Soviet youth travel bureau. Unless you're a terrific athlete you don't have any choice. Buying one of these packages is the only way you're going to be able to visit the games.

Each country is allotted a certain number of beds and event tickets according to the population, but because Canada hosted the previous games our share is a little more generous. In order to qualify for the Canadian allotment you must be a Canadian citizen or a landed immigrant residing in Canada.

The package prices will include air transportation, accommodation, meals, sight-seeing and tickets for at least five events. Here's the problem that's going to upset people: there's no way to tell which events you're going to get in the draw.

The organizers claim it's a logistics problem because the number of events differs each day. Before you get too discouraged, though, you'll be glad to know that the bulk of the available tickets are for the more popular events such as swimming and track.

What Simpson's hopes to do is set up an exchange centre in Moscow where you'll be able to swap tickets. It's in the works but not a sure thing yet.

Because accommodation will be tight in Moscow, your stay would be limited to eight nights. The three youth itineraries they're working on would be two 12-day trips, one including Kiev, the other Leningrad, and a 16-day trip visiting all three cities.

You can register for one of the programs as a member of a group or as an individual. And don't let the word youth intimidate you: the age limit for these packages is a liberal 35. A $50 registration fee and a $150 deposit are required at the time of booking. Of that total $75 is not refundable.

Visa's are required to visit the U.S.S.R. but these can only be applied for once the tour is fully pre-paid and confirmed.

If you want to register now, you can make arrangements through Simpson's Travel Services, the Canada Universities Travel Service and local travel agents. Brochures outlining prices and itineraries will be available from these sources. The Canadian University Travel Service (CUTS) has now published the spring issue of The Canadian Student Traveller. Free copies are available from the 50 participating universities and colleges or by writing to their head office: C.U.T.S., 44 St. George St., Toronto, Ont., M5S 2E4.

Students planning on travelling in Canada during vacation periods should keep in mind accommodation is often available at university and college residences. The best way to check the situation is to get the address of the local student council or the director of residences from your school and write ahead.

Stumped about what to do this summer? The Guidance Centre at the University of Toronto has published its annual guide of suggestions and advice.

The emphasis is on travel, volunteer work, camping, summer study opportunities and employment. What Can I Do This Summer? covers opportunities available across Canada. If your school doesn't have a copy that you can browse through it can be ordered for $2.50 from the Guidance Centre, Faculty of Education, University of Toronto, 1000 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont., M4W 2K8.

Ski enthusiasts may be interested in the summer ski camp the Cloutier family of Quebec will organize for Austria this year. Certainly the family brings plenty of expertise to the school.

Remi, 25, is a former member of the Canadian national ski team and is presently head coach of the Saskatchewan ski team. Karen, 22, is a former member of the Canadian world cup squad and is now competing on the women's world pro circuit. Tom, 24, was a member of the Quebec ski team of 1972-73 and has been coaching for six years. Debbie, 24, is a graduate of the University of Guelph, where she was responsible for afternoon sports.

The package they're organizing departs from Montreal Aug. 14, returning Aug. 28. The price $987 includes air fare, accommodation, meals, transfers, lift charges, a tour of Copenhagen and special training and coaching. They'll also be organizing other activities such as swimming, hiking, tennis and seminars.

The camp will be held in Hintertux, Austria, a small village about 75 km southeast of Innsbruck where the Austrian National Ski Team trained last summer. For more information you can contact the Cloutier's by writing: Austrian Summer Ski Camp, c/o Tom Cloutier, 1 Hillside St., Agathe des Monts, P.Q., J8C 1Y2.

Bread Dull? Try Lefse!

When you tire of baking bread, try making lefse for a tempting change of taste and variety. MOTHER reader Amy Alpine tells how:

When I feel too dragged-out to face the chore of my weekly bread-bake, or when the family seems in need of a little variety, I whip up a great big batch of lefse (pronounced lef-se) — an easy-to-make Scandinavian Flat bread.

Lefse is similar in appearance and texture to the Mexican tortilla. Both are all-purpose foods that can be eaten hot or cold, with butter or almost any filling, and by themselves or as a "sop-up" for gravies and soups. But, unlike the Mexican griddle bread, lefse's primary ingredient is leftover mashed potatoes!

Here's the basic recipe:

- 1 gallon cold, well-mashed potatoes
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 3 cups whole wheat or unbleached white flour.

Lefse dough, however, can be modified, so this recipe certainly is open to alterations.

I usually make lots of extra potatoes, add a little salt and butter, and mix in enough flour to make a soft, rollable (but not sticky) lump. (A Norwegian friend told me that a good lefse dough should be of the same consistency as an ear lobe!)

You can — if you want to be "traditional" — roll out a cupful of dough until it's ⅛-inch thick, and then cut individual "patties" from it.

I find it easier, though, to pinch off walnut-sized balls of uncooked lefse and put them between two sheets of plastic coated with vegetable oil. Then I either squash the clumps flat with my hand or roll them with a rolling pin, and peel them off the "wrappers." If you try this method and find that your dough sticks, check the mixture (it might be a bit too sticky), and check the bags to be sure they're evenly oiled.

The whole process probably will go a little slowly at first, but once you "get the hang of it," you'll turn out lefse faster than you can cook them.

These "pan breads" should be fried on a "sizzling hot," lightly greased griddle. Just turn them once and each side will be done when it becomes speckled with dark brown dots.

My family likes lefse best "hot off the stove" with butter and sometimes a little honey. You'll find a lot of ways to serve it, though, and it's possible to stretch your experimentation out over a few days — the dough will keep that long if it's covered and stored in a cool place.

Blizzard of Lizard for Men's Shoes

By JOHN MOODY

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you want to be a well-dressed man, you can't look down at shoes anymore.

Shoes are as much a part of the wardrobe as a suit or shirt, as women have long recognized.

Now men are picking up the spirit and designers, ever ready to accomodate, are picking up production.

"There's definitely a market," says Marianne Mischo of Carina Nucci, one of the newer and more inventive shoe stores in New York that opened last week. "We have customers who come in and wear only a specific designer shoe."

To prove her point, she unabashedly drops a few names of frequent customers — comedian David Brynner, singers Teddy Pendergrass and Wilson Pickett and actor David Jansen.

And naturally the designers are willing and eager to see their signatures being walked all over by those famous feet.

The fall 1979 season is a parade of suede, a blizzard of lizard. In short, it's the most colorful fashion year for shoes since spats.

They had better last at the prices they fetch. Some of the fancier lizard styles go for $245 and up, with the average about $145. Fortunately, there's still no men's equivalent for the woman's boot introduced by Aldo Cipullo. The most creative Italian gold and silversmith since Benvenuto Cellini has designed a boot for Carini Nucci of 18-karat gold studded with diamonds. The price: a cool $37,000.

"We don't expect to sell many of those," says the pragmatic Mischo.

One of the current men's favorites is a woven slipper with a closed toe and back, made of Italian leather. It's low with a flat sole, simple and comfortable. There's also a white lace-up made of "Nabuk," a supple suede-looking leather designed by Rossetti for $145 that can go with light colored suits.

But aren't light colors out for fall?

"Of course not," says Mischo. "There's no more 'Pat Boone' stigma to white shoes. They go with anything."

But for the more classics oriented, designer Pino Jardini has a very conservative lace-up shoe for customers who Mischo describes as "the three-piece suit, Wall Street clientele.

"We know about them. They want to look good and they're particular about their feet and comfort. The people who buy those shoes would never suffer the way women do with high heels."

But beware. Someday there may be a $37,000 men's gold and diamond boot.

A Jumbo of a Jumble Sale

LONDON (CP) — The world's largest jumble sale will be staged at Alexandra Palace, North London, May 5-7 in aid of the worldwide Save The Children Fund during this International Year of the Child.

More than 70 tons of clothes, books, phonograph records, tapes, toys, ornaments, postage stamps and other odds and ends are expected to raise more than $300,000 for the fund.

Last year, a three-day jumble at Olympia, London, raised more than $275,000 for the fund, winning the sale a place in the Guinness Book of World Records.

"This year's jumble will be a collectors' paradise," says Shirley Berry, press officer for Save The Children.

"To make it even more attractive we shall put on discos, clowns and jugglers to keep children amused while their mums and dads hunt for bargains.

"We have started a nationwide collection of jumble and the stuff is simply pouring in.

"Last year collectors from many countries, including Canada and the United States, came to our sale."

Shot Cabbie Wins $1.2M

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Maryland county agreed Wednesday to pay a $1.2-million settlement to a taxicab driver who was accidentally shot by a policeman firing at a robber. Montgomery County, Md., will pay the money to Roger Caines, 31, who became a quadriplegic after he was shot Feb. 20, 1978, by a county police officer. Caines had filed a $5-million lawsuite against the county and the police officer. The settlement was reached by both parties without going to trial.

Nerve Deafness: Hope

By L. L. Coleman, MD

In a number of previous columns you wrote of the possibility that one day some of us who are severely deaf may actually be able to hear. I know that the work is still experimental and that we must be patient, but is there any new report on any operation that will bring us some hope? — Mr. G. R.

DEAR MR. R.:

The liberation of the profoundly deaf from the confines of isolation is one of the ultimate hopes of modern science. Only those like yourself who are afflicted with severe deafness can understand the magnitude of silence.

A number of ongoing research endeavors in the United States, England and Russia point to the possibility that nerve deafness may yet be conquered.

Electrodes were implanted in the cochlea, the vital part of the hearing mechanism that is located in the inner ear. By this method the auditory, or hearing, nerve was stimulated in an effort to bring meaningful sounds to the brain.

The results were exciting. The patients were able to hear low sounds. The rhythm of speech was improved and, with special training, inflections of the voice could be heard.

★ ★ ★

I have an excellent doctor. My only complaint is that I am never able to pin him down to give us a definite answer about how long an illness will last. Is this asking too much of a doctor? — Mrs. E. E. S.

DEAR MRS. S.:

The art of "prognosis" is to be able to predict the course of a disease and its final outcome once the diagnosis is made. Yet, there are so many factors that enter into the prognosis of an illness that it is often impossible and frequently foolhardy for a doctor to prophesy its duration with any exactitude.

Also, complications, simple and complex, cannot always be anticipated.

Turns Responsibility Into Results

The Gorge Shoreline

In 1965 the Saanich Gorge, a place of fond vacation and recreational memories for many Victorians, was a public eyesore. The banks were muddy and crumbling, and the surroundings were a tangle of scrubby underbrush.

Today, it's a beautiful shoreline park because Hugh Curtis saw the opportunity and had the determination to go to work to improve the waterway. Now, what was an eyesore is a haven for walkers, joggers and camera buffs. Complete with walkways, landscaped gardens and cement retaining walls it is the pride of the surrounding neighbourhood.

The Gorge Shoreline. Just one more example of a proven record. Of turning responsibility into results.

Hugh Curtis. A record of service in the past. A promise of service in the future.

"You'd like this story, Mommy. It has a mother in it."

Contract Bridge ♠♥♦♣ B. Jay Becker

You open One Heart and partner responds One Notrump. What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠ A82 ♡AJ953 ◇KQ5 ♣KJ
2. ♠ 4 ♡AKJ9653 ◇K6 ♣KQ8
3. ♠ AKJ ♡AKJ32 ◇KJ7 ♣84
4. ♠ KJ ♡AK8543 ◇10 ♣AK62

1. Two notrump. Partner indicates 6 to 9 points by his notrump response. Since you can't tell exactly how many points partner has for his response, the best you can do now is urge him to go on by raising to two notrump. If partner has 6 or 7 points he will pass; with 8 or 9 points he will bid three notrump. Presumably partner knows you have 17 to 19 points for for your two notrump bid, since you would pass one notrump with 16 points and bid three notrump with 20 points.

2. Four hearts. The only real problem is whether to bid three hearts, inviting but not forcing partner to bid again, or whether to bid four hearts. Most players would bid four hearts, realizing there was some risk attached to that bid, but confident that it would be the winning bid in the long run.

Note that high-card point count is not the decisive factor here. It is the trick-taking value of a hand that should dominate one's thinking. You have eight probable winners and you should expect partner to produce two more.

3. Three notrump. A natural concern about your weakness in clubs should not stop you from bidding boldly for game. Basically your decision to bid three notrump is based on the probability that partner has either 7 or 8 points (though he may have as few as 6 or as many as 9). There is also a likelihood that he has at least moderate club length because he apparently lacks spade or heart length. You can't feel certain that partner will make three notrump, but it would be overly pessimistic to bid only two notrump when you're practically certain that the combined point count is 26 or more.

4. Three clubs. You should assume, once partner announces 6 to 9 points, that your side has a game somewhere. So, to make sure you get there, you bid three clubs. This jump shift is 100 per cent forcing. You should not risk a three heart bid, which would be invitational but not forcing.

It may bother you to bid three clubs when you yourself have such a strong preference for hearts, but you do it for two reasons. One is to make certain that your partner bids again; the other is that five clubs may turn out to be a better contract than four hearts. This could occur if partner had a singleton heart and four or five clubs.

AMONG YOUNGEST conductors to have won worldwide status is the Toronto Symphony Orchestra's Andrew Davis, 35. He will conduct the orchestra when it visits Victoria on its first western tour, Tuesday. Sponsored by Victoria Symphony Society, the orchestra will present a single concert in the University Centre auditorium. Davis also conducted the orchestra through its recentprecedent-making tour of the Republic of China. Passage from an organ scholarship at King's College, Cambridge to the podiums of many of the world's leading orchestras has been accomplished by Davis in an amazingly short period. This season he has guest conducted in London, Boston, Cleveland, Rome and Berlin.

Before The Judge

A 29-year-old James Bay man was fined $100 by Judge Fred Green in Victoria provincial court Thursday for taking a vessel without the owner's consent.

Patrick Robert Fisher, of 433 Superior, was also ordered to pay compensation for $269.50 damages claimed by the owner of the 32-foot, diesel-powered vessel.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court the United States Coast Guard responded to a call for assistance at about 2:30 a.m., April 6 near Port Angeles during rough seas. They found Fisher aboard the boat, which belonged to Marcel Fisher, no relation, and was moored in the Inner Harbor near the Empress Hotel, Mulligan said.

When Fisher walked off the Black Ball ferry MV Coho, Victoria city police apprehended him. Fisher admitted to officers he had been fired by Marcel Fisher a few days earlier.

Defence lawyer William McElmoyle said Fisher had intended to take the vesel for a ride and was going to return it.

Mulligan stated that the request for compensation was mostly for recovery costs but some of it was for loss of business and for a lock change.

Green said he considered the value of the article taken and the potential damage Fisher could have done.

Three youths charged with robbery with violence and causing bodily harm with intent to wound, maim or disfigure elected trial by judge without jury and had a preliminary hearing set for May 23.

Jeffrey Desmoulin, and James Harvey Ward, both 18 years of age and of 708 Suffolk, and 19-year-old Timothy Dwaine Roberge, of no fixed address, were charged following a holdup and beating of 57-year-old Joseph Arthur Longpre just before midnight, April 14 near Beacon Hill Park.

All three were denied bail last Wednesday by Judge Blake Allan.

* * *

A 22-year-old who told Green he drove from Campbell River to visit his girlfriend in a Victoria hospital was handed a seven-day jail sentence for driving while under suspension.

Rock Anthony Quocksister, of Campbell River, pleaded guilty to the charge and Mulligan told the court Quocksister was stopped heading west in the 3200-block of Harriet at about 8:30 a.m., April 7. Quocksister told Saanich police he didn't have a driver's licence and admitted he was disqualified from driving.

He had been convicted Jan. 4, 1979, in Campbell River of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 and fined $350 and had a conviction April 12, 1976 in Vancouver for impaired driving, when he was also fined $350.

Green said he and other Victoria judges were taking a serious view on drivers who ignore suspensions.

* * *

A 22-year-old paraplegic was given concurrent one-day sentences, placed on six months probation and ordered to take any counselling as ordered by his probation officer.

Michael Harold Jose, of 1114 Catherine, pleaded guilty to two counts of possession of stolen property.

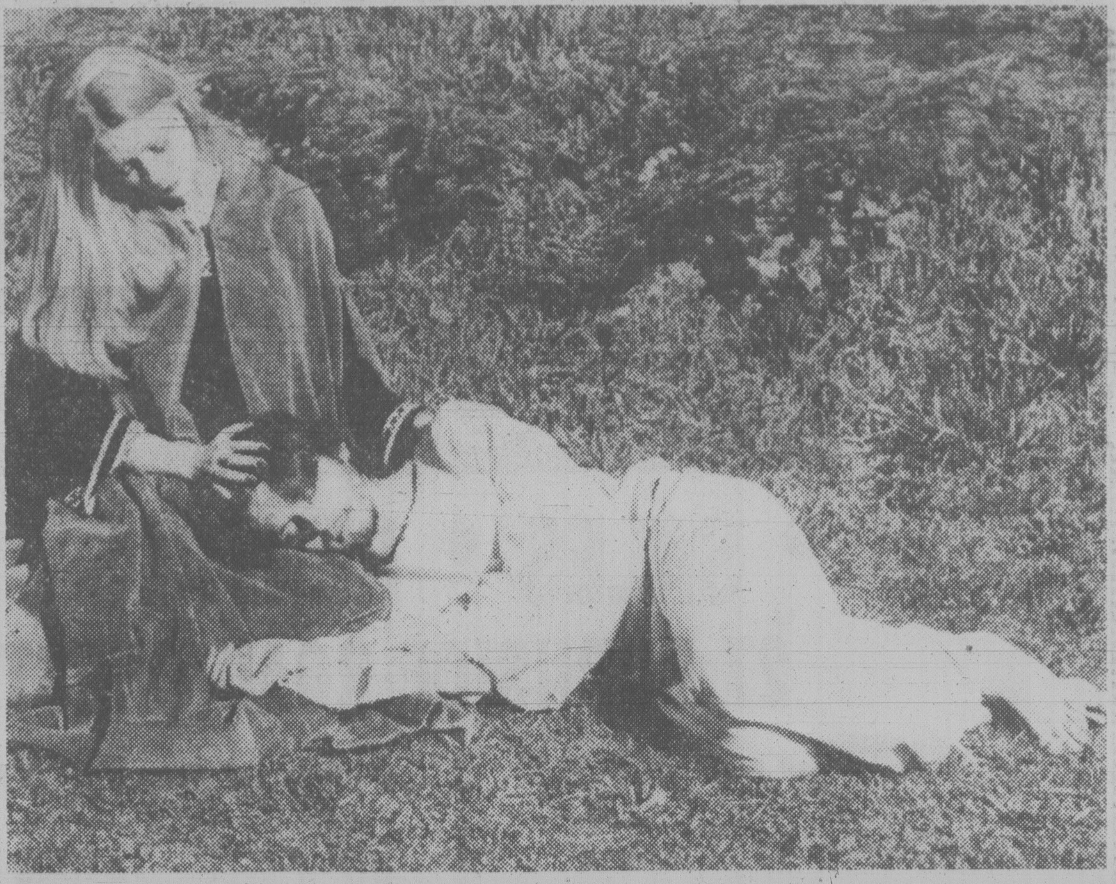
Court was informed Victoria city police were called to Government and View streets at about 10:40 a.m., April 20 by an Eaton's security guard who saw Jose and two others inside stealing a blue jacket from the store.

Police observed the three at Government and Johnson with the jacket and questioned them about the item. Police also learned at that time the wheelchair which Jose was seated in, valued at $450, was stolen from Victoria General Hospital about a week earlier. A jacket and a bolt cutter, both taken from Eatons and valued at $65.89, were also recovered.

Duty legal aid lawyer James Main explained that Jose had been drinking wine all day and didn't know how he came into possession of the stolen wheelchair.

Main asked Green to take into consideration that Jose had been denied bail and had spent about five or six days in jail, which was considerably more of a hardship on him than on ambulatory persons.

Fined for drinking driving offences were: Robert Lawrence Lambert, 34, of 2282 Bradford Avenue, $400; Gerald Wayne Knight, 17, of 860 Wollaston, $350; John David Spelman, 29, of 2715 Shawnigan Lake Road, $350; and Robert John Hollis, 26, of 4975 Wesley Road, $200.



ROCK OPERA Jesus Christ Superstar with Donna Heighes as Mary Magdalene and Gken Dias as Jesus are shown in scene from Victoria Operatic Society production which opens tonight at McPherson Playhouse. The popular show is directed by Doug Bamborough with Chris Donison as music director and Gini Lefevre as choreographer. It will run through May 5.

Hitting Policeman Nets Probation

Jail is not necessarily appropriate for a man who hits a policeman, even though it is prescribed by the B.C. Court of Appeal, a Victoria judge ruled Thursday.

Roy James Stuart Hamilton, 47, who pleaded guilty to assaulting a police officer carrying out his duty, was placed on probation to keep the peace for 18 months when he appeared in county court before Judge Leslie Cashman.

The assault occurred when Saanich police Const. William B. Blaney intervened in a domestic dispute and was struck by Hamilton twice in the face.

Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission

Public Notice

APPLICATIONS FOR NEW FM STATIONS DURING PHASE II OF THE FM POLICY

At the recent public hearing for the renewal of its network licences, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation outlined to the Commission its long-range plans for the extension of its network radio services in accordance with its mandate under the Broadcasting Act, and indicated that it considered the reservation of FM frequencies to be a prerequisite for the development of a comprehensive and meaningful plan.

The Commission believes that the Corporation should be allowed sufficient time to develop and complete its plans in this regard, including a determination of the frequencies it considers will be needed to implement these services. This will then permit the Commission to study the full implications of this request on the overall requirements of the Canadian broadcasting system.

Accordingly, in order not to jeopardize or prejudice the interests of present applicants by undue delays, the Commission will continue to process applications already heard or scheduled for public hearings up to and including 30 June 1979. Interventions received from the CBC with respect to alleged incompatiblity of certain applications with its plans will be carefully considered by the Commission prior to rendering its decisions. However, the Commission will issue no further calls for private FM radio applications under Phase II of the Commission's FM Policy before the end of this year.

Retrospectively Yours, Arkoff

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — "Art" was a four-letter word at American International Pictures (AIP) which produced 500 low-budget films in 25 years and now finds itself honored with a retrospective by New York's Museum of Modern Art.

AIP board chairman Samuel Z. Arkoff, founder of the company, says, "I suppose time can dignify anything."

Arkoff is a delightfully humorous man who gave the world such epics as How To Stuff A Wild Bikini, I Was a Teen-Age Werewolf and Beach Blanket Bingo.

A brilliant businessman and former lawyer, Arkoff built AIP by following contemporary youth trends for a quarter-century and by inventing a special kind of double bill.

Pre-Arkoff, theatre owners booked an "A" picture and a "B" (low-budget) film on the same bill. They were usually of different genres — say, a comedy and an adventure drama — to lure moviegoers of different tastes to the theatre.

Arkoff revolutionized the business by convincing exhibitors to book two AIP films of the same type be they horror, sci-fi, motorcyle epics or beach bonanzas.

AIP's double dip eliminated "B" films per se. More importantly, AIP picked up all the producer's marbles at the turnstiles.

Arkoff, 60, has a sense of humor about movies and the people who make them. He laughs off accusations that he is the last of the movie moguls.

Carson Deal With ABC in the Wind?

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Carson, host of the Tonight show, says ABC television may be "doing a little stroking" in an effort to attract him.

Carson, in an interview for CBS television's 60 Minutes, to be broadcast Sunday evening, recalls an informal get-together after his appearance as host on ABC's April 9 broadcast of the Academy Awards show.

"They . . . made no direct overtures of my coming to the network," Carson says. "I would assume that when somebody has you socially for dinner — I'm not that naive — that they might say, 'Hey, it would be nice possibly if Johnny Carson worked over here.'"

Mike Wallace and the 60 Minutes crew visited Carson April 15 at his home in Bel-Air, Calif., about a week before the story broke that Carson wanted out of his NBC contract, which runs until mid-1981.

CBS had planned to produce a profile of the entertainer for fall broadcast, but pulled some of the newsworthy material from the footage shot Easter Sunday for immediate broadcast.

Carson tells Wallace he did not quarrel with his boss, NBC President Fred Silverman, over the amount of time he spends as host of the Tonight show and he refuses to answer Wallace's repeated questions on his legendary salary.

He says in the interview he wants to remain in television, though not as host of a nightly or even weekly program.

A Midnight Snack Capped The Concert

He invited his audience of 2,800 to board buses for a midnight snack of milk and cookies at an undisclosed location — and they went.

The buses, unknown to the trusting crowd, were bound for the New York School of Printing on Manhattan's west side. There, the audience was served 2,800 half-pints of milk and an equal number of bags of chocolate chip cookies.

Kaufman, a regular on the television show Taxi, is known for his off-the-wall humor and pranks, a brand of anarchy that marked his show Thursday.

He offered $1,000 to any woman in the audience who could wrestle him down on stage — the match ended in a draw. He introduced mock versions of the Radio City Music Hall Rockettes, the Mormon Tabernacle Choir and Santa Claus.

Clad in a white terrycloth bathrobe, he led the audience into a rain-swept 57th Street to board the 20 buses he had rented for the occasion.

"The buses will come back! The buses will come back!" Kaufman shouted as the chartered vehicles returned for a second run.

The mob was joined by several passers-by who, seeing the drenched comedian, decided to join the expedition to parts unknown.

Kaufman's manager, George Shapiro, said the stunt had been planned for a month. Shapiro was joined in distributing the cookies by the comedian's father, Stanley Kaufman of Great Neck, N.Y.

The senior Kaufman said nothing his son does surprises him, "but I think that behind all the frivolity and all the craziness there is a very, very serious man."

The comedian's fans found it difficult to believe that the man who packed them into buses and fed them milk and cookies was anything but a comic genius.

"We're dreaming, we're not really here," said Amy Sussman of Manhattan. "We're going to wake up. I'll tell my psychiatrist about it at the end of the week."

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

309. IN MEMORIAM

GODFREY - In loving memory of my Husband, Bob.
"He has put on invisibility
Dear Lord, I cannot see-
But this I know, although the road ascends
And passes from my sight,
That there will be no night;
That You will take him gently by the hand and lead him on
Along the road of Life that never ends,
And he will find it is not death but dawn.
I do not doubt that You are there as here,
And You will hold him dear."
Glad Godfrey

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD
AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW
THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies.
Thou anointest my head with oil

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Tender New Plants Need Hardening-off

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Garden plants raised indoors cannot be put outdoors without conditioning for the change to lower temperature and to the general open environment.

Particularly is this needed with plants during the spring season. While present weather is pleasant with sun warmth in daytime, nights outdoors in cool areas are often at or lower than 0° C.

At the same time, indoor temperature is likely to be somewhere between 16° and 25° C. during the 24-hour period.

A beginning gardener may think that geraniums, fuchsias, snapdragons and petunies are not harmed by a temperature below 15 deg. C.; in fact they will say their plants have withstood light frosts in fall and even gone through some winters outdoors.

These arguments are valid enough for plants in fall after a growing season outdoors but not for the tender young spring growth started with indoor conditions.

The process of getting young plants acclimatized to garden conditions is called "hardening-off," an old gardening term never used except in this sense.

Several ways are open for this process. If there is a greenhouse without heat that can be left open night and day, the plants will be hardened off by being well spaced on the benches for about 10 days. During the period they should receive a minimum of water; just enough to prevent wilting but certainly not constantly wet.

Coldframes offer another method. These are commonly used by amateurs with a small greenhouse that is occupied during spring for a succession of flowering annuals and vegetable seedling plants.

Plants raised in the greenhouse are moved to a frame with the glass or plastic cover on for the first day or so, then with it raised each day a little more, but closed at night.

Finally with the hardier plants, the cover is left off on a mild overcast night when dawn frost is unlikely. Gentle showers are of course beneficial and desirable as is wind movement for this too strengthens the stems for outdoor living.

It takes a bit of ingenuity but results are worth the effort. Fine strong plants can be raised when grown on window sills and then put outdoors in early spring sunshine away from strong wind at first. The overhead light means a lot to the plants, and tends to stiffen the fibres.

Just now there are perhaps a few geraniums, a fuchsia or two, tomato plants, and soy beans sprouting in egg cartons.

All these can go outdoors each morning after the temperature has come up from the low overnight reading; take the plants indoors again as cooling begins about six o'clock and keep them overnight in the coolest place indoors, preferably away from artificial heat.

Gradually get the plants accustomed to the outdoor strong sunlight and wind movement for this will be their environment all through the season in the open garden.

Balcony gardeners can use the same method of hardening off their plants but it will be easier since distance and steps are less.

Don't forget that our coastal summer nights are fairly cool but they must be free of the threat of frost before putting these indoor raised plants into permanent positions outdoors.

Fighting 'No Bar To Peace'

United Press International

Egypt said today that fighting between Israel and Palestinian guerrillas will not obstruct implementation of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty and urged Saudi Arabia to reconsider its break with Cairo before it is too late.

Visiting Israeli Defence Minister Ezer Weizman concluded talks with Egyptian leaders with the declaration that Israel is "at war" with the Palestine Liberation Organization and there was no end to it in sight.

In Lebanon today, Israeli-backed Lebanese rightist militiamen ignored a UN-engineered ceasefire in south Lebanon and Israeli planes flew several reconnaissance missions over the region, witnesses reported.

Palestinian and Israeli guns were silent for the second straight day after four days of strikes and counterstrikes which left about 50 Lebanese and Palestinians dead and more than 80 others wounded.

In Cairo Weizman reacted coolly to a Romanian proposal for a revival of the Geneva Arab-Israeli peace conference, with all parties attending, to work out a comprehensive settlement.

Weizman and Egyptian Defense Minister Lt. Gen. Kamal Hassan Ali briefed reporters following their third and final session since the Israeli leader's arrival Wednesday.

Ali was asked whether PLO and Israeli military strikes and counterstrikes such as those that took place earlier this week across the Israeli-Lebanese borders would impede the implementation of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

"No, this will not affect our negotiations," Ali replied. But he expressed "a wish" for some arrangement to stop the Israeli-PLO hostilities to "pave the way for a good atmosphere for the negotiations."

Despite the tensions along the Lebanese border and Egypt's increasing diplomatic isolation within the Arab world, the Israeli military command announced Egypt and Israel will begin formal negotiations Sunday on the implementation of the peace treaty Carter helped clinch. They will cover technical aspects of the Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai desert.

Caesar's World Branching Out

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — State gambling authorities, reluctantly ending an era when Nevada was the only — legal — game in town for American high rollers, have given their blessing to the controls on newly legalized gambling in New Jersey, allowing Nevada casino operators to open eastern branches.

The ruling was only an hour old Thursday when Caesar's World was granted the first permission to expand from Nevada to Atlantic City.

The five-man Nevada Gaming Commission and three-man Nevada Gaming Control Board, the policing arm of Nevada gambling, met jointly to take the action, endorsing New Jersey's gambling laws and enforcement proceedures. The vote was unanimous.

"Today is one of those times we thought would never get here but it did," said commission chairman Harry Reid. "Ours is no longer the only game in town.

"It is hard to accept but inevitable," he said. "The day is here, but it's not all bad. We never before had anything with which to compare our only show in town."

"I am voting for this, but it is a half-hearted vote," said Commissioner Jack Walsh, calling the change "an end of an era".

The action marked the official recognition by Nevada gambling regulation authorities that those licensed to operate casinos in Nevada would be allowed to expand into "foreign gambling" — foreign meaning outside Nevada.

"The Foreign Gaming Act" passed by the Nevada Legislature in 1977 barred casino licensees from operating outside Nevada without permission, under threat of losing their Nevada licenses.

The statute is part of a body of law and regulations aimed at preventing the infiltration or takeover of Nevada's legal gambling by the criminals who run the gambling business in states where it is illegal.

The law required that Nevada authorities, before granting permission to do business elsewhere, approve the gambling laws and control methods of other states or countries as meeting Nevada standards.

The Nevada Gaming Commission first acted favorably Thursday on a 79-page report by the control board, which investigated New Jersey laws and enforcement techniques for a year to determine that organized crime would be prevented from infiltrating casinos there.

The report took exception to some New Jersey provisions — such as temporary licensing — but was generally favorable.

The commissioners then unanimously approved the application of Caesar's World Inc. to run a gambling operation in Atlantic City.

Caesar's World is the parent company of both the posh Caesar's Palace Hotel on the Las Vegas "strip" and of Caesar's New Jersey Inc., owner of Boardwalk Regency Inc., which opeates the $75 million Boardwalk Regency Hotel in Atlantic City.

Barbados PM Attacked

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (Reuter) — A man rushed into the House of Assembly on Wednesday and tried to attack Prime Minister J. M. Adams as he prepared to deliver his budget speech. The man tried to snatch the budget speech from Adams, knocking over microphones but injuring no one before he was caught. Police said later than an unidentified man had been arrested.

Iraq-Sudan Break

BAGDAD (Reuter) — Iraq has broken off diplomatic relations with Sudan in retaliation for a similar move by Sudan, the Iraq News Agency reported Tuesday. The news agency said the decision was taken in view of the "unfriendly and hostile attitude of the Sudanese regime."

Moonshiner Now Tanks Up His Truck and Not Himself

Wilkerson and his solar still as well as truck that runs primarily on alcohol

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — Jerry Wilkerson used to fancy himself a pretty good moonshiner. Now a non-drinker, he is still touting the merits of home-brewed alcohol — to put in a car's gas tank.

He is starting out on a campaign to urge Americans to build solar stills, at about $22 each, which he says can fill their tanks with alcohol for as little as 10 cents a gallon.

"I got tired of cussing the government and cussing the oil companies and blaming other people for my problems," said Wilkerson, 43, of Levan, Utah.

He says he developed his do-it-yourself plan as "a way of getting the nation out of the control of the oil-producing nations."

He has been giving lectures on his ideas and plans to begin a cross-country lecture tour later this month, travelling in a pickup truck that runs primarily on alcohol.

Minor engine conversions allow the truck to run on alcohol or gas. It has two gas tanks. Wilkerson switches to regular fuel to start the engine because alcohol does not create enough vapor pressure.

Wilkerson does not sell the solar stills. He does not even own a patent on the model he carries around. He asks for voluntary contributions at his lectures but says he does not get many.

Wilkerson, a retired U.S. Navy man and father of eight, said he developed his moonshining skills making corn liquor in the woods of North Carolina.

"In the navy, we brewed up a little applejack and raisin brandy," he said. "I've been living around home-made alcohol for a long time."

Wilkerson, who dropped out of college engineering courses after three years, said he has written mayors across the United States to line up his lecture tour.

He admits he will have to buy some gasoline along the way but he is going to try to run mostly on alcohol.

He is publishing a book on how to make fuel in your backyard. It points out that a U.S. government permit is required and that chemicals must be added so the alcohol cannot be drunk.

Wilkerson claims his solar still — a one- by two-metre wooden box with a glass top — can produce five gallons of alcohol a day from fermented sugar beets or other vegetation with a high sugar content. The fermenting can be done in old oil drums.

Other materials used in the still include plastic pipe and dark burlap. The fermented liquid soaks the burlap and the dark material absorbs heat from the sun. Alcohol evaporates from the solution and then condenses on the glass and trails down to a container.

Wilkerson acknowledges the temptation might be great to use the stills illegally. "The answer is self-policing," he said. "You can bet that if I find anyone using one of these things for moonshining, I'd turn him in."

Hunt Down Shah Arafat Orders Men

TEHRAN (UPI) — Yasser Arafat has ordered the Palestine Liberation Organization to capture Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and deliver him to Iran's new government, a top PLO official said in an interview Thursday.

The shah currently is living in exile in the Bahamas.

"We hope to have the honor to arrest the shah," Hani Al Hassan, chief of the PLO office in Tehran, said in an interview with the political weekly publication Javan and the newspaper Kayhan.

Al Hassan was quoted as saying the order to apprehend the shah had come directly from Arafat, PLO chairman.

"But our task has been made difficult since the shah left Morocco for that far-off island," Al Hassan said.

The shah, who flew out of Tehran at the controls of his own plane, first went to Egypt, then Morocco and on March 30 went to Paradise Island in the Bahamas where he has remains under tight security.

"Inshallah, our brothers will succeed in their mission," the PLO spokesman said.

Al Hassan arrived in Tehran at the head of a powerful PLO delegation after Khomeini's revolutionaries overthrew the shah in mid-February. Khomeini gave the PLO the former embasssy of Israel, after expelling all Israeli diplomats.

Khomeini has repeatedly said the shah would be tried if caught. Government officials have also spoken of a trial in absentia, but have not begun it since authorities hope to have the shah there personally.

The shah and Empress Farah left Morocco March 30 for the Bahamas, where local officials said he, his wife, children and 30 aides, were expected to stay about three weeks, before possibly coming to the United States.

But on April 19 U.S. President Jimmy Carter reportedly informed the shah his presence in the United States would not be welcomed until U.S. relations with Iran's new régime had stabilized.

Amin Death Troop Jailed

Times News Services

NAIROBI — Seven Ugandan soldiers carrying papers identifying them as members of deposed president Idi Amin's torture and death gestapo have been jailed for one year for illegally entering Kenya.

The seven, fleeing pursuing Tanzanian army units, crossed from Uganda into Kenya Thursday and were caught by police, the prosecutor told a court in the frontier town of Busia.

In their defence, the seven men said they were visiting relatives in Kenya.

Since the overthrow of Amin's regime earlier this month by Tanzanian and Ugandan exile forces, large numbers of Amin loyalists have crossed into Kenya, posing as refugees.

Kenyan authorities have indicated they will repatriate to Uganda fugitives sought for trial by the provisional government of President Yusufu Lule which was installed after Amin's overthrow.

Meanwhile, Kampala Radio reported today that Britain has pledged $2 million in emergency aid to help in the reconstruction of Uganda and said more assistance will be forthcoming.

In a related development, the bodies of four Western European journalists have been found in Uganda where they were killed three weeks ago by Amin's troops.

The four crossed Lake Victoria by boat from Kenya.

Spokesmen for the Swedish and West German embassies said today that the graves were found in Katosi two days ago and the bodies were brought to Nairobi Thursday.

Dust Danger For Smokers

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Smokers may be especially prone to developing diseases caused by air pollution, because their lungs are unable to get rid of harmful dust, a new study shows.

The researchers conclude from a test conducted with a harmless substitute that smokers' lungs retain five times as much dust from poisonous, insoluble minerals as those of non-smokers.

Though the reasons for the difference are still unclear, the scientists say their discovery may help explain why asbestos workers who smoke are 90 times more likely to die from lung cancer than non-smokers.

The research, conducted at Harvard and Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), is being published in the May 4 issue of the journal Science.

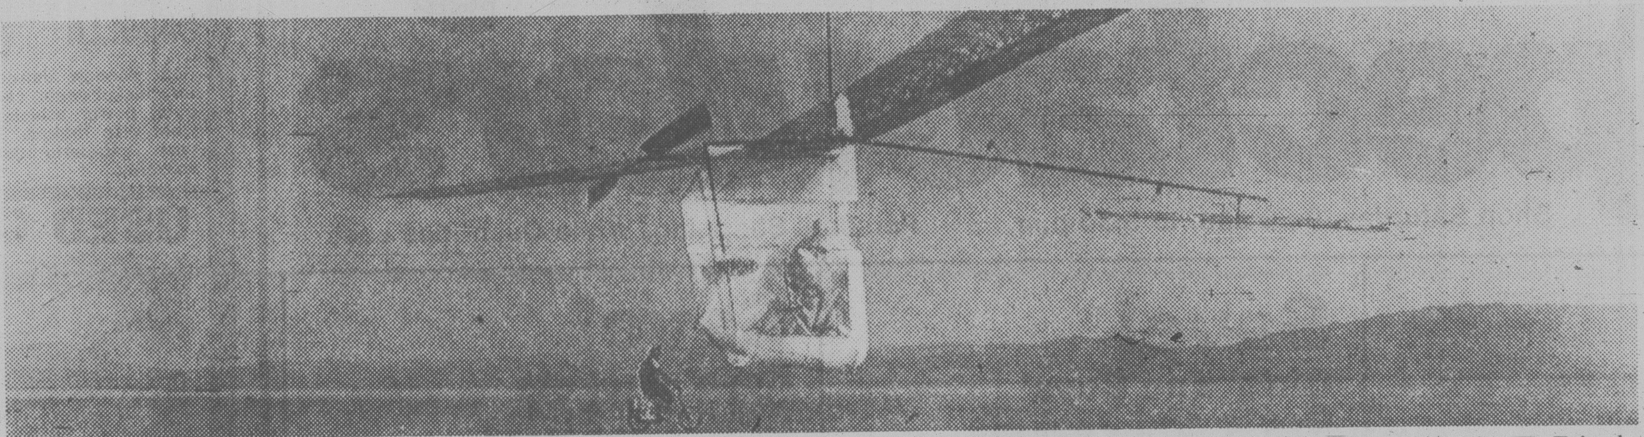
In the study, three smokers and nine non-smokers inhaled harmless magnetic dust. After 11 months, the smokers still retained half the original dust in their lungs, while the non-smokers had expelled all but 10 per cent.

The researchers said smokers apparently face a double risk of lung damage from the cancer-causing agents in tobacco smoke and the inability of their lungs to clear poisonous dust.

Earlier reports have noted that smokers who are exposed to such pollutants as asbestos have a far higher rate of lung disease than could be explained by either the toxic dust or the tobacco acting alone.

The test using magnetic dust was conducted by David Cohen of MIT's Francis Bitter National Magnet Laboratory and Dr. Joseph Brain of the Harvard School of Public Health.

In an interview, Cohen said the researchers do not understand the physical difference between the two groups' lungs.



PEDAL POWER is the mode by which Bryan Allen hopes to cross the Englsih Channel next month in experimental airplane Gossamer Albatross, undergoing tests at Harper Dry Lake in California. This week Allen set a human-powered flight record of 24 kilometres in one hour and nine minutes. Friend on moped has no trouble keeping up with Allen and his plane. Distance across the channel is approximately 50 kilometres.

Plan to Cool Environment

WASHINGTON (WP) — Spurred by growing international conflicts over the environment, the United States is proposing a treaty that would require signatory governments to prepare environmental assessments and consult with other countries on potentially harmful projects.

Assistant secretary of state Lucy Benson left last week for Nairobi where she will present the idea to representatives of more than 50 nations gathered for a UN Environment Program meeting.

The treaty idea was first outlined in a resolution sponsored by Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. and passed unanimously by the Senate last July. It would export the basic principles of the United States' landmark environmental law, the 1969 National Environmental Policy Act.

A treaty would address such problems as:

—Dams built in one country that affect nations downstream. The United States, for example, is wrangling with Canada over North Dakota's Garrison Diversion project that could pollute Canadian rivers.

—The clearing of tropical forest in one country that might cause erosion and flooding in a neighboring country.

—Nuclear reactors that could release radiation across international borders.

Before undertaking a project, countries would consult with potentially affected states or, in the case of the global commons, with the UN Environment Program. Countries would delay the project for 90 days to allow for consultation. They would agree to "employ a good faith effort to settle disputes."

Barnard Backs the Right-to-Die

WASHINGTON (AP) — To support his opinion that "active euthanasia" should be used, Dr. Christiaan Barnard says it is often a doctor's duty to let a patient die.

The South African surgeon who pioneered heart transplant operations added: "I have never practised active euthanasia but I believe there is often a need for it. We should get the opinions of society and have those who make our laws draw the boundaries for us."

Barnard began a discussion Thursday on "the quality and quantity of life" at the National Town Meeting here by saying: "We're not here to prolong life or conquer death. Often it is our duty to let a patient die." Rather, he said, it is the duty of medicine to improve the quality of life.

When asked about his position on the right to life, Barnard, who performed the world's first successful human heart transplant, replied: "I even believe the newly conceived fetus has the right to live. The problem is, 'What is life? How do you define it?' As a practicing physician, I have seen many patients who died before they breathed their last."

New Type of Lunar Rock Discovered

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Scientists studying minute samples of rock brought from the moon by a Soviet rocket probe have found a type of rock not previously recognized in the lunar soil.

"For us in this business, we think it is an important finding," said Dr. Klaus Keil, director of the University of New Mexico Institute of Meteoritics.

Keil said the sample being studied at UNM was smaller than a "dust speck," but he said the size of the sample did not make a difference in the research.

Non-White Vote Major U.K. Force

LONDON (AP) — Britain's 1.2 million non-white voters are considered a major factor in next Thursday's general election.

They hold the key in a dozen districts and might tip the balance in 40 others, political analysts say.

"It's obvious that colored voters have the capacity to wield significant electoral power," a Labor party campaign official said.

"Proportionately, they could elect as many as 12 blacks to the House of Commons if they chose. But there's little chance of that happening because they have never used their votes or have never been organized in the way they voted."

There are only five non-whites among the record 2,751 candidates running for the Commons.

There has been no non-white member of Parliament since an Asian, Sapurji Saklatvala, was elected as a Communist in 1928. However, there are signs that the traditionally-fragmented non-white vote is being organized to a greater extent than in any previous election.

Non-white community leaders last week drew up a Black People's Manifesto listing racial issues that non-whites should question candidates about in the current campaign.

The three major political parties — Labor, Conservative and Liberal — have stayed away from the racial issue in the campaign. But the ultra-right-wing National Front is waging what its national organizer, Martin Webster, said is a "very, very heavy racialist campaign."

Labor party officials say that party leaders in districts with significant non-white populations are "pulling out all the stops." Labor, led by incumbent Prime Minister James Callaghan, promised in its election manifesto to boost equal employment opportunities for non-whites in state industries, which might win it votes among unemployed non-whites.

Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives are concentrating on the 600,000 Asian voters, many of whom are shopkeepers who tend to favor the Tory free-enterprise policy.

The Conservatives are running a major advertising campaign in the Asians' Punjabi, Urdu and Bengali-language newspapers and have Asian candidates in two Labor districts in London and Glasgow.

"We decided you can do more where the Asians are concerned," said Mervyn Kohler, the party's Asian specialist. "They have more structure and more tradition. We could pick up quite a lot of marginal seats."

Sugar Dump by Canada Probed

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Treasury Department has launched an investigation into charges that Canadian exporters "dumped" sugar into northeastern U.S. markets, harming a U.S. sugar-refining giant.

The department is acting on a complaint by Amstar Corp., a New York-based company with net sugar sales last year of nearly $1 billion.

Mentioned in Amstar's complaint are three Canadian firms: Redpath Sugar, Atlantic Sugar and St. Lawrence Sugar. Amstar said that Canadian-refined sugar was being sold in the U.S. at less than the Canadian price, resulting in price suppression and lost jobs in Amstar plants.

Amstar claims that the Canadian firms were selling sugar at between $1.51 and $4.62 per hundredweight below Canadian domestic prices.

In announcing the investigation yesterday, Treasury released a preliminary finding that weakened Amstar's case. It said there was "substantial doubt of injury or likelihood of injury" to U.S. firms or individuals because of the Canadian competition.

Under U.S. trade law, Treasury has six months to make a final determination in the case.

Canadian sugar exports to the U.S. last year totalled nearly 100,000 tons valued at $28 million. In the northeast U.S. markets, the Canadian exports amounted to 1.7 per cent of total consumption.

A Treasury official said yesterday that dumping penalties would only be levied against the Canadian firms if it were determined that U.S. companies were injured by the action. "If it doesn't hurt anybody, we'll just call it a bargain and leave it at that," the official said.

Thatcher Lead Trimmed Again In New Poll

LONDON (AP) — With Britain's general election only six days away, an opinion poll published today puts Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives still in the lead.

But it is the third poll of the week to show a reduced margin between the Conservatives and Prime Minister James Callaghan's Labor party.

The Marplan poll, published in The Sun, a pro-Conservative tabloid, says the Tories are still "comfortably ahead." But their lead over Labor is down to seven percentage points, compared with 10 points in a Marplan poll Monday.

Mrs. Thatcher received a commendation today from former labor prime minister Harold Wilson, who described her as "good, very good."

"I can't remember a time when Tory policies had such a bite, a hard edge," he said in an interview in the pro-Conservative Daily Mail. "She has certainly given them a bite they've never had before."

Wilson, who handed over the Labor party and the government to Callaghan in 1976, said he thinks his wife might vote Conservative because of Mrs. Thatcher.

"It's just because she is a woman that my wife would vote for her," he said.

Army Patrols Flood-Emptied Ghost Towns

Times News Services

WINNIPEG — The Red River Valley south of here was turning into a ghost town alley today as residents fled and military personnel worked desperately to reinforce dikes already strained by the rampaging river.

A 400-man military battalion moved into the communities of Emerson, St. Jean, Morris and Ste. Adolphe to maintain dikes and protect homes from looters. No looting incidents were reported.

Military and RCMP personnel were patrolling these and other temporary ghost towns created by the evacuation to ensure everyone made it to safe ground.

The military is equipped with six 12-passenger twin Huey helicopters, five two-passenger Kiowa helicopters, one 48-passenger Chinook helicopter, 17 armored personnel carriers and a number of rubber assault boats.

There was also a scramble to rescue as much as possible of the grain crop stored on farms in the threatened area. Officials estimated crop losses could run into millions of dollars, quite apart from the possibly disastrous losses from delays in this year's seeding.

There was an item of good news for Manitobans who have not yet completed their individual income tax returns. Revenue Canada has extended the filing deadline by two weeks to May 15.

Diking and sandbagging operations are far from complete: all affected communities were raising their dikes another two feet in reponse to ever-rising peak flood predictions.

Hundreds of thousands of sand bags were arriving daily, including one shipment of 75,000 from North Carolina.

Meanwhile, skies were clear — marred only by an occasional snowsquall — as the waters continued their inexorable rise, cutting off the communities from highway travel and increasing concerns as to whether dikes would be high enough to withstand the crest when it arrives next week.

The exodus of valley residents, ordered Wednesday by the provincial government, was reluctant but orderly as evacuees moved to safety ahead of the swelling Red River.

Evacuation headquarters in Winnipeg — where a number of emergency shelters have been set up — reported about one-fifth of the estimated 10,000 persons to be evacuated had registered their pullout plans to local shelters by late Thursday, but that many persons had left their homes without notifying them.

In addition, more than 3,000 Winnipeg residents have offered home, cottages or other assistance, although many flood victims have been able to make their own arrangements with family or friends.

In some cases, uniformed officers had to explain the urgency of the situation to veterans of a half-dozen floods in the past 40 years who were determined to see it through.

The flood threat on the Souris River near Estevan, Sask., continued to ease today, but it was a different story in northern Ontario, where hundreds have been evacuated from their homes.

The hardest-hit area so far has been Field Township, some 40 kilometres northwest of North Bay, where 200 residents were evacuated Thursday.

United Way To Beat Taxman, Heirs

CALGARY (CP) — A 78-year-old Calgary widower has dodged hungry taxmen and heirs by donating almost $40,000 of his life savings to the United Way.

The man, who requested anonymity to protect the feelings of relatives who may be anticipating large inheritances, made the $37,840 gift on condition it be used to help the handicapped and needy of Calgary.

"I'd only have them (relatives) on my back if I didn't donate it," the retired city worker said Thursday.

"If I gave it to them they'd just throw it to the wind . . . I wanted to give it to people who need it most."

There were other advantages as well.

"I have to pay income taxes and this will cut them by half. It's one way of making sure of the government not getting it."

Record Auto Profits

Times News Services

General Motors Corp. profits rose 45 per cent to $1.26 billion, or $4.39 a share, and Ford's rose 28 per cent to $595 million, or $4.97 per share, the two companies said Thursday.

GM's sales rose 20 per cent to $17.9 billion and Ford's rose 26 per cent to $12.6 billion. Both figures are records.

In physical volume, GM's sales rose 5.8 per cent to 2.47 million vehicles and Ford's rose 11 per cent to 1.8 million.

Ford said its profit improvement comes from overseas, particularly from "higher unit sales and cost efficiences" in Europe and Latin America.

Meanwhile, Mobil Corp., the second largest U.S. oil company, has reported an 81-per-cent increase in first quarter profits, continuing a series of earnings reports showing companies benefiting from increased demand and higher prices on world oil markets.

Mobil's earnings rose to $437 million in the first three months of this year, compared with $241 million in the first quarter last year.

Sun Co., Inc., the 11th largest U.S. oil company, reported on Thursday a 43-per-cent gain in first quarter earnings to $120.3 million, compared with $84.3 million in the same quarter last year.

In a related debelopment, President Jimmy Carter's advisers are offering little hope that U.S. consumers have seen the end to surging inflation.

"We can still expect months of bad news on the economy," especially on the inflation front, White House press secretary Jody Powell said Thursday after the labor department reported a one-per-cent increase in consumer prices during March.

Despite continuing sharp increases in prices, Powell insisted the administration will stick to its anti-inflation policies which include voluntary wage and price guidelines.

Homemaker Pensions?

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau promised today a re-elected Liberal government would seek to include 4.7 million homemakers — mostly women — in the Canada Pension Plan. (For other federal election stories see pages 18 to 21).

He told a Toronto business group that the Liberals are "committed to providing adequate retirement income to homemakers, an essential category of workers who are not presently considered part of the labor force."

Conservative Leader Joe Clark made a similar promise today in Pickering, near Toronto, in answer to a question from a student, but didn't elaborate.

Trudeau said he would convene a national conference on pensions in the fall and would ask provinces, labor, business and pensioner groups to take part.

He also proposed other pension reforms including portability of private pensions, protection from inflation, greater choice of retirement age, and better access to pension plans.

Trudeau aides said the changes would allow housewives to make voluntary contributions. Currently, the Canada Pension Plan does provide some benefits for widowed or separated spouses while most private pension programs do not.

Maggie T. Scuppered 'Patch-Up'

TORONTO (UPC) — Margaret Trudeau last year refused an offer by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau to quit politics so the two could be reconciled, CTV interviewer Henry Champ said Thursday.

Champ said the Trudeaus tried a four-day reconciliation attempt last November, but Mrs. Trudeau changed her mind only hours before Trudeau was to announce he was leaving politics.

"She realized she could not maintain fidelity and turn her back on her new life."

Champ said Mrs. Trudeau told him about the reconciliation attempt during interviews taped in February. The interviews were never aired because the publishers of Mrs. Trudeau's autobiography Beyond Reason obtained an injunction against it, claiming it would hurt their book sales.

The interviewer says in the coming issue of trade magazine Quill and Quire that Trudeau was prepared to quit politics, had already hired architects to design a "dream house" in the country and planned to practise law.

Charge Follows Chase

A 24-year-old man has been charged with criminal negligence after his car jumped a concrete meridian in the 700-block Finlayson, clipped a city police motorcyclist, and lead the officer on a short but erratic high speed chase.

Mercer was travelling in the 700-block Finlayson at about 10:15 p.m. Thursday when a car approaching from the opposite direction struck the median and careened onto his side of the road, police said today.

Mercer swung his bike into the curb lane and the driver of the car, fighting to avoid a collision, drove onto the sidewalk, sideswiping the motorcycle's crash bars as he went past.

The car then sped off, entered a one-way exit lane at the Mayfair Shopping Centre, raced through the parking lot, came out onto Blanshard, and crossed over the concrete median twice more.

The car spluttered to a stop at Topaz, a block away, where its transmission and steering fell apart.

The spokesman said the suspect, who was expected to appear in provincial court later in the day, has also been charged with driving while his licence is under suspension.

NDP, Socred Slates Filled

Only the NDP and Social Credit have full slates of candidates in the May 10 provincial election and the number of hopefuls has dropped sharply, mainly due to the provinical Liberal party's dwindling fortunes.

At the close of nominations Thursday there were 177 persons registered as candidates, down from 221 in the last election in 1975.

Both Social Credit, led by Premier Bill Bennett, and the NDP, headed by former premier Dave Barrett, will run a full complement of candidates for the provincial legislature's 57 seats.

The Conservatives, trying to establish themselves as a force on the provincial scene, will field 37 despite allegations by leader Vic Stephens that the federal party is not giving him help.

The Conservatives, who captured only one seat in 1975 and who still held it at the dissolution of the legislature April 3, ran 29 candidates in 1975.

But the Liberals, who ran 49 candidates in the 1975 election with success in only one seat, are offering only five this time — all of them in Vancouver-area ridings which were once their power base.

In addition, there are 10 independents, seven Communists and four members of the fringe leftist North American Labor Party looking for votes.

Death Plotted by Radiation

Times News Services

CHERBOURG — Radioactive wastes have been found under the driver's seat of a French nuclear executive's car in what appears to be the first known attempt at assassination by radiation.

Police said Guy Busin, 39, was examined thoroughly after the discovery. No ill effects except pervasive fatigue were detected but Busin, already in hospital for treatment of a back ailment suffered in an accident last year, remains under observation.

On March 21 he decided to salvage the seats from his wrecked vehicle, and found three rings, used for moving radioactive rods, hidden in the seats between the padding and the springs.

The rings were still emitting radiation registering 10 rads an hour. The accepted upper limit of radioactive exposure for technicians is about five rads a year.

Murder by radioactivity has been the subject of scientific speculation and at least one mystery novel. But Busin appears to be the first victim of a genuine attempt.

He said the discs must have been placed there since the last time he looked under the seats, during his vacation last August.

Busin's wife said today "my husband is a bear for work, highly appreciated by his bosses and feared by his subordinates. But he has never harmed anybody."

The only apparent effect of the radiation was that her husband had been very tired in recent months, she added.

Busin, who oversees 75 employees, told police he does not believe he has any enemies.

Several months ago Busin's car was sabotaged in a more humdrum manner. Somebody put sugar in the gas tank and acid in the crank case.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was mixed in active mid-afternoon trading.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. was 3.15 million shares, compared with 2.97 million shares at the same time Thursday.

Among industrials, Noma Industries A fell 1 to $11, Imperial General Properties ⅞ to $16½, Alcan Aluminium ¾ to $41¼, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas ¾ to $61¾ and Domtar ⅝ to $24¼.

Dome Petroleum gained 1⅜ to $138½, Petrofina Canada 1¼ to $31, CAE Industries A 1 to $28, Bow Valley Industries ¾ to $27 and Noranda Mines A ½ to $43¼.

McIntyre Mines declined ½ to $46, Highmont Miing 50 cents to $4.50 and Brenda Mines ¼ to $17⅛. Dome Mines advanced 6¼ to $111¼ and Canada Tungsten Mining ½ to $26½.

Numac Oil and Gas was down ½ to $31, Ranger Oil Canada ⅜ to $23 and North Canadian Oils ¼ to $12¼. Total Petroleum North America ws up 1¾ to $25¾ and Asamera Oil ¾ to $18.

New York

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 6.49 on Thursday, lost another 4.85 to 856.12 by 2 p.m.

Losers outdistanced gainers by about a 5-to-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Federal Reserve Board statistics issued late Thursday showed a $4.1 billion jump in the basic measure of the money supply for the latest reporting week.

Analysts said the unexpectedly sharp rise might well increase pressure on the Board to tighten credit further, pushing interest rates upward.

It also was seen as one piece of evidence that inflationary forces remain strong in the economy, despite the central bank's efforts to date.

Charter Co. climbed 2¼ to $18¼ before the company requested a trading halt in its stock. Heavy interest in Charter shares has been attributedto the company's plans to acquire Carey Energy Corp.

Charter Co. warrants gained 2 to $12⅜.

Interway, also active, was up 1⅛ to $35⅛. Gelco Corp. raised its offer for 49 per cent of Interway's stock from $37 to $40 a share.

Montreal

Alberta Gas Trunk Line gained ⅛ at $20, Brascan A ⅛ at $23½, Dominion Stores ¼ at $18¾, Genstar ¼ at $43⅝, Norcen Energy Resource ⅛ at $20¾, and Reed Stenhouse ¼ at $9.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was mixed near the close of light trading today. The Financial Times index fell 3.1 to 543.8. Oils advanced but industrials eased and golds were narrowly mixed. Canadian stocks declined.

Divests Plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nestle S.A., a Swiss-based food company, will divest itself of a plant in Darien, Wis., under an agreement announced by the U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

The frozen-food plant to be divested is operated by Libby, McNeill and Libby, a Nestle subsidiary.

The agreement settles a 1975 FTC complaint challenging Nestle's 1973 acquisition of Stouffer Foods. The commission alleged that the acquisition would substantially reduce competition.

The FTC complaint also named Unilac Inc., a holding company affiliated with Nestle and based in Panama. The consent agreement provides for dismissal of charges against Unilac.

The agreement will be the subject of public comment until June 25, after which the commission may make it final or withdraw its acceptance of the agreement.

Mr. Pops Turns Pure Gold During Special

America's beloved Maestro Arthur Fiedler will celebrate his 50th anniversary as conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra by doing the thing he loves best: conducting a sparkling two-hour performance, Evening at Pops Special, to be broadcast live from Symphony Hall Tuesday, May 1, at 8 p.m. on Channel 9.

The special Golden Annivesary performance, produced by WGBH/Boston, will feature the inimitable Pops blend of popular and light classical music, and Maestro Fiedler promises that he is planning to choose a number of current favorites for a "fresh, bright, new program." And he adds, "After all, I'm not an old geezer."

During Fiedler's tenure as Pops conductor — the longest in the orchestra's history — he has become one of America's best-known and best-loved music makers. Some ten thousand fans write to him very year to express their affection and their thanks for the joy he has brought into their lives. WGBH's Evening at Pops hasconsistently been one of the most popular series on public television, enjoyed by millions of avid viewers.

Despite an illness that hospitalized the 84-year-old Fiedler last December, the indefatigable Maestro declared his intention to get back to work as soon as possible. ("He who rests rots" is his motto.) He is planning his 50th anniversary celebration with his usual gusto, and the entire nation is invited to join him for what promises to be a gala celebration.

William Cosel, who has been executive producer of Evening at Pops since its inception in 1970, is looking forward to Evening at Pops Special with great enthusiasm. "Fiedler's energy and spirit are incredible," he says, "And it's going to be a very special program."

Evening at Pops Special will kick off the 1979 Boston season of the Pops; the PBS television season will be broadcast, as always, starting in July.

Pickering analyzes the drive and sense of pride Cuba instills in its people and how victory on the playing fields has helped forge a new Cuba.

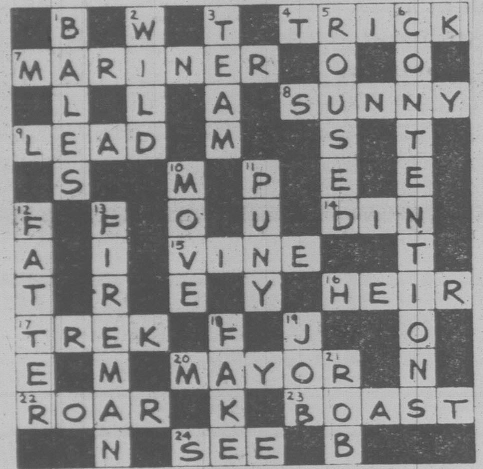
PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS

4. TRICK not track or truck. TRICK is the most pointed answer, since a track and a truck are more or less normal facilities and do not link up so strongly with the idea of an event to "read of."
7. MARINER not marines. The expression "the marines" tends unsuitably, to suggest the whole body of them, rather than some particular marines such as one might "envisage" in a given case.
8. SUNNY not funny. One breaks ice by being warm rather than merely comical.
14. DIN not dun. As suggested, a DIN may have to be accepted. On the other hand, it may well be that a man should rightly pay a dun, or offer excuses, etc., rather than simply try to ignore him.
15. VINE not vane. Being commonly grown in an exposed site, a VINE "is quite usually exposed to the wind, etc." (i.e., weather and natural conditions in general.) A vane, of the type implied, is placed specifically to receive and register the wind.
16. HEIR not hair. "Some men, more than others . . . . ." tends to relate this idea to men in a fairly broad way; however, since total baldness is hardly a common hazard, hair is less apt.
17. TREK not tree. The clue's word "last" (rather than live, say) suits TREK better than tree.
20. MAYOR not major. Any question of tactlessly "ordering people about" (rather than simply giving orders) relates to civilian affairs rather than military discipline.
22. ROAR not roam. The word "behavior" relates to such things as social procedure, comportment, gestures, etc., favoring ROAR. To roam is more a way of life.
23. BOAST not boost. One may doubt if it is good business to boost prices thus depressing sales and good will.
24. SEE not sew. Since a woman doesn't normally depend on sewing to keep her things neat and tidy in general, "sew" is unsuitably specific.

CLUES DOWN:

1. BALES not tales. BALES are easy enough to make up from existing material; but, depending on the standard required, tales may be exacting.
2. WILD not mild. "Mild frenzy" is self-contradictory.
3. TEAM not beam. The expression "go far" relates to human success, rather than to the penetrative power of a strong beam of light, etc.
5. ROUSED not routed. "Things may well be pretty chaotic" tends to understate the case of routed. Also, the soldiers are not directly routed because of (i.e., "due to") an attack (any more than, say, a player loses a game because his opponent is playing). ROUSED (by sounding alarm, etc.) is more apt.
6. CONTENTIONS not conventions. CONTENTIONS may well be called on to be justified by logic, as suggested; but conventions simply exist by general consent and are their own justification.
10. MOVE not rove. Gypsies are understood to rove as a nomadic way of life, which means that they MOVE "often."

Soap Opera Scene

Ann Williams now on Edge

By JOHN GOUDAS

ANN WILLIAMS (left), killed off as Eunice in Search for Tomorrow, rises to act again as Margo Huntington in Edge of Night. Fran Myers, who is Peggy Thorpe in Guiding Light, had a good bit of luck on Friday, April 13, when she became the real life mother of a baby boy.

For 11 years, Ann Williams was Joanne Vincente's younger sister Eunice on Search for Tomorrow, and then one day she got "a bullet in the heart." Seven months ago, Ann Williams resurfaced on Edge of Night as the glamorous Margo Huntington who recently married the opportunist Elliot.

"Actually, the same people who killed me off in Search hired me for Edge," said Ann recently in her dressing room between tapings on the soap.

"As Eunice, I was probably the only character in Henderson to have a legitimate child," said Ann. "I enjoyed playing in the soap for the 11 years or I would have left long before, but I have to admit that Margo is more fun to play. She's complex and self-centered but she has a streak of sensitivity, too. I met writer Henry Slezar for the first time recently and thanked him for creating Margo. He was very gracious and said he merely wrote the part but that I created it."

As fans of the popular show know, Margo is hot and heavy in the plotline these days and some viewers think she might be heading for a fate not too dissimilar from poor dead Eunice. Ann said she didn't know what the writers had planned for Margo but she was ready for any eventuality.

In any case, Ann likes appearing in a soap and never feels trapped. She also loves working in the theatre, and that's been the primary reason for not going out to try her luck in Hollywood.

Other good reasons for staying on the East Coast are her husband, investment broker Robert Welch, and her four children — 12-year-old Amanda, the equestrian in the family; 10-year-old Elizabeth, who is a year ahead in school; 8-year-old Daniel, who is a typical boy in all his pursuits; and 18-months-old Diana Rebecca, who has everyone showering love and attention on her.

As dedicated as she is in her profession, Ann didn't set her sights on an acting career from the start. Ann wanted to be so many different things, she confessed, and the only way to do it was to become an actress.

CHANNEL CHATTER. Fran Myers (Peggy Thorpe on Guiding Light) gave birth to a baby boy, Charles Andrew, on Friday, April the 13th. There's no conflict about Fran's appearance on the soap. As fans recall in the storyline, Peggy left Springfield recently and will probably be back in the near future. Fran's husband is actor Roger Newman, who used to play Ken Norris in Guiding Light.

Peter Gatto (Chef Tony Alphonso in Love of Life) just married actress Pamela Burrell. They are making their home in New York City, but they are also refurbishing a country retreat in upstate New York.

Stefan Schnabel (Dr. Stephen Jackson on Guiding Light) really travels. He recently made an appearance with the Alaskan Repertory Company and will be appearing in Huntington Station, N.Y., in a production until May 19. Of course, he continues in the soap.

Claire Labine and Paul Mayer, head writers of Ryan's Hope, along with Mary Munisteri, Judith Pinsker, and Jeffrey Lane, were honored by the Writers' Guild for the fourth consecutive year in the category of Outstanding Achievement — Daytime Serials — television. The show has copped the award every year it has been on.

Vacationers from and returning to the rigors of soapdom include Charita Bauer (Bert Bauer on Guiding Light) en route to Europe; Tom O'Rourke (Dr. Justin Marler on Guiding Light) just getting away; Audrey Peters (Vanessa Sterling on Love of Life) recently returned from Florida; and Eileen Fulton (Lisa Coleman in As the World Turns), back from two weeks in California.

Lloyd Battista (Ray Slater of Love of Life), the lively spirit of one wine commercial, recently completed a similar TV ad for another wine company. Lloyd's at his bubbly best!

PLOT PORTENTS. Kay Chancellor is driven to violence on The Young and the Restless. Kay's actions have always been prompted by desperation and Suzanne hasskillfully manipulated Kay's needs, but it looks as though Suzanne may not come out ahead!

On As the World Turns, will Dr. Douglas Campbell's proposed trip to Greece bringabout a reconciliation between his wife Marsha and his son? (As fans recall we've never seen his estranged wife and son.)

Jill painfully withdraws from her drug habit on Ryan's Hope. Pat and Nancy's involvement disturbs their respective families. The commodities market looks very grim for Johnny, and Siobhan almost makes a fatal mistake. On the eve of Sam's wedding on One Life to Live, she is having second thoughts about going through with it. Pat finds out about Adam's past and he becomes adamant about their plans for the future. Callison is on the hospital board and Dorian ponders her next move.

Tara has some misgivings about Phil's new job offer on All My Children. Wally and Devon finally make it to the altar but Mark and Ellen call it quits. Brooke zeros in on Mark with busybody Erica right behind.

Looking at Stars

Niceness doesn't pay, at least for female actresses on daytime television. Who is it the fans warm up to? Rich, devious Iris (Beverlee McKinsey) on "Another World"; and dirty Lisa (Eileen Fulton) on "As the World Turns" to name two favorites. Now, joining their ranks is Robin Strasser, the longtime Dr. Christine Martin on "All My Children." In her juicy new role she's been taking a stab at well-rewarded wickedness on ABC's "One Life to Live" as "Rich, spoiled and conniving Dorian Lord."

After saying yes to appearances down at Busch Gardens in Williamsburg, Va., two guys and a gal changed their minds. Causing the crisis were Paul Williams, Kris Kristofferson and Rita Coolidge. But there's a happy ending, or rather a happy season's premiere because Gabe Kaplan, the creator and star of "Welcome Back, Kotter," who's also a competent stand-up comic, galloped southward from Brooklyn to the rescue.

Lee Remick, Lee Remick, Lee Remick. Yes, it's three times in less than a month that the well-bred lovely has co-starred in a big-money, made-for-TV miniseries or movie. Re-released last month was "Wheels," with Lee as the rich, neurotic wife venting self-pity and infidelity on Rock Hudson. This week she's the fictional heroine of "Torn Between Two Lovers" (Wednesday on CBS) and the fictionalized Kay Summersby in ABC's "Ike" miniseries (starting Thursday on ABC). Ike, of course, means the late Dwight Eisenhower and lacks the imprimatur of his surviving kin.

TV MAILBAG

SOAPER — What is the name of the actress who plays Eunice on TV? — Cal Hallsey, Provo, Utah.

C'm, Cal A mindreader I'm not. A wild guess would be you mean Eunice on "Soap." If so, Jennifer Salt is your woman.

GRANT'S TOMB? — Is Lee Grant dead? Also, I've heard she has a daughter in "Soap". Which character does she play? — Mrs. Bridie McAllister, Tacoma, Wash.

Lee Grant is very much alive, and was just seen on TV in "You Can't Go Home Again." As for her daughter, you've heard correctly. Dinah Manoff, alias Elaine Dallas, is Ms. Grant's daughter.

FAVORITE SON — Is John Denver really from Denver? I say no, but a friend insists that he is. Tell her she's wrong. — K. L. Fripp, Atlantic City, N.J.

You're wrong, friend. Denver was born in Rosewell, N.M. Denver is his adopted city.

SWOON!! — Can you tell me where to write that handsome hunk Erik Estrada? I never miss a Saturday night watching "ChiPs." He's heavenly. — Gail Deware, Thomaston, Ala.

You should try going out occasionally on a Saturday night. Too much swooning in front of your TV set is no good for your love life. But if you insist. Write The Incredible Hunk at MGM, Culver City, CA. 90230.

SWEET 17 — How old was Sandra Dee when she first played Gidget, and how old is she now? The reason I ask is I was named after her after the movie came out. — Sandra Lockner, Santa Barbara, Calif.

At least they didn't name you Gidget. Sandra first surfed across the screen at age 17. That was in 1959, making her 39, and you somewhere in the neighborhood of 20.

HEAD SHOP — I would love to become a fashion designer and have long been a fan of Edith Head, the great movie designer. Would it be possible for me to write to her? Do you have an address? — Karen Grasso, Fargo, N.D.

Ms. Head maintains an office at Universal Studios. You can try writing her there. The address is Universal City, CA. 91608.

PALOOKA — Can you go back to 1934 for a moment and give me the cast of the movie "Palooka," based on the comic strip about Joe Palooka? Jimmy Durante was the star. — Tim Tuite, New Haven, Conn.

Looking down memory lane I see Stu Erwin, Robert Armstrong, Lupe Velez, Marjorie Rambeau, William Cagney (yup, Jimmy's brother), Marie Carlisle and Thelma Todd.

INDIAN GIVER — I recently saw "The Trial of Billy Jack" on TV. There was an actress named Sasheen Littlefeather in it. Is my memory correct — wasn't she the woman who turned down Marlo Brando's Oscar? — Mrs. R. Jobson, Aamarillo, Texas.

SAME PLOT — In watching a recent "Charlie's Angels," I swear I saw the story before but on a different series. The plot was the same. Is this deja vu or bad hearing and seeing? — O. R., Scottsdale, Ariz.

A. It is not unusual for a plot to be repeated on a different program, particularly if the show sets a trend. Many writers prepare scripts for several shows and if a plot goes well on one program, it's used again with or without revisions. Originality is not a hallmark in Hollywood.

WHAT NAME? — In watching "Dallas," I remember a series in the late 1950s starring Jim Davis. It was about some firemen. What was the name of the show? — G. V. Argyle, Missouri.

A. The show was called "Rescue 8" and it aired during 1958. Davis played a paramedic.

HENRY'S ADDRESS — Would you please give me Henry Winkler's address? — M. J., Santa Rosa, Calif.

A. I would suggest you write to Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90038.

Peter Ustinov Tours Leningrad

Peter Ustinov gives a guided tour of Leningrad, one of his favorite cities, Wednesday, May 2, at 8:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

A city of canals, bridges and imposing stone architecture, Leningrad was founed in 1703 by Peter the Great as a showplace, "a window looking on Europe." And for Peter Ustinov, an experienced navigator in the backwaters of Russian history, politics and art, the city is also the perfect "window onto Russia."

The tourist meets history at the turn of every corner: from the grand vistas of the city's principal thoroughfare, the Nevsky Prospekt, to the heroic proportions of the domed cathedral of St. Isaac, Leningrad is a place with a colorful past. The two "towering figures" — Peter the Great and Lenin — who placed their indelible stamps on the city head a list of distinguished residents that includes Dostoevsky, Pushkin, Nijinsky, and Rimsky-Korsakoff.

But Ustinov doesn't spend the entire show contemplating the glories of the past: he is seen cheering in the stands at a soccer game; he attends a Russian production of one of his own plays; and he wanders through the bustling streets, mingling with the people.

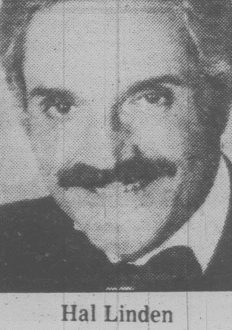
Spotlight on Stars

By RUTH THOMPSON



Hal Linden

Hal Linden, whose musical special a couple of weeks ago detailed the 20-year climb before he became an "overnight success" on Broadway in "The Rothschilds" and a year later a household word via the success of ABC's "Barney Miller," was saying that fame brings as many problems as it solves. Then — as if on cue — the phone range and proved his point.

It was Hal's manager updating him on potential bookings for the nightclub act he does when his series is on hiatus (meaning from now through mid-August).

Hal furrowed his widset eyebrows, said a weak "maybe," then decided, "Check it out to see if it's right." Resuming the interview he explained that on the way up — particularly for a family man like himself with four children. — "You take every job you can get. It would have been a crime to turn one down. Now I can't get used to saying, 'no.' But I have to make decisions."

His new criterion: "Go only into a spot that draws the big acts . . . like Buddy Hackett. Avoid any place where the old acts go to die."

And speaking of specials, that's what's giving nifty little Pam Dawber of the great big voice a shot at proving she's OK as herself and not just as Mork's pal Mindy. After she fared fine on Oscar night with Perry Como, Chevy Chase has announced she'll guest-star on his upcoming NBC "National Humor Test."

How often does an actor these days get to sing "Home, Sweet Home"? Not often, according to David Niven. He has a couple of posh pads in Europe (The Riviera for summers, Switzerland for winters). But: "To support two homes means you have to keep working, and movie and television production today is scattered all over the world."

Luckily for this master of suavity, though he hasn't defined it, he appears to be as enthusiastic a "gypsy" as he is a homebody.

Filming the six-hour ministeries "A Man Called Intrepid" (due next week on NBC) called for months of location work in Canada and England. His previous movie stop was Asia.

Compact Home for Small Family

Here's a three-bedroom design which will appeal to the young family in search of a first home, or even the mature couple wanting a compact, easy-to-maintain retirement home.

The vertical cedar siding of the exterior is complemented by the horizontal siding trim below the roof line, the cedar deck and the shake roof. The rustic yet contemporary appearance of the cedar harmonizes beautifully with the foliage on your property and is practically maintenance-free.

The deck over the carport may be covered, if desired, by extending the roof line. Steps lead down from the deck to the grade level at the rear and carport beneath.

The practical layout of the floor plan places the entertainment and family areas at the front of the home away from the three bedrooms which overlook the rear for privacy and solitude. A guest closet is located in the reception foyer which leads to the expansive living room. Its corner fireplace with cantilevered slate hearth captures the immediate attention of guests upon entering. The living room is large and offers two full walls for convivial furniture groupings.

Separated from the foyer by a space-saving pocket door, the formal dining room opens onto the front of the deck via sliding glass doors and is adjacent to the kitchen for the hostess' convenience. The recessed wall at one end is ideal for a custom shelf/buffet unit to display treasured china and silverware. A well-planned U-shape cupboard/counter configuration in the kitchen provides for efficient food preparation. With two windows in the kitchen/breakfast nook area, brilliant sunshine can stream in throughout the day from the double exposures.

The master bedroom has a generous wardrobe and a two-piece ensuite for privacy. Two children's bedrooms also offer good storage space and window placement. The large family bath has a built-in vanity counter sink arrangement and a linen closet for towels. Generous windows overlook the rear of the property to provide excellent natural lighting from this exposure.

Double hallway closets situated near the bedrooms provide storage space for extra bed linens. A side entry on the main floor to the deck eliminates the heavy traffic flow at the front entrance and is conveniently located adjacent to the kitchen.

A separate coat closet at this exit accommodates all the family outerwear for easy and handy storage.

The laundry area with washer/dryer connections is located in the unfinished full basement which may be developed later into a recreation area or an additional bedroom or a workshop/hobby space. Roughed-in plumbing for a three-piece bath and a roughed-in fireplace opening are also provided. The simplicity and natural attractiveness of this comfortable bungalow make it an ideal home which will be easy to maintain and a delight to decorate.

Plans for Design No. 75-1366 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $70 for the first set and $10 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $100 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $125.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs magazine, Series 40, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 320 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.50 ($2 plus 50 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items, please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, c/o Victoria Press, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Alan Carter of Willowdale writes about an item which, he says, he will never be able to afford in the original but he has a nice collection of reproductions and a wealth of knowledge picked up along the way. His subject is old maps — really old maps of the kind found only in the better museums. From what he says I suspect that Mr. Carter is really a collector of misinformation and maps made by early explorers are rich with examples.

I never understood, until Mr. Carter explained it to me why Amerigo Vespucci should have his name attached to a continent which so clearly belongs to Columbus. The facts, it appears, are simple. Columbus died in 1506 convinced to the last that what he had discovered was the east coast of Asia. He insisted that at one time he had been within 19 sailing days of the River Ganges before being forced to turn back. Vespucci, who crossed the Atlantic in 1497 never doubted that what he found there was an entirely new world. He was right. Columbus was wrong: Cartographers as early as 1507 were united in giving Amerigo the credit.

Mrs. Adrian of Victoria asks about the origin of the word 'sampler' — what is it a sample of?

It is precisely what it says — a sample sheet of different kinds of stitches which every young girl had to master in preparation for one of the universal chores of womanhood. The sampler also provided her prospective husband with a sample of his betrothed's skill with the needle and additional proof that she knew her alphabet and could spell. It was therefore truly a sample in more ways than one.

This week's column is developing into a collection of trivia. For example I discovered in response to a question from F. W. Child of St. Catharines that the great John James Audubon was the illegitimate son of a sailor and a Creole chambermaid from Haiti where he was born in 1785. Various attempts to make a businessman out of him failed to blunt the edge of his life's ambition — the production of a life-size, full color picture of every known American bird complete with appropriate floral background. Nothing was allowed to stand in his way. One setback which would have stopped most of us in our tracks, was the destruction by rats of 200 of his original drawings. It took him three years to do them all over again.

Audubon was something less than a bird lover and he cheerfully shot them down until his arms ached to obtain perfect specimens for his drawings.

The finished work, Birds of America consists of 435 individual plates, double elephant folio size issued in 87 parts. Any one of those plates today would fetch some thousands of dollars.

A couple of years ago I wrote something about Kaarl Parn of 12 Delroy Dr., Toronto, M8Y 1M7. He is a dedicated collector of old bus and streetcar tickets. Kind readers sent interesting specimens to him from all over the country. Now he writes: "I wonder if any of your readers have any information about the following companies for which I have never been able to obtain tickets — Saanich Municipal Bus, Nelson Street Railway, Brewster Transportation, Checker Stage Service, Brandon Municipal Railway, Niagara, Welland & Lake Erie Railway, Mount Hamilton Bus Co., Red Bus Line, Toronto, Woodstock, Thames Valley & Ingersoll Railway, Yarmouth Street Ry and Moncton Tramways."

Readers letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, c/o your newspaper, R.R. #1, Lowbanks, Ontario, N0A 1K0.

CHRISTINE DeLISLE stars as a California Beach Patrol police officer who is marked for murder in Beach Patrol, The ABC Monday Night Movie Double Feature," airing Monday, April 30, at 8 p.m. on Channel 4.

How Did the Book Festival Affect You?

The National Book Festival, which was celebrated across the country during the first week of April, was the largest public event ever sponsored by the Canada Council. Aimed at boosting grass roots interest in Canadian books, it's to become an annual event.

Though most of the activity focussed on making our writers better known in their own communities, there were a few promotional brainwaves that broke new ground:

- In Ucluelet, a kite-flying contest with all kites picturing a Canlit character or theme.
- In Regina, the first annual conference of native authors and publishing industry representatives.
- In Toronto, the "First Toronto Festival of Storytelling" and "Canada's largest autographing party," with over 25 authors on hand to sign their books.
- In Ottawa, a "bus blitz" — anyone caught reading on an Ottawa bus was given a free Canadian book.
- In St. John's, Nfld., an idea to bear fruit in early May. A restored schooner (the Norma and Gladys) will make a six-week voyage to Toronto with 15 stops en route. At each, the public will be invited on board to view an exhibition of Canadian books.

Festival co-ordinator Randall Ware claims the Council received so much local co-operation, it was able to put on a "five million dollar festival for less than a million."

How did the Festival affect you? I'd like to hear your comments, pro or con, if you care to send them to me in care of this newspaper.

It's ever onward and upward for Charles Templeton. His second novel, Act of God, is featured as a "Bantam Super Release" for April with a first printing of 625,000 copies. The book has already sold 60,000 in hardcover as a Literary Guild feature selection in the U.S. What next? A new novel, of course, which Templeton's working n now.

CBC-TV marked the Easter season with its "blockbuster presentation of the year:" Louis Riel, starring Christopher Plummer, Leslie Nielsen, William Shatner and other celebrated Canadian exports who were imported home again for this special occasion. Their timing coincided neatly with a new book by Thomas Flanagan, the political scientist at the University of Calgary who edited The Diaries of Louis Riel. His new book is titled Louis 'David' Riel (University of Toronto Press, $15; it's an interpretive study of Riel's religious thinking supported by a biographical framework.

Flanagan's thesis is that Riel was no isolated madman whose religious ideas were only symptoms of insanity. Rather, he was a genuine religious leader who conformed to a well-established, worldwide, sociological pattern. Like the Mahdi of the Sudan or the Black Muslims of the United States, Riel was a "millenarian," defined by Flanagan as one who believes in salvation by means of an "anticipated period of perfect happiness on earth." (Flanagan's insights here, it should be pointed out, were anticipated by Margaret Laurence in her very fine essay The Poem and the Spear, in her book Heart of a Stranger.)

"On all continents," writes Flanagan, "native populations have created new religions promising millenarian deliverance from colonial domination. . . . Faced with the annihilation of his people's way of life, (Riel) tried to create a new identity, a new life, and a new future. His insanity — if it may be called that, was a message of hope. Common conceptions of what is normal may suffice for normal times, but they do not encompass the range of human responses to adversity. We need a broader view of sanity to comprehend the actions of men in dark times."

On the other hand, for all his creativity in the face of impossible situations, Riel was not a champion of individual freedom. Seeking freedom for the metis as a people was as far as his liberalism went. The real truth, Flanagan is careful to remind us, is that Riel's political philosophy "was so far to the right that it had no place on the Canadian political spectrum, even in its own day."

Louis 'David' Riel draws on new source material acquired by the Provincial Archives of Manitoba in 1966, including a notebook of poetry composed during Riel's early years in Montreal. Flanagan's text is divided by sub-headings for easy accessibility and supplemented with footnotes and an index. His style is brisk, readable and direct.

These virtues notwithstanding, Louis 'David' Riel is not a book for the general reader. It's a study of one aspect of a man's life which is essential to an understanding of the whole. For a glimpse of that whole, the reader is referred to Rudy Weibe's novel The Scorched-Wood People.

The Essential Henry Miller

RALPH B. SIPPER

"I have no money, no resources, no hopes. I am the happiest man alive." These lines from Tropic of Cancer — exuberant, contradictory, outrageous — identify the singular character of Henry Miller, still larger than life in his 87th year and the grudgingly accepting subject of this comprehensive biography.

Having received only minimal cooperation from Miller and eschewing or being denied the help of his family and surviving friends, Jay Martin moled his way through 100,000 pages of manuscripts and letters buried in institutional or private collections scattered throughout the U.S. to bring this 560-page opus out into the light. Considering the lonely digging he had to do, it is a first-rate job of research and organization.

While previous books on Miller by Alfred Perles, Anais Nin, Lawrence Durrell and others have dealt with those short periods during which his friends knew him, Martin's account follows Miller from Brooklyn to Paris to Big Sur to Pacific Palisades, where he lives today. It is thorough and balanced. However, he made one unfortunate choice in the presentation of his materials: Attempting to breathe life into the book, Martin adopted the voice and tone of Miller's own narrator of his autobiographical romances.

"I wanted to create a style which could drive beneath and beyond the facade of Miller's career into the chambers of his heart and corridors of his imagination," says Martin in his preface. He does not bring it off.

As Kenneth Rexroth has noted about Miller's style: "(It) is spontaneous and uncontrolled on principle, but the control is in the principle, in the intention." It is also custom-created and will not fit anyone else.

Competing with Miller's, as it were, Martin's prose becomes excessive. He forces images ("His imagination was stuffed with the paper wadding of his notes"), resorts to stilted phrases ("slough of despond"), lapses into accidental oxymoron ("blazing snowstorm") and ends up with ridiculous conclusions ("Henry was having trouble with his eyes ... as if he could not bear to see how gray his future looked").

The irony is that Martin is a more than competent writer when he sticks to his role as biographer and leaves out the pyrotechnics. The story of Miller's life needs no jazzing up, chugging along nicely enough on its own energy.

It is a life that began badly and continued so for many years. Miller grew up in a bourgeois setting, dominated by a nagging, perfection-demanding mother whom he could never please. Fancying himself an artist from early on, he was in constant conflict with his family over his bohemian life-style. As the years slid by, he drifted in a stultifying circle of dreary jobs, unemployment and sinecures. The one position he could abide was with Western Union, where upon application for a messenger's job he found himself hired as personnel manager.

Here the free easiness of his manner, along with an honesty derived from a genuine I-don't-care-what-happens attitude, made it easy for people to be themselves with him. His existence was at least bearable for a while.

Then one night in a dime-a-dance joint he met June Mansfield, probably the most important woman in his life, who was to become the second of his five wives. Miller tended to adore women when he met them and was never happier than when he had found a new inamorata.

Sultry June was evidently a seductress and liar of epic proportions. Before long she had him involved in elaborate con games designed to charm dough out of her wealthy admirers. Some of Miller's earliest imaginative writing took the form of love letters composed in June's behalf to one of her suckers. But eventually her instability wore him down.

In 1930, at the end of his emotional rope, Miller left America, where he always felt alien, and moved to Paris. Immediately he began to flourish. He much preferred the earthier European ambience to the sterile, coldly realistic society at home. With the exception of Walt Whitman, himself a rebel, the writers Miller most admired were European. For the first time he found outlets for his prodigious energies. He read omnivorously, discussed philosophy and art with a widening circle of friends, carried on with a changing cast of women. Above all, he batted out page after page of the Paris books which would establish his literary reputation. Now in his forties, he had found not only himself but his unique voice. In those days, as someone said, his friends walked in his shadow and even his shadow was warm.

Penniless most of the time, he turned this real problem into a plus with varied resourcefulness. At one point he issued a form letter to 14 acquaintances, inviting himself to take a specific meal with each of them during the week.

Money was always a central conflict. He spent much of his time scrambling for subsistence amounts. On the rare occasions he was flush, as when his French publisher paid him $100,000 worth of back royalties after the war, he flung it away.

With the onset of the Second World War, Miller returned to America, still broke but with an enviable critical following. There was talk of a Nobel Prize. He settled in Big Sur and became a passionate and accomplished painter, turning out watercolors by the hundred. In 1961, with the censorship battle over Tropic of Cancer won, he was world-famous.

Martin has meticulously documented all this and much more. He has caught the spirit of Miller's work without straining for an all-inclusive critical theory. He has accomplished what any literary biographer might wish for — to illuminate the work through an understanding of the man.

Vanita and Kautchik . . . one becomes two

Mothers and Children

By STEPHEN HUME

Frederick Leboyer, who shattered our conventions on birth with his revolutionary book, Birth Without Violence, and whose poetic book on infant massage, Loving Hands, was like a breath of fresh air in the stuffy world of western child-rearing, has devoted his third book to yoga for pregnant women.

Inner Beauty, Inner Light may be his most popular book to date. It is both a book of yoga instruction and a lifestyle guide that can be enjoyed without yoga lessons.

The first chapter contains a warning: "A teacher is essential . . . unless this is properly understood you may run into disaster."

For many of the advanced yoga postures described in the book, the warning is completely accurate. But the book would probably have its uses whether one looked for a teacher or not.

Leboyer is foolish when he says: "Since Yoga affects your whole being, your teacher must be aware of both the physical and the mental changes that are bound to take place. He ought to know the mind as well as the joints, the muscles and the bones. Not only skilled in postures, he ought to be a man of high virtue and great moral qualities..."

The advice is sound, but did Leboyer forget that there are female yoga teachers?

Leboyer's attractive book, like its predecessors, is produced with care. Among Leboyer's photographs of Vanita, the daughter of yoga master B.K.S. Iyenger, are other striking photographs — wet footprints on concrete, bamboo shoots and a painting of a laughing monk scratching the head of a tiger.

Leboyer used Vanita to illustrate breathing techniques and various yoga postures, which she continued to do into her ninth month of pregnancy. At the end of the book Leboyer includes photos of the boy she had, Kautchik, and there is this commentary:

"When was that?

"A year ago!

"It seems it was yesterday that Kautchik was born.

"Love is born.

"So is sorrow."

The Recycled Hero

By PAUL BENNETT

The hero of Raise the Titanic, a moderately-successful thriller-adventure book a couple of years ago, has himself been recycled by author Clive Cussler in his second work in the genre, a doomsday scenario called Vixen 03.

The year is 1988, and Dirk Pitt, special-projects director for the U.S. Underwater and Marine Agency, stumbles across the remains of a long-lost Boeing C-97 Stratocruiser in a lake in the Rocky Mountains of Colorado.

The crashed plane, thought to have been lost in the Pacific while en route to a remote biological warfare testing island, contains a deadly cargo of a bacillus organism which kills instantly and keeps on killing for 300 years.

The organism wipes out those testing it in 1954 and leads then-president Eisenhower to close and obscure the files on the missing aircraft, since it is believed to be out of harm's way.

However, Pitt's dogged persistence leads to the discovery of the shells — and the frightening fact that four of them are missing.

Here the story takes a turn to South Africa, in 1988 on the verge of being totally cut off from the rest of white civilization. The defence minister hatches a weird plot called Operation Wild Rose which involves an attack by South African regulars disguised as freedom fighters, using an old U.S. destroyer to fire shells on none other than Washington, D.C.

By accident or design, the four shells containing the deadly bacillus are among those to be fired on the U.S. capital.

Pitt, aided by a variety of cohorts — among them the U.S.-born leader of the guerrilla movement — fights to the end in a startling climax to a book which is, on the whole, entirely credible.

Since he's been the subject of four books already, it will not be giving the game away to say that our hero lives on to fight another day — but only just.

A Village Transformed

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

For many Westerners, and perhaps particularly for those on the Pacific coast of this continent, Japan is synonymous with spectrally beautiful mountains and rice fields, delicately vibrant paintings and poems, and tantalizingly brief nuggets of wisdom breathed to us through the centuries by zen priests and samurai.

For others, reared where reality makes mock of any dream of peace, Japan might mean only an intensification of our common hell: people levered forcefully into the world's fastest trains, children in polluted Tokyo wearing face masks and oxygen tanks, student rioters uniformed in helmets and vests battling troops for control of some momentarily important turf.

Undoubtedly both of these Japans exist. But so does another Japan, the extent and solidity of which is revealed in Shinohata: Portrait of a Japanese Village.

Ronald Dore has been visiting Shinohata, some 100 miles from Tokyo, for 20 years. An English sociologist, Dore was at first primarily interested in the land reforms which reorganized Japanese agricultural production in the mid-fifties. Gradually, though, his interest and vision widened to include the whole fabric of life in Shinohata village; thus we are offered here the findings of a man whose obvious professional skills are buttressed by a strong affection for the land and people he lived with. Together these qualities lend this work a depth rarely found when one culture is moved to comment on another.

* * *

Like the rest of the world, Shinohata has for some years — particularly since the end of the Second World War — been engaged in a process of marked change.

Although vaguely egalitarian and socialist ideas had been moving through Japan for some decades previous, it was only with the country's defeat and occupation by the Americans that rigorous and practical measures were taken to reform Japanese society.

Most obviously, as Dore describes the physical setting of Shinohata itself, one can suffer the "momentary illusion that it is an American town one was leaving."

One's view of Shinohata, then, will depend on one's opinion of the American taste in commercial architecture!

What can't be denied is the obvious rise in the standard of living of the inhabitants of Shinohata: indoor plumbing, television sets and money for holidays are, if not in everyone's immediate grasp, well within reach. And that is so because of the American-sponsored reforms which redistributed rice land to every farmer in the village and ensured that no man or family was solely dependent on a landlord for their survival.

With those reforms came the introduction of a solid price economy that tied Shinohata, along with the rest of Japan, firmly into the capitalist system of marketing and production. Chemical fertilizers, pesticides and machinery transformed rice production in the village — to the extent that, like so many small-town Americans before them, many if not most inhabitants of Shinohata have gradually drifted away from a strictly land-based economy into fields of work that can only be found in the larger towns and cities.

Before the land reforms, the Japanese civil code was revised in 1947 and set the social stage for the transformation of village life.

As Dore points out, "The principle implicity asserted by this change was . . . that the tie between husband and wife should be deemed more important than the tie between a man and his parents."

Thus the rise in the Shinohata standard of living was accompanied by a profound weakening of ancient village social ties, and Dore's most revealing observations and comments — and those of the villagers whose voices he recorded — detail the dissolution of those ties. Whether new forms of bonding and communication have yet effectively replaced the old ties — or whether, indeed, they ever can — is a very problematic point which Dore, wisely enough, chooses not to discuss.

So an air of wistfulness, falling almost into bemusement at times, permeates the atmosphere of this book — and of Shinohata itself. Its inhabitants are groping — proudly, angrily, amusedly — towards a new understanding of their lives. In that struggle they seem to share more now with the rest of the world than they've ever shared before. To read this book is to read — in part, at least — ourselves.

Pick your books ahead of time

It distresses me that so few people give a thought to books when they're planning a vacation. Everything that will possibly be needed on the trip is carefully listed, collected and stowed — everything but reading matter. And when the oversight is realized a last-minute purchase of a couple of paperbacks is made at an airport shop. And that's that.

Chances are that the books purchased will be a couple of light, trashy things that can be skimmed through and left on the plane. During the vacation another throwaway may be bought to be used as a beach accessory or as something to kill time until the nightly sleeping pill takes effect.

This is surface reading. Not a line will sink in. And when you challenge the returned travellers to name one title they have read, the exhausted, jet-lagged souls will excuse their forgetfulness by pleading that the books were not memorable and that they went away to relax and get a tan — and would you like to see their slides.

Part of the problem is the air age: a general deterioration in holiday reading habits is a portion of the price we pay for the dubious advantages of new technology. Speed induces tension and tension precludes the savoring of intellectual stimulation. Frenetic holidaymakers who have learned how to relax are, it seems, easily seduced by junk: junk souvenirs, junk food and junk books.

The situation is not new, it has been with us for as long as overseas travel has been available to the masses. But I'm not referring to the faceless masses; I'm referring to the normally discriminating reader who, at holiday-time, jettisons sound reading patterns along with his diet and other good resolutions. That is comparatively new.

Not all that long ago, when the Cunard people used to advertise that "getting there is half the fun", the traveller would look upon the choice of books as the only pleasant thing associated with the onerous preparations for travel. The final choices, perhaps half-a-dozen books, would be slipped at the last moment into a sparsely packed 'wanted on voyage' suitcase, and they would be the first articles to be unpacked. The books would be read at intervals during the holiday and the same books would be brought home, with perhaps the odd addition.

This excellent ritual has been undermined by the advent of masses of so-called best-sellers and the common belief that vacations are a justifiable time to escape from everything, including one's senses.

The truth is that people have been conned by manipulating publishers, who got the idea from manipulating corn-flake manufacturers, that giant sales represent quality and that the correct thing to do is to read what everyone else is reading. The sorrowful thing is that they have succeeded beyond their wildest dreams and that a vast section of the public has surrendered the great pleasure of book-choosing to a handful of cynical, highly-paid marketing experts.

Vacation-time is not the moment to play into the hands of the hucksters; it is precisely the time to ignore their blandishments. And the way to do this is to revert to the system practised when travel was leisurely and holidays were used to rest the body and feed the mind.

I am not suggesting that you should walk the beaches of Hawaii or Acapulco carrying a collection of sermons by some 18th century divine, exquisitely bound in fine-tooled leather. You don't even have to pack a hardcover book if you don't want to; paperbacks are fine and, if anything, more practical. But remember, you must do your shopping at a bookstore ahead of time because few airport shops are geared to cater to the discriminating reader.

Hardcover or not, slim, easily portable books that can be slipped into pocket or purse are the handiest, and fortunately the range of quality paperbacks now available contains some of the finest literature ever written.

Now, what manner of books are we looking for? The choice has to be personal, but perhaps I can make a few general suggestions. Because a vacation is essentially a physical break with routine I find it a golden opportunity to change the normal reading pattern as well and to do this means resisting the temptation to choose a book that coincides with your current interests.

We're looking for something relaxing, with an away-from-it-all flavor, and I can think of nothing better than essays, diaries, letters, or short stories. Such collections can be read at odd intervals and still provide completeness, and intense concentration is not required.

If we interpret the word essays loosely — and we're on holiday, so why not? — we can extend the field beyond the great essayists like Lamb, Hazlitt, Belloc and Orwell and make it also include Plato's Dialogues and Cicero's Orations. Stretching it a bit further we might include some of the books in the 'Essential' series: The Essential Plotinus, or Rousseau, Pascal, Hume, etc. And don't forget Thoreau's Walden and the Essay on Civil Disobedience.

The diaries of Pepys, Evelyn, and Fanny Burney are a constant source of delight but if you want something different try The Siren Years, Canadian diplomat Charles Ritchie's cultured and evocative diary account of Second World War London.

Good short stories, one of the most difficult of the art forms, make ideal holiday reading. The choice of quality work, where each story is a little masterpiece, is narrow and would include masters like Maupassant, Poe, Maugham and Katherine Mansfield. A newcomer acquaintance you should make is Penelope Lively. Her Nothing Missing but the Samovar and Other Stories (Heinemann) is well worth attention. Unfortunately, this book is not yet in paperback.

There's nothing like humor to make one forget everyday cares and for this one still cannot better the work of Dickens, Twain and Leacock. In this category you might, with profit, give a thought to the polished writing of the wickedly irreverent Aubrey Menen.

History, biography, war, or any one of a dozen other categories are fine if you insist, but I find them inappropriate for holiday reading. Even novels can prove burdensome if your attention span is limited. But if you do decide to settle for a novel then do yourself a favor by scorning some of the trashy stuff that passes today as good fiction and re-discover an English, French or Russian classic, or go to the early Hemingway, anything by Orwell, Drabble or Lessing, or any one of the select group of authors whose work will live.

A change in reading patterns can open up new mental horizons and the book you read may conceivably turn out to be the most memorable part of your holiday, and that is the reason I have emphasized quality. I guess the point I have tried to get across, using vacation-time as an excuse, is that buying throwaway trash merely encourages publishers to churn out more of the same, and trees are far too valuable to squander on junk.

One Man's Plodding Spiritual Odyssey

By JULIAN REID

In his mid-thirties, Robert C. Casselman found himself confronting a crisis of faith. "I had a problem" he writes, "and I think it was not mine alone. Simply stated, it was this: Is there something there to believe?"

Continuum is the chronicle of Casselman's quest for an answer to that world-shaking question. "I wrote this book," he explains, "for others who have not yet found the assurances they would like to have as they try to cope with the problems of living. It tells, as plainly as I can tell it, how I got from where I was — an uncomfortable, churchgoing near agnostic — to where I am today — a deep believer in a hereafter and in something I can readily call God."

The great strength of this honest if rather plodding account of one man's spiritual odyssey is that its author is far from exceptional. Like so many of us, he was raised in a believing household, but, try as he would, found himself unable to work up any real faith in the dogmas preached at him from the pulpit. He was burdened with an "analytical, technical mind" of the sort which "felt it had to have a little scientific proof before it was about to believe anything." And, eventually, he turned despairingly away from his church, determining to seek God somewhere outside the fuzzy dogmatism of its preachments.

Casselman's book is a step-by-step chronicle of the various stages in his long quest and what he learned from each of them. He turned first to mysticism, which seemed too headily nebulous a brew; then to psychology; then physics; and then at last to parapsychology, which proved "the turning point" in his pilgrimage from skepticism to belief. Next came occultism, and the murky waters of the psychic — areas he had always shied uncomfortably away from, until now. And, in the end, he was led to his own syncretic conception of the afterlife and of the Divinity underlying it. "I could wish for more," he confesses with characteristic frankness, "but this is all I can know with the certainty I need."

This modern-day Pilgrim's Progress lacks both fire and inspiration — a lack, paradoxically, which is also its greatest asset. For Casselman, an intelligent but not exceptionally brilliant mixture of skeptic and seeker, is in his fashion a kind of North American everyman. As he himself shrewdly recognizes, there are innumerable others like him: reluctant but uncompromising pragmatists who find themselves troubled by a nagging "will to find a faith," but perennially unable to settle on a way. Any such person who happens on Continuum will find it an inspirational book that is reassuringly frank and down-to-earth, refreshingly free of the time-wearied cliches of sentimental inspirationalism.

By contrast, Ian Currie's You Cannot Die will appeal to a somewhat different group of readers — those already secure enough in the realm of the spiritual not to recoil involuntarily at their first glimpse of its opening sentence: "Within man's physical body dwells his astral body — the true 'self' which will survive physical death." This brisk assertion launches Currie into a comprehensive and up-to-date overview, bolstered with extensive first- and second-hand testimonies, of all we currently know or can reasonably surmise on empirical grounds regarding human immortality and the nature of the afterlife.

The reluctant skeptic, who might like to believe but finds it distressingly difficult, would be better advised to turn elsewhere — perhaps to Nils O. Jacobson's excellent Life Without Death?, which covers much the same ground without taking nearly as much for granted. And even the budding believer — fresh, perhaps, from Raymond Moody's Life After Life — might well find that Jacobson has the edge over Currie in his treatment of such basic topics as apparitions, hauntings, out-of-the-body experiences, and deathbed visions in general.

In its last three chapters, however, which deal with possession, reincarnation, and mediumistic communications "from beyond the grave," You Cannot Die finally comes into its own. Here Currie's coverage is admirable, adding up to a persuasive overview of the whole broad panorama of the afterlife, at least insofar as we can glimpse it from our own narrowly mortal perspective. And, significantly, this picture agrees in almost all its essentials with the one sketched in Continuum — with the noteworthy exception that Currie (on the basis, incidentally, of quite solid evidence) is a wholehearted believer in reincarnation, something Casselman simply cannot stomach.

What both books have in common is an undogmatic, essentially empirical approach to matters of faith. They differ somewhat in their starting points, but are otherwise fundamentally in accord. Together, they indicate that there is indeed a rationally defensible faith, founded on copious if sometimes esoteric evidence, open to any modern-day skeptic who, like Robert Casselman, is willing to embark on the search for it with a genuinely open mind — and who is not afraid, when the situation warrants, to take the plunge and actively believe in whatever he finds.

Sensuous Ballet Returns

The sensuous and vibrant Frankie and Johnny, the first American ballet, comes to Channel 9 Sunday, April 29, at 4 p.m. the half-hour special recreates the earthy, American spirit of the ballet's original performance in 1938.

Frankie and Johnny premiered in Chicago 41 years ago to a shocked and flabbergasted audience. It has since been recognized as one of the most significant ballets of its day, the forerunner of the burgeoning American genre in dance.

The television rendition of Frankie and Johnny is choreographed by Ruth Page and Bentley Stone, the original principals of the ballet. Cynthia Ann Roses and Gregory Begley now dance the story of Frankie, a woman of the streets, and Johnny, her pimp, who were lovers sworn to be true to each other, until, as the ballad goes, "he done her wrong" by dallying with Miss Nellie Bly.

During its premiere tour, the ballet was steeped in controversy. Some critics condemned the production as vulgar; others awarded mild praise for the productions fresh and amusing approach. Still, Frankie and Johnny was banned in cities like Boston and throughout Canada for alleged "religious reasons". It was not until the early '50s, when Ruth Page and Bentley Stone took Frankie and Johnny to Paris, that the ballet drew consistent enthusiasm from audiences (even then, initially, certain production aspects struck dischord with Parisian critics).
